Big Synthetic Plants to Cut U. S. Rubber Shortages

400-Million-Dollar Program to Meet Two-Thirds of Normal Needs

Vital for War

A program for making 400,000 tons of synthetic rubber a year—about two-thirds of the Nation's normal demand—was announced yesterday by Federal Loan Administrator Jesse Jones.

The huge project, which Jones estimated would cost about 400 million dollars, is designed to meet all military requirements as well as those of civilians, presumably including tires, but "at reduced levels," Jones said.

Since the maximum rate is expected to be achieved by the middle of 1943, it appeared that the present tire "famine" would be largely alleviated in 18 months, even without a resumption of shipments from the Far East. Jones warned, however that in the meantime it would be necessary to conserve all rubber and tires.

Oil Companies to Do Job

As announced, the program is more than three times as large as that recently called for by the Supply Priorities and Allocations Board, which asked construction of plants to make the Nation's annual capacity 120,000 tons a year. Plants now under construction would supply only 60,000 tons a year and the country's actual capacity at the moment is far less than that.

Jones disclosed that the project would be undertaken by the country's major rubber, oil and chemical companies, who will pool their patents and processes. He said that he was assured that sufficient raw materials—primarily oil from which the synthetic rubber is made—are available to manufacture the product "to any reasonable extent."

The industries involved in the expansion plan may put up their own money to do it, the loan administrator said, but the Government is prepared to defray all the cost if necessary.

600,000 Tons on Hand

The country's normal consumption of rubber, OPM figures disclosed, is about 600,000 tons a year. Last year, however, it reached a rate of more than 800,000 tons, not so much due to the addition of military demands, but because of the prosperous condition of civilian industry and the record flow of motor vehicles from the assembly lines.

Jones estimated that the Rubber Reserve Co., an RFC subsidiary, and the industry had "on hand and afloat" more than 600,000 tons of raw rubber, or about a year's normal supply. Most of this, Jones said, is "on hand" rather than still on the high seas. In addition, he

War Labor Board of 12 Set Up by Roosevelt

Davis Is Chairman; Defense Mediation Unit Disbanded

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt last night created a 12-man National War Labor Board, under the chairmanship of William H. Davis, formerly head of the National Defense Mediation Board, which was simultaneously disbanded and whose duties of settling labor controversies in war industries will be taken over by the new agency.

The new body was set up under an industry-labor agreement reached last December to ban strikes and submit all disputes to peaceful settlement. It is charged with providing mediation and, if necessary, arbitration of all labor disputes threatening work "which contributes to the effective prosecution of the war."

Mr. Roosevelt designated George W. Taylor, professor of economics at the University of Pennsylvania and well known as impartial arbitrator for various industries and many disputes in the past, as vice chairman of the board.

Other public members are Frank P. Graham, president of the University of North Carolina and formerly vice chairman of the Mediation Board, and Wayne L. Morse, Dean of the Oregon University Law School and recently chairman of the special fact-finding body that settled last year's threatened national

Mailbag Evidence 'a Plant,' Hill's Lawyer Shouts in Court

Woman Who Linked Fish Aide to Viereck Tells of Being Trailed

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

Counsel for George Hill, perjury defendant and a secretary of Representative Hamilton Fish, yesterday accused the prosecution of "planting" evidence in one of the mailbags the secretary put in his employer's storeroom after they had been spirited from a Nazi propaganda base here.

Former Representative John O'Connor, the defendant's lawyer, shouted the charge at the close of the fourth day of the trial as the eighteenth witness appeared against Hill. In earlier court proceedings:

1. Tall, blonde Phyllis Posivio Spielman, who told of Hill's telephone talks with the indicted German agent, George Sylvester Viereck, complained that she was harassed by a series of shadowers over the weekend.

2. Viereck, who is awaiting trial on charges of concealing his work for his Nazi employers, claimed and was given the protection of the American Constitution against being forced to an-

'Dates' Picked for Service Men At Birthday Ball Dance

A good time at the President's Birthday Ball was presumably assured five service men yesterday. Their dates were picked from a bevy of pretty post-debutantes, coeds and college grads who met in the Willard Hotel.

While this feature of the dance January 30 in Uline's Arena, Third and M Streets Northeast, is publicized as a strictly "blind date" affair, the names of the girls are out. Here they are: Mary Jane Ormond, of National Park Seminary; Gertrude Simmons and Marjorie Souby, both post-debs; Alice Miller, former George Washington University student, and Rene Honey, who is attending that college now.

Just to make sure the boys in uniform have partners alternate dates were named as follows: Suzanne Kappler, Coralee Arnold, Patty Hunt, Jean Connolly and Sybella Clayton.

Who will be their escorts? The lucky fellows don't know yet themselves. They can only hope they'll be included in the selections the ball committee yesterday said would be made in the near future.

House Approves D.C. Ban on Liquor Price Advertising

The House yesterday unanimously approved a measure banning price advertising for liquor retailers here, and establishing more stringent location restrictions, a move which would have the effect of decreasing the number of liquor stores in the District.

A bill to permit a rise in the small-loan interest rate here from 1 per cent a month, the present level, to 2 per cent, was turned down, 190 to 108.

Also defeated, by a 58-50 vote, was a measure to boost salaries of police and firemen here.

Don't Cut Service to Maintain Rent Profits, Landlords Told

Sharp warnings to Washington landlords against curbing services to tenants in order to "recoup" rent losses were issued last night by Rent Administrator Robert F. Cogswell.

Cogswell said his office yesterday was "besieged" with complaints from tenants that their heat had been turned off, telephone service stopped, hot-water supply cut or linens not supplied.

"Landlords," said the rent chief, "are hereby notified that they must not decrease any of the services to which their tenants are entitled in an attempt to recoup the difference in the rent they are now compelled to accept as compared to higher scales prior to January 2."

The rent-control law, Cogswell reminded, provides penalties of a $1000 fine, a year in jail or both for infractions of this type.

He held that to decrease services "is tantamount to increasing rent."

United Nations' Fliers Attacking From 50 Secret Fields in Borneo

By John R. Morris
United Press Staff Writer

Batavia, Jan. 12.—Allied air and naval forces, battling to beat back the Japanese invasion tide from the Netherlands East Indies, today had run up a 48-hour score of five Japanese warships damaged, four transports sunk or damaged, and 10 airplanes shot down in the Malaya area.

Throwing open a string of 50 secret air bases in Borneo, one of the few surprises sprung on the Japanese in this war, United States, Dutch and Australian air forces fanned out 700 miles northeast to the Philippines and 600 miles northwest to Singapore to engage the Japanese in air battles and blast their supply lines.

Meanwhile, Netherland's ground forces fought desperately to hold off Japanese sea-borne and parachute troops who landed Sunday on Tarakan Island, an oil center off northeast Borneo, and at three places in Minahassa, the northern finger of the island of Celebes. The only information reaching here was that the Dutch were putting up "strong resistance" and there was no indication that they were giving ground.

Japs Claim Two Footholds

The Tokyo radio quoted Japanese imperial headquarters as asserting that both Tarakan and the port of Menado in Celebes had been captured. It said Japan's aim was "to capture the naval and air bases of the enemy who have been hampering the activities of the Japanese vessels in the Philippines and British North Borneo.")

Today's communiques revealed that Dutch "and allied" planes had scored two bomb hits on a Japanese cruiser, a "near miss" on a destroyer and had shot down four Japanese planes in a terrific battle off Minahassa.

Dutch bombers at the same time bombed a Japanese cruiser and two transports at Tarakan, in the same zone where they had bombed two transports, shot down three airplanes and scored a "near miss" on a cruiser Sunday.

Intend to Scorch Earth

Supplementing this action, Dutch submarines had sunk two Japanese transports off eastern Malaya Sunday and Washington had announced that United States bombers hit a Japanese battleship and set it afire in Davao Gulf, off the Philippine island of Mindanao, from which the East Indies invaders are believed to have come.

It also was announced that Dutch planes shot down three Japanese

Aide Accuses Adm. Raeder Of Bungling Sub Campaign

By the Associated Press

Disease, disunity and military disaster stalked the once conquering legions of Adolf Hitler today and, barring surprises, seemed to be hastening the day of Hitlerism's ultimate defeat.

Hundreds of additional doctors and nurses were reported by the Berlin correspondent of a Swiss newspaper to have been rushed recently to the Eastern Front to combat a wave of vermin-spread typhus, both among the wavering troops in Russia and behind the lines in conquered countries.

German troops were reported engaged in a "battle against lice," the greatest carriers of typhus fever.

Dissension in Navy

Reliable sources in London declared that dissension in the Nazi high command—primarily a split over the reverses in Russia—now had spread to the navy with a sharp disagreement between Grand Admiral Erich Raeder and his submarine chief, Vice Admiral Karl Doenitz, over the way the Battle of the Atlantic is going.

This authority said Doenitz had openly charged his superior, Raeder, with responsibility for the miscarriage of submarine warfare.

The grand admiral was represented as having been specifically accused by his subaltern of:

Permitting the circulation of false information indicating a rate of sinkings of British and Allied ships much higher than the true one;

Telling the Nazis that new submarines were being built much faster than they were in fact;

Allowing the Gestapo and the Nazi S. S. Corps unjustly to arrest and otherwise impugn submarine men whose nervous condition at the end of a tour of duty sometimes led them into utterances which the Nazis distorted into sedition.

Demands S. S. Go

Doenitz, said this source, had served upon Raeder a flat demand that the Gestapo and S. S. be run out of submarine bases and ports and off the necks of naval men.

The London Star also quoted a Moscow broadcast that Field Marshal Gen. Wilhelm Keitel, chief of the Nazi high command, suddenly had been taken ill. The Keitel report has not been verified.

Berlin itself added a footnote to the chapter of European unrest with an announcemnt that all former officers of the Norwegian air force and navy had been ordered arrested because some 100 of their number had escaped to Britain to fight for liberation of Norway.

Homes of those who left were reported being burned and close rela-

Military 'G-Men' on Toes

Enemy Spy and Sabotage Ring Uncovered in U. S. Army

New Counter Intelligence Corps Traps Secret Agents by Their Handwriting

The Army disclosed last night that it had uncovered a secret organization within its ranks that was connected with the enemy and presumably engaged in espionage and sabotage.

Existence of the ring was discovered by military "G-men" of the Army's Counter Intelligence Corps, a newly formed arm of the service operating under G-2. Establishment of the new corps was revealed for the first time yesterday.

No details were given by the War Department as to the identity of those involved in the plot, its extent or whether its subversive work had achieved any success.

The Department said, however, that the organization was uncovered when Counter Intelligence Corps agents ran down some "highly inflammatory and insulting" anonymous communications written to high-ranking Army officials.

Identification was made by means of handwriting analysis, it was said, in which the unsigned notes were compared with the writing of persons in the military service.

"In investigating the cases," the War Department said, "the agents uncovered an organization of subversive individuals whose connection with the enemy activities was not previously known.

There was no indication of the rank of those involved in the ring, but it was said that the work of

British Ground Forces Driven Back 30 Miles In Malaya

By Harold Guard
United Press Staff Writer

Singapore, Jan. 12.—Japanese bombers were decisively beaten today in their first major daylight raid on Singapore and officials predicted the Allies would have air superiority in Malaya and its outlying islands within three days, but they said that meanwhile Kuala Lumpur, capital of the Federated Malay States and second city of Malaya, had fallen to the invaders.

It was reported without confirmation that 11 Japanese planes were shot down around Singapore up to 1 p. m. today.

The city had two prolonged air-raid alerts, and there was almost a continuous roar from antiaircraft guns and from machine guns and cannon of British fighter planes.

British Bombers Reinforced

Reinforced British bomber squadrons also were making it more difficult for the Japanese to use air bases close to Singapore.

While no communique was issued on the fall of Kuala Lumpur, 190 miles northwest of Singapore, the most reliable sources here admitted that the Japanese had entered the city. They said it had been stripped of everything of value under an "authorized salvage" program, which even included the moving of a section of a large cold storage plant to Singapore, and that capture of the city was likely to prove a hollow victory for the Japanese.

Let Natives Help Selves

Stores had been thrown open for the natives to help themselves and they had moved in like swarms of locusts, burdening themselves down with movable goods, then hitting the road for Singapore, leaving only a skeleton city for the enemy's picking.

Responsible sources said a number of Japanese planes were shot down in the Singapore and Johore areas during the day as swarms of raiders ran afoul of the shattering defense fire both from ground guns and the formidable squadrons of imperial airmen who swept up to challenge them.

Indicating that the situation in the air would continue to improve, a high British authority said during a visit to a guerrilla unit training camp near Singapore that "the Allies will have air superiority in the Malaya area within three days."

The Japanese pressure in the more developed areas of Selangor Province—a communique said imperial forces had fallen back on Seremban, 30 miles south of Kuala Lumpur—and evidence of a limited linking-up of Japanese thrusts through western and eastern Malaya brought the main battle into

Reds Encircle New Section Of Nazi Line

Soviet Dispatches Indicate That Orel Is Surounded

By the Associated Press

Moscow (Tuesday), Jan. 13.—The Red army was reported today to be threatening to envelop another sector of the German winter defense line between Vyazma and Bryansk after smashing a German regiment of the 216th Division in the Mosalsk area 50 miles northeast of Lyudinovo, which the Soviet yesterday declared retaken.

Latest dispatches broadcast by the Moscow radio said the regiment in the Mosalsk area had been rushed to the front from France. The commanders of a light transport column and a Nazi antitank group, and other officers were captured in this action midway between Lyudinovo and Mosalsk, the Soviets said.

Orel Probably Retaken

One hundred fifty-seven additional Soviet settlements, said Soviet military dispatches, had fallen back into Russian hands during the last three days. In the southern sector below Moscow a large city had been encircled with two German regiments and large tank forces entrapped.

This could have been either Orel, some 200 miles to the south of the capital, or Bryansk itself, but more likely was the former since previous Soviet charges which had broken the Vyazma-Bryansk German front had by-passed Orel.

Nazis Can't Retrench

Two battalions of German infantry were annihilated yesterday by Red airmen attacking along the western front, and one troop train also was destroyed, the communique said.

A Tass broadcast said Soviet troops in the Crimea also had captured many locomotives and railway cars and were putting the lines into

Battle of Philippines Near Crucial Stage As Japs Step Up Drive

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Possible loss of the Olongapo Naval Station, some 60 miles northwest of Manila, was reported here last night as the Battle of the Philippines appeared nearing the crucial stage in the rocky Bataan Peninsula.

A heavy artillery battle was under way along the entire front, with fighting between infantry and tanks increasing in fury, the War Department disclosed. Fresh Japanese troops are being poured into the front lines to engage Gen. Douglas MacArthur's hard-pressed forces, the Army said.

Meanwhile, the War Department reported that a 7314-ton Army transport had been destroyed by a fire of still-undetermined cause in Alaskan waters.

Ship and Cargo Lost

All personnel on the vessel, the Clevedon, are safe, but the ship, a combination freight and troop carrier, and its cargo are a total loss, the War Department night communique declared.

Japanese imperial headquarters in Tokyo claimed that Olongapo, second most important American naval base in Luzon, had been "completely occupied" Saturday. This was not denied here.

"We have no definite information," a Navy spokesman said. "However, we can assume from the last reported positions of the lines that perhaps Olongapo has been taken by the enemy."

The Olongapo Naval Station is on Subic Bay, at the head of Bataan Peninsula, some 40 miles north of Corregidor. Established by Admiral George Dewey in 1898, it has limited repair facilities, an ammuni-

Madrid Expects Immediate Malta Invasion Attempt

London (Tuesday), Jan. 13 (AP).—The Daily Mail, in a Madrid dispatch, said today reports from Rome indicated German shock troops would attack Malta within "ten days or three weeks."

The dispatch said German reinforcements had been reported pouring into Italy, and that scores of coastal vessels were carrying "vast quantities" of ammunition and supplies for the gathering army.

"The concentration of German troops all face Malta," the dispatch continued. "At the nearest point they are within 60 miles of the island, and at the most distant point they are only 100 miles away. The assault on Malta will be carried out practically exclusively by the German air force."

The recent increase in the number of daily air raids on Manta already had led British observers to speculate on the likelihood that the next Axis invasion attempt might be directed against the British central Mediterranean outpost. Only Monday Malta reported five air raid alarms.

Protective Arrest? Man With 9 Wives Is Seized by FBI

By the Associated Press

The FBI yesterday reported the arrest of a man with at least nine wives. Agents identified him as John William Melville, 40, and said he had 28 aliases, one for every arrest.

To impress the women he wooed, the FBI said, Melville:

Told them he "spent a couple of years with the Government," but neglected to mention they were spent in a penitentiary.

Told them he was born in London, although the only London he ever saw was the London, Ohio, prison camp.

Pretended to medical knowledge, but failed to mention it was limited to what he learned while working in the hospital of the Ohio State Penitentiary.

Gained the confidence of women of good reputation, obtained as much of their property as possible, passed bad checks and disappeared.

Melville was arrested in Los Angeles as a probation violator and will be returned to the Federal penitentiary at Leavenworth to serve out a term for bank robbery. He is listed as a native of Roanoke, Ohio.

Christenberry Confesses Eavesdropping on Long 'Plot'

By Robert DeVore
Post Staff Writer

Herbert W. Christenberry, a minor political descendant of the late Huey Pierce Long, yesterday admitted before a Senate subcommittee weighing his fitness for the office of district attorney, that he listened in on a New Orleans hotel room conference and overheard details of a fantastic "plot" to assassinate the Kingfish.

He turned his longhand notes over to Long, he said, and the Senator used them when, in August, 1935, he told the Senate the story of the "plot."

Christenberry was a witness before a Senate Judiciary subcommittee, named by the full committee to hear the petition of the Louisiana Association of Clean Government that Christenberry, brother of Earle J. Christenberry, Long's former secretary, lacks the qualifications of a good district attorney.

The association branded Christenberry's conduct in the [illegible] room episode as that of a "common eavesdropper and spy."

It maintained, furthermore, that because the "plot," as detailed by Long, was too fantastic to merit serious consideration, and because Christenberry has yet to deny any part of the story, he has made himself "part and parcel" of an "outrageous affront on common de-

China's Best Troops Stream Toward Burma to Attack Japs From Rear

Chiang's Men Have Tanks, Guns, at Last

By the Associated Press

Chungking, Jan. 12.—China's farspread armies have scored new successes on four widely separated fronts against a Japanese foe who is preoccupied with war in the Philippines, Malaya and the Dutch East Indies, it was announced today.

At the same time, strong Chinese forces were reported moving into Burma, where they will be in position to join with their British allies in a flank attack on Japan in Thailand and Indo-China. Christopher Sharman, of an ambulance unit who had just made a trip over the Burma Road, said the highway was clogged with crack Chinese troops moving westward with tanks, motorized artillery, Bren guns and light weapons.

Foe Smashed at Changsha

Indicating a disastrous finish to Japan's third Changsha campaign, the Chinese said they had utterly smashed the force of 100,000 which had set out to capture and keep that Hunan provincial capital. In the final 24-hour battle of entrapment 8000 Japanese were killed or wounded and 1000 captured, the Chinese said.

With 2000 miles of front from which to choose for harassing attacks and counteroffensives, the Chinese also reported a new thrust in Honan Province, 350 miles to the north, where the entire Japanese position along the long-contested Lunghai Railway south of the Yellow River apparently was menaced.

Fghting in two sectors of Central Hupeh Province northwest and west of Hankow also was anounced, and new attacks drove into Japanese positions in the far northern province of Suiyuan in Inner Mongolia.

The Chinese had nothing further to say, however, of the forces which last week were announced to have penetrated the suburbs of Canton in the far south.

The communique said the remnants of the Japanese who had attacked Changsha, 190 miles south of Hankow, were now fleeing "in great confusion" after being finally engaged and pounded by artillery for 24 hours along their line of retreat at Fulinpu, 35 miles northeast of Changsha.

Had Superiority in Guns

It was the first time in the 4½ years of a disheartening war that the Chinese claimed superiority in artillery, and they made the most of it. They estimated fully 45,000 Japanese were slain, wounded or captured in the ill-fated campaign.

Among prisoners, the communique said, were officers who had donned Chinese civilian attire.

In the Honan action, the Chinese announced the storming of the village of Luyi and the capture of four other villages, in a thrust which carried the attackers to the east, west and south gates of Hwaiyang.

Chinese puppet troops, numbering about 1000 at each place, turned on their Japanese officers and fought by the side of the Chinese regulars, the communique said.

This thrust from the direction of the North-South Peiping-Hankow Railway was directed toward the East-West Lunghai Railway. Japanese, after taking Chengchow at the junction of these two lines recently, retired eastward to Chungmow just south of the Yellow River and their entire position there and Kaifeng apparently was endangered. Luyi is 45 miles south of the Lunghai.

Guns Nearing Corregidor, Japs Report

Berlin, Jan. 12 (Radiocast Recorded by U.P.).—Japanese guns soon will be within range of Corregidor, main United States fortress at the entrance of Manila Bay, press reports from Tokyo asserted today.

American-Filipino defenders of the Corregidor approaches in Luzon's Bataan Peninsula, they said, are "being further squeezed together" as the Japanese advance southward.

Part of the advancing troops were said to be those who reportedly occupied Olangapo, United States auxiliary naval base, on Subic Bay, about 36 miles northwest of Corregidor.

The attack on the bease, launched from Santa Arita Peake, 5 miles away, offered very great difficulties, the reports said.

(Tokyo radio, also heard by United Press, quoted an imperial headquarters army section communique which said occupation of Olangapo was completed at 10 a. m. Saturday. It described Olangapo as an important submarine base for the United States Asiatic Fleet which was equipped with a floating dock capable of accommodating 12,000-ton warships.)

(Tokyo radio also quoted an imperial headquarters communique asserting that Japanese army bombers had blown up a 3000-ton British transport, "destroyed beyond repair two enemy submarines" Saturday afternoon in a surprise raid on a convoy in the Malacca Straits and "capsized a fully loaded enemy train."

(Other bombers were said to have blown up 24 British trucks and armored cars.

(News dispatches from Malaya, Tokyo said, claimed that Japanese planes damaged three enemy merchant ships totaling 16,000 tons.)

The President's Day

By International News Service

LITTLE CASINO: The Congressional Big Four came hard on the heels of breakfast yesterday. The President had just polished off that last cup of coffee and the regular morning huddle with the staff when Speaker Rayburn, Senator Barkley, Representative McCormack and the Vice President pounded up the front stairs. What the Big Four and the President studied was the Little Casino now snarled in Congressional conference: the price control, daylight savings and civilian defense bills.

DOUBLE, DOUBLE: While the President spent an hour and 40 minutes thrashing out snags with the Congressional powers, the impressive cavalcade of gold braid and embroidered visors began streaming up the White House steps. Gathering in a room down the hall from Mr. Roosevelt's study, the British and American high command started stirring the grand strategy destined to cook the Axis' goose to a turn. Mr. Roosevelt looked in briefly.

"PLEASED AND SURPRISED:" Slated for an 11:30 date with Mr. Big, Senator Truman got the come-on finally around noon. Some 20 minutes later Senator Truman exited smiling. Solon Truman had gotten a big slap on the back and the Presidential go-sign on his committee's investigation of national defense.

THE OKAY: In for the okay on his blueprints came Joe Eastman, former ICC chairman on leave to serve as defense transportation coordinator. With Eastman and bagful, of transportation bump-smoothers, came OEM's long, thin, remarkable genii, Wayne Coy—overlord and legman of national defense for the President.

APPOINTMENT FOR A PEEK: Shortly before lunch time the President phoned multi-jobbed Secretary Jesse Jones to come over for a minute around 2:20. Jones saw the President literally "for a minute," sped off again.

COMMANDER IN CHIEF: Mr. Roosevelt took time off from strategy study late in the day to get set for a public announcement on the newest war-baby—the War Labor Board, then called a conference of the British-American high command for 5:30 at the White House. At dark the big black limousines loaded to the running boards with the stern-faced men who must play a better game of chess than the Axis drove through the White House gates. Something big was cooking.

Possible Loss of Olongapo Admitted

tion depot, radio station, rifle range and marine barracks.

The principal repair unit at Olongapo is the floating dry dock Dewey, which is capable of handling ships as large as 16,000 tons. There has been no indication from Allied sources as to the fate of the vessel, although its capture was claimed by the Japanese.

As the floating dry dock has to be towed when moved, it is not very likely that it accompanied the Asiatic Fleet to new bases in the Netherlands East Indies.

Water on Three Sides

The admitted possible loss of Olongapo indicated that Gen. MacArthur's lines had been dropped back entirely, or nearly entirely onto the Batan Peninsula.

This neck of land, some 35 miles long, is protected by water on three sides by the China Sea and Manila Bay. Its base is anchoraged by the strong fortress of Corregidor and other island forts in the mouth of the Bay.

Officials here are hopeful that MacArthur's greatly outnumbered forces can hold out in the mountain fastnesses of the peninsula for some time. There was no indication from either Japanese or Allied quarters as to from what direction the attack on Olongapo came. Enemy forces, however, have been pressing from the east and down the beach from the north.

Text of the War Department communiques follow:

War Department Communique 55

"1. Philippine theater—A heavy artillery battle is in progress along the entire front. Ground activity is increasing as fresh Japanese troops move into front-line positions. Enemy air attacks are being renewed on defensive installations and fortifications.

"Gen. MacArthur reports that Japanese troops occupying Manila are attempting to suppress the use of radio receiving sets by civilians. This apparently is designed to prevent the reception of broadcasts from the United States and England, even though the action also prevents reception of propaganda broadcasts from Tokio.

"2. There is nothing to report from other areas."

War Department Communique No. 56

1. Alaska: The War Department was advised today of the destruction by fire in Alaskan waters of the United States Army Transport Clevedon. The ship and cargo were a total loss. All of the personnel are safe. The Clevedon was a combination passenger and freight vessel of 7314 tons. The cause of the fire is being investigated.

2. Hawaii: The commanding general of the Hawaiian department has advised that of 397 American soldiers wounded in the Japanese attack, 55 have fully recovered and have returned to duty. The condition of most of the others is very satisfactory and their early recovery is expected.

3. There is nothing to report from other areas.

Two Little Girls Suffer Injuries In Car Accidents

Two 4-year-old girls were injured, one seriously, in accidents reported by Metropolitan Police last night.

Margaret Lord, colored, 2821 Georgia Avenue Northwest, sustained a fractured skull and jaw late yesterday afternoon when she ran in front of a truck, police said, at 2115 Georgia Avenue Northwest.

She was removed to Freedmen's Hospital, where her condition was described as serious.

Police placed no charges against Frank L. Wollard 3d, 1445 Girard Street Northwest, driver of the truck, which is owned by the Southern Dental Supply Co., of 1225 New York Avenue Northwest.

Donna Lee Rue Bliss, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley F. Bliss, Oxon Hill, Md., was treated for a cut lip at Providence Hospital after a car driven by her mother collided with a telephone pole yesterday in Oxon Hill. She was sent home from the hospital after treatment.

Singapore Repels First Big Raid

more open ground, where the imperials want it. There is still enough jungle country in lower Selangor and south of there, however, to make for considerable guerrilla warfare and infiltrations.

Have Advantage in Open

On open roads and in comparatively open country the imperials are able to bring a superior fire power to bear, man for man, on the visible enemy, and the southward shift of the fighting is to their advantage in that respect.

Innumerable Japanese penetrations by small groups operating in the forests, and by small tanks using rubber estate roads were said to have been responsible for the pressure which forced the imperials back from Kuala Lumpur.

Imperial command units were said to have operated with devastating effect against these penetrating forces, but the imperials generally had a hard time counteracting Japanese agility in the jungles. The greatest difficulties were the Japanese numerical superiority and the enemy's habit of disappearing from observed positions when the imperials arrive and suddenly reappearing on the British flanks and rear.

Once the main battle is joined farther south, presumably at prepared positions well fortified by the imperials, these tactics will have to give way to the more standardized form of warfare and the outcime of this battle, and the fate of Singapore will depend on how many men, guns, tanks and planes the imperials are able to mass and how quickly they are able to get them to the battle line.

Even as the main Japanese push edged down from the northwest, the Japanese hordes struck closer home by air and sea, blasting at imperial communications and cities and undertaking another landing on the east coast which was promptly squashed.

The British withdrawal toward Seremban, from which a tangle of highways and railroads radiate out in every direction, marked the first retreat from Selangor province.

Only the Johore settlement and a thin slice of Negra Sembilan province separated Singapore Island from the shifting battle zone above Seremban.

New Position Bombed

Japanese airmen ranging ahead of ground invaders bombed Seremban Sunday, but were said to have caused only slight damage to communications which were repaired speedily.

Other enemy planes raided Muar, on the southwest coast below Malacca, machine-gunning the town and sinking a small ship in the harbor.

A train carrying evacuees from Kuala Lumpur was attacked by several waves of Japanese planes. Two persons were killed and several injured.

Nine Japanese wearing native garb landed from fishing sampans in the Bukit Churang area of southeast Johore Sunday. All were captured.

It was the first landing in Johore and apparently was well below the combat zone on the east coast. Last reports from that sector said the Japanese had penetrated to the Pahang River south of Kuantan, where the imperials apparently had the situation well in hand.

U. S. Reported Pressing Irish For Bases

By the Associated Press

London, Jan. 12.—The United States was said tonight to be taking the lead in an increasingly determined effort—informal but nonetheless official—to obtain from neutral Eire the use of vital bases for guarding the Atlantic convoy lanes.

A British informant who said the brunt of future negotiations would fall largely on the United States suggested that the Irish and their New York-born prime minister might heed America's arguments more readily than those of England.

Prime Minister Eamon De Valera stood firm, however, in his insistence that Eire would invite attack if she permitted any part of her territory to be used by a belligerent power.

Promises to Fight

Speaking in Dublin today he denied that there had been any secret bargaining between Eire and any other nation and declared:

"We will defend ourselves from attacks from any quarter. We did and are doing our best to get arms . . . It being understood that they are to be used to defend our territory against any aggressor, no matter who it might be . . ."

There was no indication, however, that DeValera's speech was a direct reaction to the revived pressure for bases.

British and United States representatives emphasized that nothing in the way of new proposals had been submitted to Eire, but made no secret that they continue to look wishfully at such potential bases as Berehaven, Cobh and Lough Swilly.

Were Used in 1917

Those three were used by British and United States fleets in the first World War and were retained by Britain after Eire became a nation. They were given up, however, by the Chamberlain government in 1938.

At that time, Prime Minister Churchill, then an often-heard critic of the government, opposed the move and in his war review last April 9 he asserted:

"I hope that eventually the inhabitants of our sister island may realize it as much in their interest as in ours that their ports and airfields should be available for naval and air forces which must operate even farther into the Atlantic."

(In Washington, Secretary of State Hull told a press conference he had heard of the London reports but could offer no information on the subject.)

Car Care

By Ed Carl

Truth is Better Than FRICTION

American cars are built to do 100,000 miles. The trouble with car owners is they won't scare about wear. They change oil catch-as-catch-can. They change grease hit - or - miss. They clean spark plugs when something serious lays up the car — yet motor strain from plugs that fire unevenly is often what lays up the car! Friction wears out parts. Worn parts wear out good parts. Tax Exemption Denied

An appeal by the National Geographic Society for complete exemption of its property from District real estate taxes yesterday was denied by the Commissioners.

The appeal was based on an earlier finding of a special committee on tax exemption headed by Budget Officer Walter Fowler, which restored to tax rolls all National Geographic property with exception of the library.

Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech ruled that property of the society, except the library, is not used purely for educational purposes within meaning of the law.

"On that ground alone," he said, "we conclude that the property is not entitled to exemption from taxation."

The society was incorporated in 1888 for 100 years and again in 1920 to give it perpetual existence. The property is located at Sixteenth and L Streets Northwest.

ARTISTS GET MAD TOO!

After the happenings at Pearl Harbor, every artist with any pretense at decency got as angry as any other normal American citizen. With the temper was born a great sense of futility with regard to the nature of the work in which we, as artists, are engaged. Pretty girl pictures now leave us cold.

We are not "easel" painters. We make illustrations which have to be instructive and practical.

We are certain that our ability to instruct Mrs. Kowalik in the use of an ironer is just as applicable to her son or her husband in the service or "war" work of any kind.

There are thousands of people who can't read blueprints but understand pictures.

Is there anybody here with enough imagination to see the potentialities of an organization of forty people (Americans) who are artists and photographers and trained to do this kind of work?

We don't intend to take this test lying down. We want to do our part—and right now.

Draft Dodgers Made Officers, Senate Hears

By John L. Steele
United Press Staff Writer

Chairman David I. Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee, warned yesterday that some day there will be an investigation of waivers or commissions granted—through "influence" to men "who are trying to duck the combat requirement of the draft law."

He told the Senate that such a warning to the Navy Department will be contained in a pamphlet being prepared by his committee for Congressional use.

"I went so far in the pamphlet," he said, "as to give warning to the Navy and to officers of the Navy that in my opinion there will be an investigation some day of the waivers in the Army and Navy and of accepting the applications of men of draft age and putting them in the intelligence unit and the Supply Corps . . ."

He said he had "heard rumors" that naval commissions have been granted through influence.

He charged that applications for commissions have been granted "waivers" in connection with age and educational requirements; that in most cases the applicants usually are trying "to get out of combat service."

Walsh told his colleagues during debate on a minor Navy bill that he had been informed the naval intelligence list is "practically closed"—except in cases of trained investigators and antisabotage experts.

"And a very able-bodied Senator to push his case—does that go along with it?" asked Senator Tom Connally (Democrat), of Texas.

Walsh replied:

"The Senator has said something I wanted to say. I have heard rumors that there are commissions being given in the naval intelligence unit through influence."

He said he knew "personally" that waivers had been extended so commissions could be granted, but that he did not know the cases by name.

"I myself do not know of a single solitary waiver being made because of the action of any member of the Senate or anyone of whom I know."

He said that in the forthcoming pamphlet, his committee would go on record that "in a democracy there ought not to be any waivers except for the benefit of the country, and not for the benefit of the individual and those who seek waivers are those who usually try to get out of combat service."

'Thanks, Mr. Secretary . . .'

Mayors Given War Strategy By Secretary

America's grand war strategy is to marshal the anti-Axis forces to defeat Hitler first, leaving for the last the "easy by contrast" job of finishing off Japan and Italy, Secretary of Navy Frank Knox declared yesterday before a meeting of the United States Conferenc of Mayors.

In a speech obviously designed to quiet those who have been restlessly demanding immediate naval action against Japan in retaliation for the treacherous attack upon Pearl Harbor, Knox declared that an "early, conclusive showdown with the Japanese Navy" was precluded because of the elements of distance, time and the necessary wide distribution of the American Fleet.

"We know who our great enemy is," he said. "The enemy who, before all others, must be defeated first. It is not Japan; it is not Italy. It is Hitler and Hitler's Nazis—Hitler's Germany.

"That done, the whole Axis fabric will collapse. The finishing off of Hitler's satellites will be easy by contrast. Japan, like Italy, is just the tool of Hitler."

Knox, former Republican candidate for vice president, was lavish in his praise of President Roosevelt for providing "cool headed leadership" to keep America from taking an "indiscreet and disastrous" revenge action.

"Under Roosevelt, we have kept our heads, and we will make our plans in our own way, and we will strike where and when we are ready, not before," Knox stated.

The present task of combined navies of United States and Britain is to maintain effective fighting strength in "all the seas, all the oceans," Knox said. Presumably, for the present, the Navy will wage a defensive war in the Pacific, waiting for strategic opportunities to strike, Knox indicated.

Fleet Not Idle

"I do not mean to imply that the Pacific Fleet is idle," he said. "It is not idle, and you will hear from it again and again, when and where careful strategic considerations dictate."

Knox warned that there will be more reverses before victory is finally achieved—that "there will be dark days—days we must prepare to face with patience and understanding."

Meanwhile, Knox said, the Navy is doing its job.

"The great highway of the sea between America and Britain is open. We must not forget that the most powerful of our enemies has for months been using all the power and ingenuity at his command to cut that highway.

"The full record of the Navy in the battle for the Atlantic cannot yet be told. To do so would be to give Hitler details of our successful operations he would gladly lose another Bismarck to know."

As for Japan, Knox was confident that the nation of little men has "obviously committed national suicide" by tangling with the United States and Great Britain at the same time.

"We are a mighty people with a single purpose," he said, "and until that purpose is achieved, we shall know no other purpose.

"Hard and long though the road may be, we will seek steadfastly the ultimate goal where peace awaits us—a peace of justice and righteousness—a peace with victory."

Parran Reveals New Drive On Prostitution and Its Graft

Announcement of a new attack upon venereal disease by actively "repressing prostitution and the graft on which it thrives," was made yesterday by Surgeon General Thomas Parran, of the United States Public Health Service, at a session of the United States Conference of Mayors at Hotel Mayflower.

Dr. Parran disclosed that the Army, Navy and Federal Security Administration had worked out an antivice program which will give local authorities a "reasonable time" to clean house or have invoked the drastic May Act, which makes prostitution near military establishments a Federal offense.

Answering question from the floor on whether eligible municiple employes filling necessary jobs will be drafted, Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, Selective Service administrator, stated that "any normal man who is married and has a home is a 3-A man (deferred because of dependency) and will stay there for quite some time." However, civil service rules which hamper local governments in selecting personnel "smack too much of business as usual," and may have to be changed, he said.

LaGuardia Gives Warning

Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of New York, who also is president of the conference and director of civilian defense, warned the mayors to start planning for the end of the war and "a dislocation the like of which we have never had."

Dr. Parran said the development of defense industry boom towns turned commercialized prostitution into "one of our most expanded war industries" and increased the incidence of venereal disease.

Under the control program approved by Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security Administrator, and Parran's superior, Secretary of Navy Knox, and Secretary of War Stimson, local authorities in critical areas will be urged to take strong action against prostitution and venereal diseases. Directives to suppress vice near military posts are being sent to Army and Navy commanders.

Other points in the program are:

Assigning of medical officers trained in venereal disease control work to military establishments; including a presentation of the reasons for repressing prostitution in Army and Navy educational programs; establishment of prophylactic stations accessible to Army and Navy personnel; provisions for special training of local police officers in effective handling of prostitution; creation of an interdepartmental committee to review questions of general policy.

Parran warned the officials to take new safeguards to protect sanitary facilities against possible sabotage.

"The enemy has planned and in my opinion will use bacteriological warfare wherever possible," he said.

Instructions covering protection of every public water supply already have been issued with additional instructions on milk, food, and other health control problems in process of preparation, he said.

"Misguided Enthusiasm"

General Hershey blamed some draft officials for "misguided enthusiasm" since Pearl Harbor which persuaded them to make a wholesale end to deferments.

"We have gone a long way to save homes, and we are going to try to stay with it," he said. "And I don't say that it takes a child to make a home, but it must be more than a home of convenience."

College students will continue to get "hardship" deferments of a few months to permit them to finish a semester, General Hershey said. "But I do not believe we can justify leaving a man in college for no other reason than not to interfere with his plan of life. We will only defer college men to permit them to finish their education when they are learning to do something which is classed by the Government as needed work."

Similarly industrial deferments are only temporary, he said. He pointed out that 75 per cent of the employes of British aircraft factories are now women.

Taxing of City Bonds Denounced

LaGuardia declared that responsibility for providing for workers thrown out of employment due to conversion of industry to a wartime basis rests with the Federal Government.

"Surely these people should not be dumped on the citizens," he said. "Cities do not have any funds for relief. Aid also must be provided in the form of special Army guards to police critical locations in cities and to staff local offices of authorities entrusted with the job of administering the tire rationing program.

"Where is the Federal Government going to get the money?" he asked. "I'll tell you—let them abolish some useless agencies down here and make those boys go to work."

In characteristic fashion, he denounced efforts to raise revenue by taking municipal bonds as an effort to place cities "on a lend-lease basis for the next 200 years."

Attorney General Heard

Other speakers included Attorney General Francis Biddle, who warned the mayors against approving anti-alien drives which would hurt innocent persons and rob the country of needed production effort.

Mayor Antonio J. Bermudez of Juarez, Mexico, spokesman for a delegation of Mexican mayors, stated that President Roosevelt's good neighbor policy was "a perfect instrument of international friendship."

Mayor Stanley Lewis, of Ottawa, Canada, proposed more frequent exchange of ideas between Canadian and American cities and extended greetings from Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King of Canada.

Malcolm MacDonald, high commissioner to Canada from Great Britain, described the civilian defense set up in Great Britain, and said the country's survival through the heaviest air attacks was due "to the municipal authorities who bore most of the brunt of the air raids."

Crash Kills Two Ft. Benning Fliers

Columbus, Ga., Jan. 12 (AP).—Two Fort Benning fliers were killed instantly today in the crash of a small observation plane during a training flight.

Army authorities identified the dead as Second Lieut. Lucious D. Edwards, 24, of Yazoo City, Miss., and Private Clarence Puder, 23, of Dover, N. J. Cause of the crash was not immediately determined.

Mid-Air Crash Kiills 6 Canadians

Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, Jan. 12 (INS).—Six airmen attached to a nearby Royal Canadian Air Force reconnaissance school were killed today when two planes collided in midair.

Both planes spiraled to earth and one exploded. There were three occupants, none of whose names was released, in each ship.

Rep. Martin Proposes Hoover As Price Control Administrator

Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr., the Republican leader, suggesting last night that President Roosevelt call in Republicans and anti-New Deal Democrats of demonstrated ability to help in the war effort, proposed former President Herbert Hoover for price control administrator.

The Massachusetts Representative, minority leader of the House and also chairman of the Republican National Committee, made the recommendation in a broadcast over N. B. C.

"I think it cannot be denied," he said, "that Mr. Hoover at the head of price control, for instance, would give the Nation greater confidence than those who now exercise that control."

Leon W. Henderson now is head of the Office of Price Administration.

Along with Hoover Martin mentioned Wendell Willkie, Alf Landon, Thomas E. Dewey, Alfred E. Smith, Joseph B. Ely, John W. Hanes and Lewis W. Douglas as men whose "talent and experience" the President "might do well to avail himself of," and who "have a broad administrative experience and a deep sense of patriotism."

Willkie and Landon were Mr. Roosevelt's opponents in the last Presidential elections and Dewey was the 1938 Republican candidate for Governor of New York. Smith, 1928 Presidential nominee; Ely, former Massachusetts Governor; Hanes, former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, and Douglas, former budget director, all are Democrats who have been critical of some Administration domestic policies.

Asserting "There are no partisan lines" in the Nation's determination to win the war, Martin called for "an end to the bickerings and the jealousies which characterize some parts of the Administration in the war effort."

"This is the hour for efficiency, for the selection of the right man for the job and the end of politics in determining the selection of our administrators," he said. "The people are being called upon to make tremendous sacrifices. They demand the greatest nonpartisan efficiency and economy procurable among our more than 130 million free, capable people."

Concerning war prospects, Martin said the American people should be prepared "for some reverses" and for "times of discouragement."

"There will be a great measure of blood, sweat and tears for us, too," he continued. "But our integrity, our honor, our liberty, our form of government and our way of life shall stand unimpaired, however hard shall be the task of keeping them secure, of protecting them against being trampled under the ruthless heel of any aggressor."

By its attack on the United States' Pacific possessions, Martin asserted, Japan "struck the spark which lighted the temper of America."

Roosevelt Highly Praised by Duce, But It Was in 1934

By International News Service

Guess who wrote these lines of praise of President Roosevelt?—

"President Roosevelt's courage, buoyancy, and optimism have driven from the minds of millions and millions of men the clouds of uncertainty and inaction. . . . President Roosevelt has raised the 'morale' of the American people. Plenary powers have not proved a useless arm in his hands. He has used them for the people. . . ."

That's a quotation from none other than Benito Mussolini, written by Il Duce in an article widely syndicated in the United States nearly eight years ago and brought to light again yesterday in the files of the New York Journal and American. It was originally published on February 11, 1934.

New Navy Reserve Regiment to Build Overseas Bases

Formation of a special construction regiment of Naval Reservists to take over the building of overseas naval bases in combat zones was announced yesterday by the Navy.

Not less than 12 companies of 226 skilled construction workers each will be established, it was said. Workers needed, for enlistment in the new units include firemen, electricians, drillers, blacksmiths, automotive repairmen, carpenters, divers, riggers, welders, telephone men, truck drivers, pipefitters, painters, draftsmen, steel workers and laborers, the department said.

Units will be sent wherever the Navy may build overseas bases and work as military personnel in military units.

Woman Who Linked Fish's Aide To Viereck Tells of Being Shadowed

swer most of the questions asked of him. Viereck said he feared he would incriminate himself if made to tell whether he knew Fish, Hill or other Capitol Hill figures.

3. The men who handled the mailbags when they were hustled out of the propaganda center traced their path to Representative Fish's storeroom on the sixth floor of the New House Office Building.

The special grand jury on Axis agents accused Hill of swearing falsely when he denied he knew Viereck and denied he had the mailbags placed in Fish's storeroom.

First advanced by Fish himself the day The Post exposed the mailbag scandal, the "frame-up" charge was O'Connor's answer to the reading of part of a speech which Special Prosecutor William Power Maloney fished out of one of the mailbags.

Speech Similar to Hitler Interview

Maloney read from "Six Men and War," a speech which Mrs. Spielman testified was delivered in the Senate by her former employer, the late Senator Ernest Lundeen (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota, but was written by Viereck. The speech contained these words: "Europe for the Europeans; America for the Americans."

From one of the mailbags, Maloney produced a franked envelope of former Representative Jacob Thorkelson (Republican), of Montana. This contained an interview with Hitler which Thorkelson had inserted in the Congressional Record. Hitler was quoted as using almost the same words as those in the Lundeen speech.

O'Connor demanded that the mail bags be sealed up.

"I want them kept away from the Department of Justice," he shouted. "Anything could have been put in there. That envelope was planted there! Let's see you pull out another one!"

"There are the bags," Maloney retorted. "They are in evidence. You pull one out."

Attorneys Examine Bags

Justice F. Dickinson Letts left the bench, remarking that, since court was adjourning, the attorneys might examine all the mail bags they liked.

Hill immediately set to going through the mail bag from which Maloney had pulled the envelope and found 11 other Thorkelson franked envelopes. William F. Cusick, another counsel for Hill, claimed the 11 envelopes were empty.

Mrs. Spielman testified that she had often telephoned Hill for Senator Lundeen, who was often visited by Viereck. Viereck talked to Hill, she declared.

Saying he wanted to check up on her, O'Connor last Friday demanded Mrs. Spielman's address in New York, where she works for Time magazine. She reported yesterday that last Saturday a man, who said he was from the Antidefamation League but lacked credentials, tried to question her husband, Gordon Spielman. Saturday afternoon, Mrs. Spielman said, two "building inspectors," also without credentials, tried to get in her apartment. Moreover, she said, a man followed her on the train.

Mrs. Spielman reported these incidents to Maloney and his coprosecutor, Edward J. Hickey, jr., when she returned to Washington yesterday. As soon as court opened, they called O'Connor into a conference with Justice Letts. All the lawyers declined to comment.

Viereck told Justice Letts, "I intend to stand upon my constitutional privileges."

"I Refuse to Answer"

The Nazi agent then told his name, and said he was born in Munich, Germany, but was an American citizen because of the naturalization of his father. To other questions, Viereck replied with a bland smile and the statement: "I refuse to answer upon constitutional grounds." A score of times he was then asked what the grounds were and each time he replied, "The answer might tend to incriminate or degrade me."

Here are some of the questions whose answers Viereck claimed would incriminate him:

What is your occupation?

How long have you followed it?

Did you work for the German government in the first World War?

Did you work for the German Library of Information (an official propaganda agency) in 1939 and 1940?

Did you get $10,000 from Dr. Giseler Wirsing (of Munich) in 1940 to spend in this country? (Although Viereck would not answer yesterday, his registration at the State Department says he got this money.)

Asked About $25,000

Did you in 1941 receive $25,000.

Do you know Sigfried Hauck (head of Flanders Hall, Inc., publishing firm established, financed and controlled by Viereck)?

Did you write the speech "Lord Lothian Aginst Lord Lothian" made by the late Senator Lundeen? (Lothian was the late British Ambassador here.)

Did you edit or write a book ("We Must Save the Republic") for Representative Stephen A. Day, of Illinois?

Did you edit or write the book, "Who's Who Among the War Mongers," for former Senator Rush D. Holt (Democrat), of West Virginia?

Do you know Representative Hamilton Fish?

Grand Jury Testimony Disclosed

Two of the special grand jurors have testified that Vierick admitted he knew Hill when he testified before them.

O'Connors' cross-examination of Viereck was brief. He asked the Nazi agent to tell what his business was with Hill and what money he paid Hill. Viereck replied that he was afraid that he might be incriminated if he answered this.

Prescott Dennett, press agent for Viereck's propaganda publishers and mailer of franked propaganda for Hill, was summoned before the grand jury on September 19, 1941. The trail of the mailbags began that morning, starting with Frank R. Monroe, foreman of the mail platform of the House postoffice.

Monroe said about 9 a. m. that morning Hill asked him to send a truck in a hurry to make a pickup from Dennett's headquarters, then situated at 1430 Rhode Island Avenue Northwest. Michael O'Gorman, a clerk, heard this.

Monroe sent a truck driven by Charles Wilson, Duke University graduate, who is also a clerk. Wilson testified that Dennett had 20 bulging mailbags ready. Wilson said that upon instructions he left some at the America First Committee and delivered eight to the House Office Building.

Wilson and Irvin Talton Quinn, jr., now a soldier but then a House postal clerk, said Hill ordered the eight bags placed in Fish's storeroom.

O'Gorman said he found the bags addressed to Hill, and took them to Fish's office, where Hill said, "What the hell did you bring that damned stuff up here for? Take it out of here. It doesn't belong here."

"Where does it belong," O'Gorman said he asked.

Hill Made, he Says

"It belongs up in our storeroom on the sixth floor," O'Gorman said Hill replied. O'Gorman said he did not know where the storeroom was and that Hill showed him.

Next day, O'Gorman added, Hill gave him a tip and said, 'I was pretty mad about you bringing those bags in the office."

Lester E. Purcell, grand jury poll clerk, testified that there was always a quorum of grand jurors to hear Hill.

Charles B. Boland, Department of Justice accountant, produced a chart which showed that Hill's orders from the Government Printing Office for reprints from the Record totaled 378,000 items in 1941. Hill ordered 57,000 more in 1940, Boland said.

O'Connor plans to renew his cross-examination of several Government witnesses today. Then he is expected to move for a directed verdict of acquittal.

Nazi 'Secret Weapon' in Libya order for the movement of men and supplies.

Kuibyshev dispatches said the Germans had been unable to retrench themselves on the frozen Moscow front and that in one sector they were pushed back nine miles in a single day.

Ski troops, playing a more and more important role in the fighting, were declared to have knifed silently behind the Germans in another area, wiped out a heavily armed Nazi garrison and captured a village.

In still another sector the Russians said the German retreat had become so hurried and disorganized that only small detachments of automatic riflemen were left behind as a covering force.

Reds Win Mountains Dominating Petsamo

Kuibyshev, Jan. 12 (U.P.)—Soviet troops, opening a midwinter offensive on Rybachi Peninsula, 250 miles north of the Arctic Circle, have won control of the Mousta Tunturi mountain range commanding the entrance to Finland's ice-free port of Petsamo, military dispatches said today.

The drive apparetly was intended to cut Germany's northern sea route to Finland, the importance of which has long been emphasized by the fact that a German army under Col. Gen. Nikolaus von Falkenhorst, conqueror of Norway, was assigned to guard that sector which forms a northern extension of the Finnish-Russian front.

The Gulf Stream, coursing around the northern tip of Europe, keeps both Petsamo and the nearby Russian port of Murmansk open to traffic virtually the year around, and the Germans keep a steady line of ships running there through Norwegian coastal waters. Petsamo was ceded to Russia after the war of 1939-40, but the Finns and Germans reclaimed it in the present war.

Front dispatches said the Red army troops broke through the German line in Rybachi, also known as Fisherman's Peninsula, and gained the mountain.

Berlin also reported the arrest of 20 former high Norwegian court officials and close friends of the refugee Norwegian royal house as a result of the British "kidnaping" of eight quislingists in commando raids on the Norwegian coast.

The British radio reported that at one town in Denmark the nineteenth fire had broken out within a short time. It added that "there is no doubt the fires were caused intentionally."

Newspapers reaching Vichy from Bordeaux told of the execution of a Frenchman by a Nazi firing squad for possessing firearms, while at Douai, Nord Department, 28 so-called Communist suspects, 6 in absentia, were reported condemned to death or life imprisonment.

The British radio quoted a report from Switzerland that 62 German soldiers had been executed at Besancon, occupied France, because they mutinied against orders to return to the Russian front after a furlough.

planes over Singapore.

Allied losses in these activities were given as two Australian planes shot down in flames near Menado, and one Dutch naval plane lost at Tarakan. One Dutch pilot was forced to parachute to safety after shooting down two of the Japanese planes over Singapore, and although his plane was destroyed, he escaped injury.

The secret Borneo air bases had been prepared as one of the mainstays in the Indies defense. There were no roads leading to the sites selected in the jungles, which were inaccessible by land and almost impossible to spot from the air, according to Aneta, the N. E. I. news agency. Supplies were hauled to the fields by a fleet of American Lockheed Lodestar transport planes, acquired for the purpose by the Netherlands Indies army.

The high command reported that the Indies' Allies were 'energetically taking part in the fight against the invaders." It mentioned only the Australians, but it was known that American forces in this area were not idle. Admiral Thomas C. Hart, commander of the United States Asiatic Fleet and supreme naval commander for the United Nations in the southwest Pacific, authorized the United Press to reveal today that he had arrived in Java in a United States submarine a week ago.

Dutch spokesmen reiterated that if it was found impossible to hold the Japanese at bay on land, everything that might be of value to them would be destroyed before it was evacuated. The "scorched earth" program has been integrated into the general defense plan and it already has been applied to the localities of the Japanese landings in Celebes. It will be applied to Tarakan, which produced 750,000 of the Indies' 8,300,000 tons of oil in 1938, if it appears that the island is doomed, spokesmen said. The plight of that island admittedly was serious but officials had not despaired of saving it.

A ruthless Japanese attack on Sumatra gave further indication that it might be marked for invasion next and that a pincers movement would be made through Borneo and Sumatra aimed at Java, richest and most densely populated of the Indies. Japanese planes swooping across the Malacca Straits from the direction of Kuala Selangor, in western Malaya, attacked the Sumatra town of Tandjong Baley, machine-gunnig persons in the streets.

A dispatch told of an old French priest, who had spent 20 years in Formosa, standing in the middle of the street during the raid and shouting unholy epithets at the raiders.

Geraldine Dameron, 15, 513 Seventh Street Southwest, was taken to Emergency Hospital in their ambulance where she was treated for a bruised hip. The Weather Bureau said it will be fair and warmer today with gentle to moderate winds. Yesterday the high was reported as 39 degrees with a low of 13.

Army to Retire Grant, Former Philippine Chief

The War Department announced yesterday that Maj. Gen. Walter S. Grant, a former commander of Army troops in the Philippines, will retire for age, January 31.

Gen. Grant returned from command of the Philippine Department more than two years ago and until last summer was commander of the Third Corps Area, embracing the District of Columbia, Maryland, Virginia and Pennsylvania.

A native of Ithaca, N. Y., Gen. Grant was graduated from West Point in 1900, and served as deputy chief of staff of the First Army of the A. E. F., winning the D. S. M., French Legion of Honor, nad Belgium Order of Leopold for services in the Meuse-Argonne.

First Lady Says OCD Is Not in Army's Realm

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

In the face of a House vote to put the Office of Civilian Defense under the War Department, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt emphasized yesterday that she does not believe civilian defense "is a responsibility that possibly can be met by the Army."

The First Lady also indicated that she is ready to fight all attempts to take away any of the nonpay, volunteer status of OCD through the introduction of bills to organize paid noncombatant defense units.

It is known she considers as such a bill the one introduced by Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, of Massachusetts, and approved by Secretary of War Stimson to organize the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps under War Department supervision.

Also Would Be Volunteers

This corps, although its members would be volunteers, would take over air watching posts now manned, and womaned, mostly by OCD registrants. They would draw pay from the Army commensurate with that of soldiers.

Departing from her usual custom of refusal to comment on pending legislation, Mrs. Roosevelt—at a press conference held at OCD, where she is assistant director—declared civilian defense should be kept under civilian direction and that if volunteers find some of the defense jobs "too much," more volunteers should be brought in.

She said she does not foresee the possibilit that an defense volunteers doing jobs covered in the CD organization will need to be paid.

Several legislators believe that to get an effective job done in some of the protective services it will be necessary to have corps of paid workers who are subject to discipline, especially if this is to be a "long and waiting war."

Answer to Critics

The turn-over of defense volunteers in some parts of the country is expected to be very great during the next few months "if no bombs fall," it was said yesterday at OCD, where it is admitted this is one of the main reasons Director F. H. LaGuardia will spend most of his time "in the field."

At her press conference, Mrs. Roosevelt answered critics who have said she was attempting her OCD job on "too little time" by asking: "How many hours a day must you give to a job to do a job?"

She averages about 12 hours a day on civilian defense work, she said.

Although the First Lady did not mention Mrs. Rogers' bill specifically, she replied—when she was asked if she did not believe in women volunteers being permitted in the Army "as the Rogers bill provides"—that she did not believe in "obliging women to do things when it is not necessary to do them."

She said she thought the Army already has a fair-sized job on its hands without taking over any civilian defense.

Statement in Full

Her full statement in regard to placing OCD under the War Department follows:

"The real reason I think it is better to keep it under civilion direction is that civilian defense is really not entirely a matter in which the Army has had any experience.

"If it were merely a question of learning what you would do about fire bombs and air raid, that would be another thing. But it is not that.

"For real defense is the preparation of people to have confidence in themselves, to feel secure in their way of life and to have a high morale.

"This comes not just from the ability to meet in a military way certain conditions, but it comes from the knowledge that daily conditions can be met, that you have a say in meeting them and that you have a part in the defense of your community and of the country.

"I do not believe that is a responsibility that possibly can be met by the Army."

LaGuardia Hits Back

In the meantime, Director La Guardia also was hitting back at Congress.

Speaking before the United States Mayors Conference, he said that no city in the country is prepared to meet an air raid—as a result of Congressional "procrastination" holding up the bill appropriating 100 million dollars worth of protective equipment for noncombatants.

The bill will not become effective for some time due to difference of opinion between the Senate and Houseas to what agency should have the authority, as well as the money, to buy needed gasmasks, fire-fighting, medical and other air-raid equipment.

was trying to "freeze" her out by failing to provide heat was sent to the Police Court Corporation Counsel's Office. Assistant Corporation Counsel Milton Korman heard her charges and referred the case to the Health Department, which promised to investigate.

Cogswell also announced yesterday that 38 formal petitions for rent adjustments had been received by his office. First complaint forms were distributed Saturday. All except one of the petitions, he said, were filed by landlords.

In most instances, it was reported, the landlords sought higher rents because of increased operating costs, increased services, boosted taxes and repair and remodeling necessities.

Duplicate copies of yesterday's petitions will be furnished each respondent, Cogswell declared, and the cases will be distributed between three examiners to be named some time this week.

U. S., Mexico Defense Board Appointed

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

Another step toward full collaboration on defense of the Western Hemisphere was taken yesterday with creation of a joint Mexican-United States Defense Commission similar to that formed 16 months ago with Canada.

Creation of the new defense board was announced last night by the White House, which said it was set up by President Roosevelt and President Avila Camacho of Mexico. The Canadian commission was organized in August 1940, by Mr. Roosevelt and Prime Minister McKenzie King of Canada at Ogdensburg, N. Y.

Announcement of the Mexican-United States commission coincided with preparations for opening the hemispheric solidarity conference of ministers of American nations at Rio de Janeiro on Thursday. The commission was expected to function along lines similar to those followed by the Canadian-American board.

Members of the Mexican-United States Commission, announced last night by the State Department, will be Brig Gen. Miguel S. Gonzalez Cadena and Brig Gen Tomas Sanchez Hernandez, for Mexico, and Vice Admiral Alfred Wilkinson Johnson and Maj. Gen. Stanley Dunbar Embick, for the United States. It will meet here soon after the return of Gen Sanchez Hernandez from the Rio conference of ministers.

A treaty was signed April 1, 1941, by Mexican Ambassador Dr. Francisco Castillo Najera and Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles providing for reciprocal transit of military aircraft over the two countries. Under its terms, the United States may ferry aircraft to Panama, Mexico agreeing to protect them.

A critical spot for joint defense is Lower California, the long spit of land on the Pacific which United States military men have feared might be made a foothold for an invasion from the West. Mexican troops already have been sent through the United States to the command in Lower California of Gen. Lazaro Cardenas, former president of Mexico.

These four public members, it was learned, will function mainly as determining voices in arbitration or the issuance of public findings and recommendations which, under the December agreement, will carry the weight and binding finality of arbitration awards.

Other members of the board, announced last night:

Representing employes:

Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer of United Mine Workers of America; George Meany, secretary-treasurer, American Federation of Labor; R. J. Thomas, president of United Automobile Workers of America, and Matthew Woll, vice president, American Federation of Labor.

Labor's Alternate Members

Alternate members, to serve in case of absence of a member:

Martin P. Durkin, secretary-treasurer, United Association of Plumbers and Steamfitters of the United States and Canada; C. S. Golden, regional director of Steel Workers' Organizing Committee; Emil Rieve, president of Textile Workers Union of America, and Robert J. Watt, international representative, American Federation of Labor.

Representing employers:

A. W. Hawkes, president, United States Chamber of Commerce and president, Congoleum-Nairn, Inc.; Roger D. Lapham, chairman of the board, American-Hawaiian Steamship Co.; E. J. McMillan, president, Standard Knitting Mills, Inc., and Walter C. Teagle, chairman of the board, Standard Oil Co. (N. J.).

Alternates, to serve in case of absence of a member:

Procedure Set Forth

In the Executive Order creating the board, the President provided four procedural steps for the handling of controversies:

1. The parties to the dispute shall first resort to direct negotiation or collective bargaining.

2. If there is no settlement, the Labor Department Conciliation Service shall be notified, if it has not already intervened.

3. If not settled by conciliation, the Secretary of Labor shall certify the case to the board. The order permits the board, however, to take original jurisdiction in any dispute, on its own motion, but after consultation with the Secretary of Labor.

4. After the board takes jurisdiction, it "shall finally determine the dispute" and may use for this purpose mediation, voluntary arbitration or arbitration under rules which it establishes.

Won't Act as Mediators

As distinct from procedure under the Mediation Board, the public members of the new agency will probably not themselves act as mediators, it was reported, but instead, will appoint special mediators for any cases where this seems desirable. This mediator or referee may sit with a "panel" constituted of labor and industry members of the board to hear particular cases.

A special mediation section of the board is expected to be created, informed sources said, under the head of Ralph D. Seward, the Mediation Board's first executive secretary and later resident member of the old agency.

Another difference between the two bodies, it was expected, would be that the panels of the National War Labor Board will not themselves issue public recommendations, as did panels of the Mediation Board. Instead, if they fail to obtain a mediated settlement, they may recommend action and relay findings to the full board which, acting in a quorum, is the only agency that will make public recommendations.

A last-minute change in the order, it was learned, was the elimination of a permanent list of arbitrators who were to be called on whenever any controversy demanded an arbitrated settlement. Instead, it was said, individual arbitrators, differing in each case, will be chosen by the board whenever their presence is necessary.

No specific provision was made in the executive order to handle a situation when the board might be evenly divided on a controversy.

Should such a circumstance arise, it was expected, the board would submit the case to arbitration.

U. S. to Build Big Synthetic Rubber Plants

reported, there is in excess of one million tons of used rubber available, or enough to produce at least 600,000 tons of usuable reclaimed rubber.

Asked specifically if the new program would provide tires for civilians, Jones replied:

"It contemplates all the rubber this country needs," indicating that this included essential civilian requirements.

Apparently touchy at recent criticism that he failed to provide for the synthetic rubber plants more than a year ago, when they were proposed in substantial size by the OPM, Jones parried reporters' questions at his press conference with the reply:

'I don't know anybody who anticipated we would be completely cut off from Far Eastern supplies . . . We aren't that smart."

Other Steps Taken

Jones also took steps yesterday to stimulate production of copper, zinc and lead, vital defense metals, by announcing that another RFC subsidiary, the Metals Reserve Co., would pay premiums ranging from 2¾ to 5 cents per pound more than regular prices, for production of the metals in excess of 1941 levels.

The arrangement was made in conjunction with the OPM and the Office of Price Administration, which will fix the quotas and allocate the metals, for war purposes, which the higher prices bring forth.

The announcement of the "two-price system" apparently ends a long standing conflict as to whether all metal prices should be increased to stimulate mining of lower grade properties, or whether special premiums for the excess would accomplish the same purpose.

'Plot' Discussed By Christenberry

After Christenberry's testimony, the subcommittee closed the hearing, its chairman, Senator McFarland (Democrat), of Arizona, announcing that a report to the full committee could be expected tomorrow.

Christenberry told the subcommittee that it was not necessary to use a dictaphone, installed for the purpose, to overhear what was discussed in the hotel room conference of Long's political adversaries.

Voices of men he knew and of others he was able to identify came clearly through a door opening into an adjoining room he occupied with B. W. Cason, former Louisiana debt moratorium commissioner who has been convicted of perjury, Christenberry related.

Through the opening came the now famous line about Louisiana's political difficulties being subject to solution by "one man, one gun, one bullet," the witness stated.

He had been in the room only a few minutes, he added, when he heard a familiar voice proclaim for one of the plotters that he was now ready to "bulldoze, steal or kill" to remove the Kingfish from power.

Through their questioning of representatives of the association, the Louisiana Senators, Overton and Ellender, who supported Christenberry's appointment, gave out the impression that the organization was not as strictly nonpartisan as its aherents asserted it to be.

At least one witness not identified with the association, however, made it clear that, in his opinion, Christenberry lacked qualification for the appointment.

He was former Assistant Attorney General O. John Rogge, who told the subcommittee that he could not indorse Christenberry for the job because "he would put political affections ahead of duty to the Department of Justice."

Christenberry was an assistant attorney when the district attorney's staff collaborated with Rogge in the Government's investigation of alleged Louisiana voting frauds in 1940.

During his association with Christenberry, Rogge declared, he became convinced that the assistant attorney felt "his first loyalty was to a political faction, rather than to the department."

"I think he would put political affections ahead of duty to the department and I should not recommend him for the post," he said.

Rogge told the subcommittee about a "leak" by which counsel for a defendant in one of the election cases learned details of an indictment and the novel legal theory on which it was based. Thus, he said, lawyers were able to file a written demurrer less than 24 hours after the true bill was returned.

Didn't Mention Names

Rogge did not name Christenberry as the member of his staff responsible for the "leak," but declared that he was "satisfied that some one did tell the prospective defendant and his lawyers what was going on."

Albert Arent, an employe of the Justice Department's criminal division who aided in the Louisiana scandals investigation, said the indictment was returned at 4:30 p. m. and at 10 a. m. the following day he was asked by defense counsel if he was prepared to argue the demurrer. That was the first he heard of the demurrer, Arent added.

James J. Morrison, 31-year-old New Orleans attorney and counsel for the association, reviewed the charges on which refusal to confirm Christenberry was asked. In addition to "eavesdropping" at the hotel conference, Morrison accused Christenberry of being a "dummy" candidate at the 1932 election that sent Overton to the Senate, the purpose being to secure for the Long faction precinct election commissioners that might be sympathetic.

Insists He Was Sincere

Christenberry denied the charge, saying that he entered a race for judge as a "sincere" candidate, but admitted that his candidacy, later withdrawn, "undoubtedly helped" incumbent judges who were backed by the Long faction.

Morrison pointed out that as district attorney, Christenberry would be in a key position in the prosecution of several cases hanging over from the scandal indictments, one of which involves the Win or Lose Corporation, of which his brother is an officer.

Christenberry declared that he would have nothing to do with the Win or Lose case, that it would be handled by a special attorney. He denied emphatically that he was responsible for Rogge's "leak."

White House Acts To Halt Farm Bloc

House Conferees Summoned in Move To Kill Senate's Price Control Plan

By Robert C. Albright

Post Staff Writer

The Administration yesterday intervened to prevent final enactment of the Senate's sweeping farm bloc amendments to the price control bill as two key agencies collided on dual control features.

Five top members of the House Banking Committee were invited to the White House this morning in an effort to stiffen House resistance against full acceptance of the Senate changes.

Price Administrator Leon Henderson, whose farm price ruling could be vetoed by Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard under the Senate bill, meanwhile lashed back at a statement attributed to Wickard.

Holds Wickard "Mistaken"

Henderson denied what he said was Wickard's statement that the Agriculture Department had not been consulted on the price ceiling on lard, and added.

"It would spear that Secretary Wickard is either mistaken or, as has happened in other cases, he has not consulted with members of his own staff."

Taking a direct hand for the second time in his fight for a single price administrator with full authority over farm and other prices, President Roosevelt voiced objections to the Senate farm bloc's revisions at his conference yesterday with "big four" legislative leaders.

Four Invited to White House

Shortly afterward, Chairman Steagall of the House Banking Committee, and four other committeemen who will serve with him as price bill conferees, were invited to the White House this morning.

Although the price bill has passed both Houses in different forms, it is still subject to conference adjustments. Administration lieutenants were urging the House conference committee to sit tight against Senate amendments that some said might permit the free rise of many farm commodities more than 25 per cent above present levels.

The President's chief objections were directed at the amendment by Senator Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, which would hold up the operation of any price-fixing order on farm commodities until it had been approved by the Secretary of Agriculture.

Other Measures in Disfavor

He was reported hardly less favorable to other farm price control liberalizations adopted in the Senate farm bloc runaway.

These included a requirement that the Federal Reserve Board's index of industrial wages should be used as a factor in calculating parity figures, which would have the effect of raising parity prices about 10 per cent.

Apparently the House bill provisions, forbidding any farm price ceiling below 110 per cent of parity, the October 1 price, or the average price in the years of 1919 to 1929, although partly unaccaptable to the Administration at the time they were passed, are now strongly preferred over the Senate version.

Conference Likely Today

House conferees had not been designated, but the group to be named was invited to this morning's White House conference. Besides Steagall, they include Representatives Williams, of Missouri, and Spence, of Kentucky (Democrats), and Wolcott, of Michigan, and Gifford, of Massachusetts (Republicans).

Senate conferees, except for Senator Bankhead preponderantly in favor of the President's position, but overridden by the Senate, probably will meet later today with the House group, but were not called to the White House. They include Senator Brown, of Michigan, Senate Majority Leader Barkley, Senator Glass of Virginia and Senator Bankhead of Alabama (Democrat), and Senator Taft of Ohio and Senator Danaher of Connecticut (Republicans).

Secretary of Agriculture Wickard meanwhile was quoted in an Associated Press interview as saying he believed his department, with its technical knowledge, was in a better position than any other agency to say what the farm prices should be to secure the needed production.

Does Not Oppose President

He emphasized that he was not opposing the President, but said the war was placing new, unexpected and as yet unmeasurable demands on this country for food and cautioned against Americans being excessively concerned about prices and too complacent about supplies.

Wickard was quoted as saying frankly that the experience his department has had with the Office of Price Administration convinced him that the two agencies could not work satisfactorily together on prices.

Henderson's statement quoting Wickard as saying the Agriculture Department was not consulted before the ceiling on lard prices was set, listed a number of conferences and communications Henderson said were held before the lard order was issued.

The price administrator said a similar chronology of conferences could be prepared for any other farm commodity regarding which the Office of Price Administration has acted.

Billion Boost In Excises Under Study

More than one billion dollars in new and increased excise taxes, submitted but not specifically recommended by the Treasury, last night were reported under study by the Congressional Joint Committee on Internal Revenue.

Tentative schedules under scrutiny were said to include estimates of yields under increases in practically all the items now subject to a Federal excise tax, plus a number of articles not hitherto taxed.

Both Congressional tax spokesmen and Treasury officials meanwhile made clear that no formal tax program to meet the President's request for nine billion dollars in additional levies has yet been completed.

Further Conferences

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and Chairman George of the Senate Finance Committee in separate interviews said there will be further conferences betwen Treasury and Congressional tax experts before formal Treasury recommendations are made, to work out agreements on as many tax proposals as possible.

"We used to send up recommendations from the Treasury without any idea whether they would be acceptable to the Congress or not," Secretary Morgenthau told a press conference.

"This year we are doing it differently, and are trying to get together as nearly as possible with Congress before making any recommendations."

President Roosevelt in his budget message suggested careful study of the field of selective excise taxation. A strong independent movement has developed in Congress for substitution of a general manufacturers excise tax, but it has not had Treasury support.

Gas and Beer on List

At a recent preliminary conference between Treasury and Congressional tax leaders the Treasury submitted for study a group of alternative tax schedules, including the broadened and heightened excise list, but reserved any formal commitment until studies are completed.

Items covered were confidential, but one Congressional tax spokesman indicated they embraced such commodities as gasoline, beer and cigarettes, recommended for an increase last session, but rejected by Congress. Other excises, which Congress increased in the last tax bill, were estimated for a further step-up, and a long list of new items added, this informant said.

Proposed rises in gasoline, beer and tobacco taxes produced one of the sharpest controversies on the last tax bill, and led to final rejection of a 1 cent per gallon increase in the Federal tax on gasoline, a dollar a barrel increase in the excise on beer, and a 1½-cent per pack increase in the 6½-cent tax on cigarettes.

Argentina, Chile Block Solid Front

By Alburn West

Associated Press Staff Writer

Rio de Janeiro, Jan. 12.—A highly placed official here for the Pan-American conference opening Thursday declared tonight that 19 American republics—all save Argentina and Chile—stand ready to approve blanket declarations severing all relations with Germany, Italy and Japan.

This informant said Chile is expected to join the majority when her delegation arrives tomorrow, leaving only Argentina to be won over.

Regardless of what the Buenos Aires government decides, he declared, the unanimous opinion prevails that there can be no compromise as was the case at the Panama and Havana conferences when Argentina's individualism forced modification of major hemisphere projects.

This source added that if Argentina maintains the position outlined recently by her foreign minister—that she would not agree to measures for belligerency or military alliances with other Americas—then they would say to Argentina: "You go your way, we'll go ours."

But the hope was expressed that when heads are counted there would be a solid front and this action would not be necessary.

Heretofore the opinion has been voiced that unless major hemisphere declarations are achieved unanimously the impending conference would be a failure, but significantly the word expressed tonight that lack of unanimity would be considered only as "short of perfection."

It was learned tonight that historic decisions are expected to be reached before or shortly after the opening of Thursday's plenary session.

The present plan is to follow precedent set at the Buenos Aires Conference and introduce all important resolutions jointly in the name of all governments.

In this manner, what probably will be known as "the Declaration of Rio de Janeiro" would be introduced at the opening session or immediately afterward with a minimum of 19 cosigners.

Conference regulations require that all resolutions be filed within 24 hours after the first plenary meeting.

Sumner Welles, United States Undersecretary of State, and other Pan-American delegates arrived here by airplane today for the conference.

Delegates of Cuba, Mexico, Colombia, Ecuador, Bolivia, Peru and Paraguay were here, and Argentina's foreign minister, Enrique Ruiz Guinazu, planned to fly here tomorrow aboard a special plane. Representatives of the other countries were expected also tomorrow.

Rio Conference Is Fulfillment Of Sumner Welles' Aspirations

By Turner Catledge

Rio de Janeiro, Jan. 12—It is summer time down in Rio. From early morning until the hour hand has gone around more than once, the merciless sun beats down on its tile roofs, its beaches and mosaic promenades.

It perhaps is a little hotter than usual, for there is an International Conference of Foreign Ministers here. Even though the representatives of the 21 countries wind up ten days hence in a beautiful demonstration of friendship and accord, there'll be many hot spots in the negotiations in the interim. It is the American privilege—Latin and Nordic—to get "het up."

But there will be one cool place—wherever sits Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State of the United States, head of the United States delegation, spokesman for President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Cordell Hull. Back in Washington the boys in the press gallery call him "Mr. Icicle." They know him, among other things, as a diplomat poured out of the traditional mold, but they know him, too, as one of the shrewdest and ablest men ever to speak for his Government.

Welles cannot be called representative of the American type. He has little in common with the American businessman domiciled in Latin America. He is the very antithesis of the occasional Congressman and Senator who wanders down this way, or the tourist who came here in increasing number before the war.

Welles Is Austere Man

To Latin-Americans, Mr. Welles is more British than American in appearance. He is an austere man with a passion for correctness in manner and dress. Tall and erect, never without his cane, he has the dignity of an old-time Brazilian regent.

But Mr. Welles cannot be judged by his appearance alone, not by a jugful. He has spent a lifetime training himself for his job. Like Franklin Roosevelt, he went to Harvard and Groton. Like many another well-born and well-educated young man, he went immediately into the diplomatic service. He served successfully at Tokyo and Buenos Aires. It was while at the latter that he began dreaming about the international good neighborliness and the Western Hemisphere solidarity which he has come here now to realize.

Studious as well as precocious, he rose rapidly. At the age of 29 he was made head of the Latin-American Division of the State Department. At about the same age he became convinced that the whole trend of our policy toward Latin America was wrong. His persistence in his conviction, plus a personal difference with President Coolidge, caused him to resign in 1925.

Fathered "Good Neighbor"

Mr. Welles kept up his opposition to United States' "dollar diplomacy" in Latin America, however. He gave his views time and again to Franklin D. Roosevelt, and finally saw them articulated by him and the "Good Neighbor" policy of 1933.

Harold Nicolson laid down six specific qualities for the ideal diplomatist in his book "Diplomacy:" Truthfulness, Precision, Calm, Patience, Modesty and Loyalty. As to truthfulness, Mr. Welles is often dangerously frank, particularly in dealing with other diplomats and newspapermen. As to the quality of precision—"write it down" is his motto. He can be annoyingly vague in public speeches, however.

In calm and patience, Mr. Welles probably outranks Mr. Nicolson's prescription. He is a student of poise. Some of his associates maintain jokingly that he wears a top hat to bed. They tell about hot days when his valet shows up at the State Department with a fresh change of clothes for the middle of the day.

Within the limits of his policies and convictions, he can be very stern, however, as some of those who face him across the table this week may learn, if indeed they do not already know. Of one thing they can be sure, however; he sincerely favors inter-American relationship, based solely upon mutual trust, upon reciprocal and scrupulous regard for equal rights among the sovereign American states and upon their economic interdependence.

Creation of this relationship, he feels moreover, must be the first foundation stone in the permanent foreign policy of the United States—the policy that is to outlast the war.

Hotel Group He Heads Honors L. Gardner Moore

More than 100 friends within the hotel fraternity last night honored L. Gardner Moore, who begins his sixth year as president of the Hotel Association of Washington.

The affair in the Mayflower Hotel was directed by a committee from the association that included Russell A. Conn, manager of the Ambassador, general chairman; C. J. Mack, Mayflower general manager, who was toastmaster, and Harry P. Somerville, manager of the Willard, who made a presentation speech. Mr. and Mrs. Moore were given an engraved silver service.

Guests included Representative and Mrs. Jennings Randolph, Renah Camalier, executive assistant to Chairman McCarran of the Senate District Committee, and Mrs. Camalier; Fred Smith, president of the Board of Trade, and Mrs. Smith; Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Morris and Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Cafritz and Thomas D. Green, executive director of the American Hotel Association.

Physician Held In Morphine Selling Case

Sixty-two-year-old Dr. Laurence N. Hynson, 1464 Rhode Island Avenue Northwest, was ordered held for the grand jury yesterday on a charge of selling prescriptions for 9996 grains of morphine.

Mrs. A. L. Jacobs, 50, 940 Eye Street Northwest, also was arraigned before United States Commissioner Turnage. Police said Mrs. Jacobs, alias Janie Mae Gee and already under one narcotic charge, resold Dr. Hynson's prescriptions for as high as $12.50 each.

Bond for Dr. Hynson, who was arrested Saturday, was set at $2500 and for Mrs. Jacobs at $1000 in addition to $1500 in the other case.

Narcotics Bureau Investigator Leroy W. Harriman said Dr. Hynson would be placed in Gallinger Hospital for observation and treatment.

Supreme Court Kills Georgia 'Peonage' Law

By the Associated Press

The Supreme Court struck down a Georgia statute as unconstitutional yesterday on the ground that under it workers could be held in peonage.

The law, passed in 1903, required employes to work out their debts to employers. It provided a year on the chain gang for any person who contracted to perform work for another, received pay in advance, and then failed to do the work or return the money.

The Georgia attorney general defended the law as a measure to punish fraud, but counsel for Ira Taylor, Negro, convicted in a case involving $19.50, contended that it "operates to create and maintain a condition of system of peonage, in which large numbers of unfortunates are still being held."

The court, in an opinion written by Justice Byrnes, declared that "the necessary consequence of the act "is that one who has received an advance on a contract for services which he is unable to repay is bound by the threat of penal sanction to remain at his employment until the debt has been discharged. Such coerced labor is peonage." It held that the law violated the thirteenth amendment, which outlawed slavery and involuntary servitude.

The Justice Department had intervened in the case with the statement that "the Georgia statute hinders the enforcement in that State of Federal criminal statutes safeguarding civil rights secured by the Constitution and laws of the United States." It added that "recent Federal investigations in Georgia have disclosed that the involuntary service of debtors has been coerced in whole or in part by the threat of prosecution under the State statute."

Golf Club Fees Taxable

In another case the court ruled, in an opinion by Justice Jackson, that fees for golfing and other privileges paid by members to country clubs, in addition to the regular membership fees, constitute "dues or membership fees" subject to Federal tax. The ruling applied to fees paid for privileges covering a period of time and not to daily greens fees. The decision was given in cases involving the Winchester (Mass.) Country Club and the Merion (Pa.) Cricket Club.

Tax Conviction Upheld

Joseph Friedman, Atlantic City, failed to get a review of his conviction on charges of evading Federal income taxes for 1935, 1936 and 1937.

He is under sentence to serve ten years in a Federal penitentiary and pay $20,000 in fines.

Ruling in Rail Injury Case

The court held that an injured employe of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Co. was entitled to damages even though he had brought suit without refunding $600 which had been accepted under an agreement providing for its repayment before legal action was instituted. Justice Black delivered the 8-to-0 decision on a claim by Barker Duncan, injured while employed as roundhouse laborer at Nevada, Mo., on April 10, 1936. Justice Roberts did not participate.

New Gas Trial Approved

The court also held that the Texas Supreme Court acted within its rights in ordering a new trial in the Travis County District Court to test the validity of a rate order fixing at 32 cents a thousand cubic feet the price at which the Lone Star Gas Co. can sell gas for consumption in 270 Texas cities and towns.

ICC Order Upheld

The Supreme Court upheld an Interstate Commerce Commission order which granted, over the opposition of 71 railroads, a permit to the John P. Fleming Driveaway Service to transport automobiles by motor vehicle from Detroit to a large number of States.

Counsel for the railroads challenged the commission's finding that Fleming had been in operation sufficiently in 1935 to justify a permit under the Federal Motor Carrier Act of that year. Fleming contended the railroads had no right to bring suit.

Women to Help Modernize Army Menus

Menus for the Army are now in good shape, according to the women who helped revise them—but it is time to start streamlining recipes in the Army cook book.

Mrs. Meryl P. Stone and Mary Barber, accompanied by ten of the country's leading dieticians—here for a nutrition meeting opening Wednesday—will go to Fort Meade today to start research for the book's revision.

The venerable food volume as it is now, the War Department's women pointed out, says to cook spinach for 30 minutes. The modern way, of course, is to cook spinach only three or four minutes.

Suspect Confesses Maryland Murder

Probe Following Bandits' Crash Solves Many Crimes

The speeding coupe which crashed into a tree at Columbia Road and Park Place Northwest last Friday night, carrying one of its three armed Negro occupants to his death, helped police uncover a trail of crime which yesterday had led them to the confessed murderer of a Baltimore grocer and to a band of thieves allegedly implicated in the shooting January 5 of a Washington man who was robbed of more than $500.

In addition, police believed that when their investigation has been completed a dozen or more liquor store robberies here and in Baltimore will have been solved.

Authorities announced last night that a 26-year-old District laborer whom they arrested last Saturday, had verbally confessed the fatal shooting of Vincent DePietro, 45, Baltimore confectioner, who was slain when his store at 79½ South Fremont Street, was robbed by three bandits last December 28.

Booked on an open charge which last night had not been changed, the man was taken into custody after police had searched the home of Charles J. Benjamin, Negro, 22, of 16 Patterson Street Northeast, who was driving the coupe in which he and two othre Negroes allegedly were fleeing from a Baltimore holdup.

The car crashed into a tree in Washington, killing Walter L. Ivey, 23, of 122 Bates Street Northwest, and critically injuring Edward O. Williams, 28, of 1235 Seventh Street Northwest, Benjamin's companions.

Detective Sergt. E. E. Scott, who with Detective Sergt. W. D. Perry and members of the Baltimore homicide squad obtained the alleged confession, said that the search of Benjamin's room revealed numerous liquor bottles identified as those stolen in holdups here and in Baltimore.

On being questioned, Benjamin admitted, Scott said, that he had taken part in a number of holdups here and in Baltimore, in the course of which a man had been murdered.

It was on the strength of information supplied by Benjamin that the man who has confessed and two other men were arrested.

Last night police were looking for a sixth man, also wanted for questioning in the Baltimore slaying and in the other holdups.

Both Benjamin and the man who allegedly admitted the Baltimore slaying, police said, have confessed complicity in the armed holdup on the night of January 5 of Laburn Nicely, 31, 1723 Franklin Street Northeast. Nicely was shot in the left hip and robbed of more than $500 during the holdup which he told police was committed by two men. The shooting occurred in a house in the 600 block of Q Street Northwest.

All five men now in custody, including Benjamin and Williams, are being held on open charges.

FCC Order 'Threatens' Free Speech

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 12.—Counsel for the National Broadcasting Company argued in Federal court today that the Federal Communications Commission, in an order regulating network broadcasting, had usurped the authority of the Federal Court and raised a threat to freedom of speech tantamount to censorship.

John T. Cahill, addressing a three-man court on behalf of N. B. C. and associate broadcasters, appealed for an injunction annulling the FCC order, declaring that otherwise N. B. C. would suffer irreparable injury.

"Broadcasting cannot survive the impact of the FCC order," said Cahill, former United States attorney for the Southern New York District. "A collapse of network broadcasting is an inevitable result unless the court acts speedily."

The FCC orders would bar exclusively in contracts between networks and affiliated stations and would prohibit N. B. C. from owning two networks.

In this connection, Cahill pointed out that N. B. C. already has segregated the assets of the blue network and now operates only one national network, the red.

The Columbia Broadcasting system also is seeking relief from the orders and will present its brief later in the hearing before the special statutory court consisting of Judges Learned Hand, John Bright and Henry W. Goddard.

The Mutual Broadcasting System entered the case as a friend of the court.

Cahill asserted that the FCC had become a self-appointed "efficiency expert" and considered itself more capable of directing the business policies of the broadcasters than their elected executives.

"The FCC without legal right has usurped the authority of the Federal court in seeking to determine that the NBC network operation consistutes an unlawful monopoly," he said.

Strike Cuts Size of Papers In Baltimore

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Jan. 12.—Baltimore's three daily newspapers—the Sun, the Evening Sun and the News-Post—appeared with fewer pages and fewer editions today as the result of a walkout by a faction within the Baltimore Typographical Union following a deadlock in negotiations on a proposed wage scale change.

Some employes of the Daily Record composing room also walked out. There was no picketing.

In a statement to their readers, the Sun papers and the News-Post said that because of the partial walkout "there may be difficulties, during the next day or two, in publishing."

"These difficulties arise from illegal and unjustifiable efforts by a radical faction in the Baltimore Typographical Union to force strikes in the composing rooms of all the Baltimore newspapers," the statement said.

Skeleton crews of union men unsympathetic with the walkout aided in publication of the three papers.

Charles V. Brannock, president of Local No. 12, I. T. U. (Independent), who opposed the walkout action, received a telegram from Claude M. Baker, of Indianapolis, I. T. U. president, saying the action was illegal and directing each member involved to return to work immediately.

Brannock said the union had asked $10 a week increase, but "couldn't reach any agreement" with the papers. He said the present scale was $1.29 an hour for a work week of 36 2-3 hours.

Newspaper officials said the present contract expires at the end of 1942. Wage discussions began last October, and when no agreement was reached, the newspapers said they suggested arbitration "as provided by the contract."

The newspapers charged that "radicals in the union, having got control of its negotiating machinery, repudiated its contract by refusing to arbitrate."

Senate Approves General's Title For Col. Mitchell

By the Associated Press

The Senate passed and sent to the House yesterday legislation which would grant a posthumous promotion to the rank of major general for the lae Col. William L. Mitchel, World War Air Corps chief, who was court-martialed because of his outspoken criticism of Army policies.

As it came before the Senate, and as it was introduced by Senator Wiley (Republican), of Wisconsin, the resolution would have amended the War Department records to give Mitchell the temporary rank of brigadier general, which he held at one period.

The chamber adopted, however, an amendment by Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, to grant the higher rank of major general. The Missouri Senator contended that if any action was taken "we ought to do it generously."

Mitchel, Clark said, was court-martialed when he "came into conflict with the brass hats beacuse he had the courage to advocate that air power was certainly the equal of land power and sea power, and perhaps the predominant factor."

3,516,000 Offer To Aid Civilian Defense Program

Civilian Defense Director F. H. LaGuardia yesterday released figures to show 3,516,000 volunteers enrolled in various OCD services at the end of 1941.

Of these, a total of 1,423,755 were assigned to training for duty in the protective services, he said, with the biggest block of 607,307 volunteers signed up as air-raid wardens.

In the District of Columbia, it was shown, 31,737 persons had enrolled for civilian defense and 23,747 were assigned to training for specific jobs.

Breakdown for the District was as follows: Air-raid warnens, 16,224; auxiliary firemen, 964; auxiliary police, 1350; all other protective services, 3209. No figures were given on numbers of volunteers enrolled for welfare services.

Dad Because... his heaviest work, or his most important conferences, are likely to come in the morning, and he needs to be well fortified with energy to meet these demands.

Mom Because... her hurrying begins before breakfast, and keeps up all day. To avoid nervous and physical exhaustion she needs to take time to eat just as complete a breakfast as she wants Dad and the children to eat.

Youngsters Because... from toddlers through teen-agers, they burn up large amounts of energy during the day. After the overnight fast they need food first thing in the morning to supply the energy they will use before lunch time.

Grandma Because... elderly persons usually find their vitality at a low ebb in the morning, and a good breakfast provides the stimulation needed to get them started for the day.

HOW TO GET THEM TO EAT IT!

It's one thing to get a good breakfast, but it's often another thing to get the family to take time to eat what you have prepared.

Simplest way—though perhaps not so simple as it appears!—is to get every one up and under way 15 minutes earlier than usual, so as to allow time for that important first meal of the day.

Another system followed in many households is for Mother to carry glasses of orange juice to husband and daughter-who-goes-to-work, to drink as they dress, thus leaving more time and creating greater appetites for the actual breakfast.

And dozens of women wait until the "hurry-ups" are all out of the house, before settling down to their own leisurely breakfast and the morning paper. It's mostly a matter of planning—and, as usual, the planning must be done by the homemaker.

While breakfast necessarily follows much the same pattern day after day, there are any number of ways of giving a lift to the meal without adding to Mother's work.

Schulte Amendment

There is no use mincing words about the Schulte amendment to the Alcoholic Beverage Control Act which was passed yesterday by the House. It is above all a shrewdly conceived device to keep from consumers information to which they are unquestionably entitled. The measure would so amend the District Liquor Act that advertising, through any medium, of liquor prices, or the free distribution of information on the subject, would be prohibited. Price lists would even be banned from display windows. Thus, without traipsing from one store to another to ascertain prices, customers would have no way of knowing where to shop to advantage. This, of course, would be an obvious violation of fair trade practice, and, in effect, would cater to the interests of those in a position to dominate the liquor market.

Why the House District Committee approved the amendment in the first place last June, when it was introduced, is unclear. The Commissioners had registered their express opposition to it, as had private individuals. The charitable interpretation of the committee's action, therefore, is that the members felt that some reform of an admittedly undesirable liquor situation was in order. This is still true, but the Schulte amendment is not the answer. So far as the consumer is concerned, it would be decidedly better to have liquor sales subject to accepted fair trade practice in other areas. This should be borne in mind by the Senate District Committee when it considers the Schulte amendment. Indeed, the Senate Committee really ought to appoint a subcommittee to explore the matter thoroughly and to make recommendations that are consistent with consumer interest. For it is perfectly clear that if the Schulte amendment becomes effective, the consumer will be the one who will suffer.

Escort System

Reports that young women employed at night in Government offices have been accosted on the streets and in some cases criminally assaulted draw attention to a police problem that should be assisted in its solution by nightworkers themselves. It is to be expected, of course, that additions to the police force will help keep the city's streets safer. Nightworkers, however, should face squarely the responsibility of not making crime easy. Superior employes should insist upon arrangements within individual offices to take women workers home by private car, taxi, or at least to see that they are accompanied to car stops by fellow employes. Should it ever prove necessary for women to be out alone at night, they should make it their business to avoid such unnecessary risks as parking their cars in alley garages at the end of back lots, taking lonely shortcuts, or walking close to parked cars and doorways. They also should be prompt in reporting any affronts to their nearest police precinct.

American Prisoners

For Americans with relatives or friends in the Far East who have fallen or may fall into Japanese hands, there is at present only agonizing uncertainty. Little specific information as to the Japanese treatment of Americans, combatants and noncombatants, has been made public. Consequently, in appraising the chances of humane treatment, all there is to go on is the Japanese army's black record in China. It is barely possible, of course, that the Japanese will refrain from inflicting on Americans the same barbarities they continue to inflict on the Chinese. But no person with first-hand knowledge of the Japanese army holds out much hope of this and neither should the rest of us. To do so would be to ignore the Japanese concept of total war. We shall not have to wait long before stories of Japanese atrocities, of infuriating indignities heaped on American prisoners, drift back to us.

As yet, however, the chief evidence of Japanese conduct toward civilians in occupied Manila, for example, is the order to all white persons to stay indoors, on penalty of being shot. Gen. MacArthur protested this order as a breach of the rules governing military occupation, but it is only a mild sample of what must undoubtedly be endured. Some of our Canadian military friends have been telling us that we can do with a little more healthy hate for our enemies, and they may be right. Yet to lose ourselves in impotent fury over what the Japanese may or may not be doing to Americans, when we are not yet ready to blast back the invader, is to waste valuable nervous energy which might better be devoted to the business of preparing his eventual defeat. There will come times in the long campaign ahead, when we shall need all the righteous indignation we can muster.

Finish Fight

It is said that the President indulged in some plain speaking to Congressional leaders on the so-called price control measures which are now in conference committee. There was need for plain speaking. Both bills are thoroughly unsatisfactory. But the measure that came out of the Senate—a measure which virtually holds agriculture aloof from price control—merits nothing but condemnation. After all, the House acted before December 7, whereas the Senate made its contribution after war in two oceans had been forced upon the United States. And yet the Senate chose to give this lead of politics as usual, or worse than usual, to a country which can win this war only if all special interests are subordinated to the national interest. We have already commented upon the economic shortcomings of the Congressional measures. But the damaging effect of the Senate measure upon the national unity from which only can stem the will-to-win is at present the most important consideration.

Unity has come to our Nation from the pressure of external events. It is the necessary starting point for a national effort and for a national sacrifice of which as yet we have only a glimmering. Many writers feel that there is still a good deal of apathy to overcome. The sense of urgency, as one commentator puts it, is absent, and in place of the myth that we can never be attacked, we are erecting the myth that in the end we shall win. Of course, we shall win, but the feeling that we shall win will not alone bring victory. Neither will the glittering picture of the resources we can pile up for the feeding of our war engine. Human effort only will win this war, and that effort can be produced only by men and women who are united in their country's defense. Yet how can we expect this requisite dedication when the Senate offers a spectacle of a special interest triumphant over the national interest? How can unity be maintained if the example does not come from the top?

This country is reading with pride of the brave deeds of Americans who have been and are fighting with their backs to the wall in the war in the Pacific. With the pride there goes a good deal of chagrin. If we had put defense first in the days when the handwriting should have been visible on Capitol Hill, the toll might not have been so heavy, and the losses might not have been so great. We have a reparation to make to our gallant dead and a duty to the living upon whose courage we must now depend for our very safety. Those dead are insulted by such spectacles as the Senate provided in the vote on price control. And the living will be discouraged from giving all that they have and are in defending this country. For the Senate gives the impression throughout the country that, in spite of the war in two oceans, it doesn't think that the Nation is in peril. But the Nation is in peril—in such peril that it can be saved only by a single-minded devotion to the Nation, not to a class and not to a section. For whatever is done for a class is obviously at the expense of the Nation. A truce must therefore be called to politics which have already left our defenses in jeopardy. Otherwise all the exhortations for national unity will be as sounding brass and tinkling cymbal.

Thus there can be no compromise with this first effort since December 7 of pressure politics to raise its ugly head as if nothing unusual had happened. The farm bloc has asked for a finish fight. And the President should accept the challenge. He would get the country's support if he vetoed any measure coming out of conference committee which makes one class immune from national legislation, and insisted that for the duration the national interest must be paramount.

Finn And Slav

The prospect that Finland will soon get out of the war is enhanced by the report that Juho Paasikivi has gone to Russia. There is perhaps no other Finnish statesman with more experience in dealing with the Russians. After World War I, when Finland broke away from Russia, he negotiated the peace with Soviet Russia which recognized Finland as an independent country. He was head of the delegation which in 1939 sought unsuccessfully to satisfy Russia's demands prior to the first Finnish-Russian war. Though he could not acquiesce in those demands, which more or less called for the prizes that the Russians obtained in the subsequent war, Mr. Paasikivi was not as Russophobic as most of his fellow countrymen. He believed that Russian motives were defensive. Stalin, he felt, had been forced into Baltic expansionism by fear of Germany and was out to create a safety belt for Russia against Hitler. Stalin's fears were justified when Hitler fell on Russia. But at the time he was stigmatized by most people as an imperialist.

It was in keeping with Mr. Paasikivi's views that he should be one of the first to urge upon the Finns a negotiated peace with Moscow in early 1940. How he has stood in this second Finnish-Russian war is only conjectural. He probably felt, because of Nazi pressure and Finland's economic dependence upon Nazi Germany, that Finland had to bow to the inevitable. At any rate, Mr. Paasikivi's past record will undoubtedly be remembered to his credit at the Kremlin, where he is on good personal terms with Stalin. There is therefore a likelihood that a truce may be arranged, if not a peace. When the time for peacemaking does come, there is at least one argument—assuming the Russian elimination of the Nazi danger to its frontiers—in favor of a just peace. Stalin is rapidly burying his fears of Hitler on the battlefield. Thus there would no longer be any more need to carve out a safety belt at the expense of his Baltic neighbors, Finland included, against Nazi Germany.

Japan's Strategy

The strategy which Japan has pursued since Pearl Harbor, far from involving a dispersion of her forces, has actually consisted of concentrating in great strength at every point where the enemy was weakest, and in that way of preventing a concentration of enemy strength. Each step which the Japanese have so far taken fits into a logical and coherent pattern. That was true of the sudden assault on Pearl Harbor and the simultaneous thrusts against Thailand, the Philippines, Malaya, Hongkong and elsewhere. It explains subsequent events. Singapore still stands, though increasingly menaced as a result of the loss by the British of two-thirds of the Malayan Peninsula, but the Japanese continue to push out farther and farther. The past few days have seen them establish landings at the great oil center at Tarakan, off the northeast coast of Borneo, and at a point on the northern coast of Celebes. The first may have been partly designed with the idea of capturing oil resources which they need, though the indications are that the wells were destroyed before they could get to them. But both of these landing operations brings them nearer to the Java Sea, to Java itself (the richest prize in the Dutch East Indies) and to the Malacca Passage which is the most feasible route between the United States and the Dutch colonies in the southwestern Pacific. It would be of relatively little value to Japan to hold the Philippines and the other regions they have won in five weeks of fighting if sufficient aid could reach the Dutch East Indies to make this territory impregnable against Japanese attack as well as to serve as a supply base from which to reinforce Singapore. Japan's obvious strategy must be to place as many possible obstacles in the way of American aid being rushed to the Dutch East Indies, Australia, Burma and other vital areas as they can. So much is that the case that the risks they are taking, the losses they are suffering, must be regarded by the Japanese strategists as not excessively great.

Yet the Japanese are having to pay a heavy price for their successes. During the last two days the Dutch have succeeded in destroying at least two Japanese transports and damaging four others as well as shooting down a number of Japanese seaplanes. In addition, a Japanese cruiser has been bombed. These losses—and they do not tell the whole story of what it is costing the Japanese to carry on their far-reaching campaign—must be measured, of course, against the possibility that the Japanese will succeed in their aim of establishing a firm foothold at strategic points in the Dutch East Indies. And if they succeed, they can write off the cost of naval vessels and transports sunk and planes destroyed as an excellent investment. They will only begin to feel the effect of the attrition of their forces by Allied counterblows if their progress southward is held up and they fail in their effort to cut the vital supply lines from the American arsenal to the beleaguered Dutch and British areas in the South Pacific. Frenzied as their efforts appear to have been thus far, therefore, the frenzy is well directed, and has accomplished results which we cannot afford to minimize.

M-DAY

It isn't that I'm yellow, sir—
To be afraid like this
Is living with the birds who wear
Their drab in autumn, it's to share
The silent trepidation of the walking stick
Lying safe among his twigs and grass.
It's only that we want to grow
A certain size before we're through.
You've seen a candle-flame clinging to the wick
When the tallow's gone—so I'd like to cling
Until the sap in me is dried with age,
Not missing even the shadow of a lovely thing
That might come close enough for me to see
On the last page,
And then, laden with beauty and hope,
Carry the sweet burden of this world with me
Into eternity.

Looking Backward

If we are to have a better world after this war is over; if we may look forward to the glad fruition of our hopes and prayers, we must first look backward and with unflinching courage face facts which were pregnant with a tragedy of errors. Always we can hope for better things to come but to realize them we must gird up our loins and make our future secure from the errors of the past. We must do this ourselves. No other nation nor any combination of nations will do it for us. Had England and France and the United States kept a standing army of one million men in Germany for ten or fifteen years after the signing of the Armistice, there would have been no Hitler and no blitzkreigs. This army to police Germany and to see to it that her commerce with the outside world was conducted in a fair and impartial manner; that her people enjoyed the fruition of every righteous endeavor. That they be free to come and go at their will, but that as a nation it must be forevermore a democracy and not an aristocracy. A democracy with no standing army of its own. No implements of war; no battle ships of any kind; no war planes, no military academies; no "Heil Hitler." We know now—and should have known in 1920—that Germany, as it was then and is now—is a cancer in the body politic of Europe and a thorn in the side of the world. Germany is a disease which must be eradicated at any cost. We are told there are many good people in Germany but so long as they are led and controlled by a half crazed bastard dog, that will remain an open question.

That to maintain a standing army of one million men in Germany would entail a huge expense, is too true for argument, too obvious for dispute, but compared with the cost to us alone of prosecuting this present war, it may be reckoned in centimes rather than billions of good American dollars and we have just begun to spend money.

Render Unto Caesar

What do the "little people" of the United States think of the attitude of industry and labor as evidenced in the full page advertisement you carried a few days ago and again last night in the Town Meeting discussion? Could any one listen to it without thinking of the "two hundred families" of France and the Confederation Generale there?

What are these gentlemen afraid of? If labor has ideas, why can't management use them? If management has the ideas, why don't they go ahead? No one could read what they wrote without seeing fear sticking out in every line.

"Evil men want to take over their properties." Have these gentlemen forgotten that it was their honor, not their property to which our forefathers attached the adjective "sacred."

Guidance For Youth

If in the youthful years of Adolf Hitler, there had been in Austria an administration to give help, training and understanding guidance to the youth of that country, I feel sure that Hitler would have never been heard of, but would have developed into a healthy, normal citizen. In regard to discontinuing our National Youth Administration, I give warning that there are American boys and girls who, if denied social help, may become a menace, like Hitler, to this Nation and the world.

Civilian Defense

Let's try to be fair about the OCD. Civilian defense in this country is, true enough, inadequately organized. But let's ask ourselves why—really why—before we impetuously blame Mayor LaGuardia for all the evils of civil unpreparedness.

We're awake now, but we've been so for only a month. We woke up one Sunday morning—December 7, 1941, to be precise—and suddenly realized with horror that American cities were by no means immune from the fate that struck London, Coventry and Pearl Harbor. We shuddered at the thought that we had no gas masks, no fire-fighting equipment, no bomb-proof shelters, no real system of meeting enemy raids. And so we pointed in accusation at the Mayor of New York and asked him why.

How quickly we've forgotten the total indifference of the American people to the possible danger of death from the sky. We simply hadn't learned. We had two oceans, we said, and they would protect us. Yes, London could be bombed. So could Berlin and the cities of northern Italy and Chungking and Belgrade and Moscow. But not San Francisco or New York. The idea was absurd, and it was treated in that light. Congress itself set the motif for the attitude of all citizens toward Mayor LaGuardia and his OCD. It was Congress that refused to act on the mayor's request to equip the Nation against danger. It was Congress that sneered and laughed and ridiculed. And the people back home sank a little more deeply into their easy chairs and sighed with relief. If Congress felt that way about it, why should they worry?

Civilian defense was a game until that nightmarish Sunday a month ago. A few people played at it pretty seriously, but most of us stood back and smiled smugly. It was all right if you liked that sort of puerile fun, but most folks preferred a movie.

There is nothing wrong with the mayor. He and his staff knew their jobs. We didn't. And Congress didn't. The OCD has been a flop, but it isn't LaGuardia's fault. It's our fault. The fault of Congress, the people—yes, and the press—who thought civilian defense antics were cute but unimportant. Let's have the decency now to recognize that fact. And, having recognized it, let's do with double vigor that which we—all of us—failed to do in the long months and years before Pearl Harbor.

The War's Duration

The President's and other Government officials' planning for a long war is right and proper in war time. It is always best to overestimate than to underestimate, not only to insure a steady flow of cash to attain ultimate success of our arms, but also to discourage the enemy by showing him we mean business and are able to effect what we plan. Our ability to produce is very apparent to our antagonists. They should know most emphatically that our people are united full-heartedly in the effort.

My humble opinion is, this conflict will end within a year, and long before we plunge our maximum armed forces in this war madness.

The gist of my script is that the sheer weight of our resources will assert itself upon the enemy and shatter his morale.

Bombing Washington

Among other war news we now hear from "reliable" military sources that the two big German dirigibles, the Graf Zeppelin and her LZ sister, will be loaded with small bomber planes and "glide silently" over to bomb our big cities. Trivial details as to the chances of such large aircraft as the Zepps not being spotted somewhere between Wilhelmshaven (if they are there now) and the Atlantic Coast, and what will become of the small bomber planes after they leave the Zepps are ignored. The bomber planes will have to land sooner or later, and if not in the Atlantic Ocean, then somewhere in the United States.

While there may be pilots in Hitler's Luftwaffe willing to go on "sacrifice" flights like their Japanese allies, there haven't been many indications of such as yet, and with the walloping going on in Russia and what the R. A. F. is doing to them, it may be some time before the admirers of Horst Wessel will embark on what is a one-way trip to the U. S. A. While such trips would be possible, the question of probability arises at once; perhaps since the "reliable" military sources can penetrate the mind of Fuehrer Adolf at several thousand miles' distance, probability may be stronger than we think.

But whether air raids come from the two Zepps or planes launched by the Zepps, or carrier-borne planes, those responsible for the erection of the Jefferson Memorial have furnished a fine guide for enemy aircraft. When directly over that highly-visible dome and heading almost compass north, releasing of bombs will lay the eggs somewhere south of the Jackson monument. It is reasonable to suppose that the Potomac and the two channels will be used as guides, since they show up in all lights or the absence of any light at all. And the Jefferson Memorial gives the turning point for a sweep north over a vital section of Washington.

This is no hush-hush revelation. Until recently, anyone could buy air maps of localities along the Atlantic Coast, and many stores in Washington sold them in sections covering the heart of the National Capital. That maps and other information are not possessed by foreign general staffs by this time is to credit them with infantile incapacity.

Older Workers

How about drafting older men between the ages of 50 to 70 to train them for wartime jobs, providing, they can stand a physical examination.

There are plenty of men between that age that would fit in some jobs more efficiently than some younger men. Many of these men have had wide experience, both in business and executive work, and could be placed at an advantage to all.

Such conscription would, of course, represent a radical step away from past tradition. However the adoption would benefit a large group that are now dependent on some one else for their daily bread. I am sure if a survey were made it would prove that the Government would get many efficient men, and would help many that are now in need.

There should be no question as to age at this time if a man is mentally and physically active. Most of our high Government and State officials are men of mature age.

The Post Impressionist

Literary Dictator

Napoleon Bonaparte, whose brilliant military strategy Hitler, at times, endeavors to copy, was a rather prolific writer during those few years when his time was not entirely occupied with war and statecraft.

His works were gathered and published some years ago by the French man of letters, Tancrede Martel. Among them are many unpublished articles written by the little Emperor.

As the great Napoleon's works they are interesting although they might not be recognized as works of literary genius in the magazine world today.

A short sketch entitled "The Masked Prophet," written by Napoleon at Ajacio in 1786 when he was but 17 years of age, clearly reveals the literary streak being developed in the mind of the dark little Corsican. It reads:

"In the year 160 of the hegira, Mikadi reigned at Bagdad. This prince, great, generous, enlightened, magnanimous, saw the Arabian Empire prosper in peace. Feared and respected by his neighbors, he was occupying himself with cultivating the sciences, when peace was disturbed by Hakem, who, from the depths of Khorassan, began to gather partisans in all parts of the empire. Hakem, who was splendid of stature, gifted with manly and convincing eloquence, called himself the envoy of God. He taught a pure morality, which pleased the multitude. Equality of rank and fortune was the ordinary text of his sermons. The people flocked to his standard. Hakem had an army.

"The Caliph and his nobles felt the necessity of crushing in the beginning such a dangerous insurrection, but their troops were beaten several times and Hakem gained fresh strength every day.

"But a terrible disease, resulting from the fatigues of war, disfigured the face of the Prophet. He was no longer the handsomest of Arabs. His noble and severe features, his large eyes full of fire, were disfigured. Hakem became blind. This change threatened to weaken the enthusiasm of his partisans. He therefore hit upon the idea of wearing a silver mask.

"He appeared in the midst of his followers; Hakem had lost none of his eloquence. His speech had the same strength; he spoke to them and convinced them that he only wore the mask to save them from being blinded by the light from his face.

"He expected more than ever from the people whom he had raised to delirium, when the loss of a battle ruined his plans, diminished his partisans and weakened their belief in him. He was besieged with a small garrison.

"'Hakem, either you must perish or your enemies will seize you!'

"He gathered all his partisans together and said to them: 'My faithful followers, you whom God and Mahomet have chosen to restore the empire and reform our nature, why does the number of your enemies dishearten you? Listen to me. Last night, when you were plunged in sleep, I prostrated myself and said to God 'Father, Thou has protected me for many years; have I or my people offended Thee since Thou art abandoning us?' A moment later I heard a voice saying to me 'Hakem, only those who have not abandoned thee are thy true friends, and they alone are the chosen ones. They shall share with thee the riches of they haughty enemies. Wait until the new moon comes; dig great ditches; and thy enemies shall fall into them as flies overcome by the smoke.'

"The ditches were soon dug. They filled one with lime and set barrels filled with strong drink along the edge.

"When that had been done Hakem and his followers feasted together. They drank the same wine and all died with the same symptoms. Hakem dragged their bodies to the lime which consumed them, set fire to the liquors and threw himself in. The next day the troops of the Caliph advanced, but they stopped when they saw the open doors of the tents. They entered with precaution and found a woman, the mistress of Hakem, the only one of his followers who had survived him.

"Such was Hakem, surnamed Durhal, whom many believed to have been translated to heaven with his followers."

The "dark little archaic personage" as H. G. Wells calls Napoleon was apparently as great a lover as he was a conqueror, and as fervent in affection as he was brave on the battlefield. This is evidenced in the following letter to his wife Josephine, written from Milan after he had received word of her faithlessness. "Be happy," he wrote in part, "do not concern yourself about me; do not interest yourself in the happiness of a man who lives only in your life, who enjoys only your happiness. When I require from you love such as mine, I do wrong; why should I wish that lace should weigh as much as gold? When I sacrifice to you all my desires, all my thoughts, all the moments of my life, I yield to the ascendancy which your charms, your character, your whole being has gained over my wretched heart. I am wrong if nature has not given me attractions to fascinate you; but what I do deserve from Josephine is her esteem, her respect; for I love her alone.

"Adieu, adorable wife, adieu my Josephine. Let fate concentrate in my heart all sorrows, and all griefs; but joy be given to my Josephine. Who merits it more than she? When it shall be proved that she can love no more, I will conceal my profound grief, and I will content myself with being useful and of some advantage to her.

"I re-open my letter to give you one kiss. Ah! Josephine! Josephine!"

Some interesting maxims written when Napoleon was in exile include:

"A man must wish to live and know how to die."

"Where is the man who would not be stabbed if he could be Caesar. A little ray of his glory would repay one handsomely for an early death."

"Everything passes away quickly on earth except the opinion we leave impressed on history."

"Great glory prolongs the memory of man beyond the centuries."

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Soft Leadership

IN THE FIVE WEEKS since Pearl Harbor the President has necessarily devoted his main attention to planning and organizing the common war effort of the United Nations. This has required the making of decisions on questions of strategy, of diplomacy, and of supply which embrace the whole world, and in this work no one can substitute for the President, nor is any one even nearly his equal in competence.

LIPPMANN

But there is a limit to the endurance and to the energy of any man, and while Mr. Roosevelt has been planning the war abroad, he has not had the time, or the freshness of mind, to organize the war at home. Yet the outcome of the war abroad depends upon what is done here at home.

During these five weeks it has become very evident that the necessary things cannot be done here at home until the President reorganizes and reinforces his own Administration.

THE WEAKNESS of the present system—the pre-Pearl Harbor system—is glaringly obvious. We have seen the Army-Navy-OPM system caught without the necessary plans for expanding the military requirements and for expanding production by the conversion of commercial industry. We have seen that no adequate provision was made for conserving the supplies and for amassing stock piles of rare and imported materials which were certain to be cut off when war broke out. We have seen that no one in the Administration was able to offer firm and commanding leadership in the critical matter of labor-management relations or of price control. We have seen a lamentable lack of coherence in the several agencies which deal with foreign affairs—that is to say the State Department, the Donovan and the Rockefeller organizations, the Wallace board, Mr. Jesse Jones and the Maritime Commission. We have seen the Office of Civilian Defense.

In none of these fields is there as yet clarity of purpose, definite and sufficient authority, and in some critical positions there are bottlenecks of downright incompetence.

WEAKNESS cannot be remedied by making a new blueprint chart and then reshuffling the same old faces. For the seat of the trouble is that the President himself has not fully adjusted his own mind and habits to the size and the complexity and the difficulty of the undertaking in which he is engaged. For that reason he does not delegate power and responsibility. For that reason he does not dismiss men to whom power and responsibility cannot be delegated, and he does not call in men to whom it can be delegated. For that reason, in the solution of the great problems of war organization the first consideration is almost invariably how to save someone's face rather than how to do most effectively what should be done.

This is soft leadership—in quality far below what the country is ready for and in spirit far below what the occasion calls for. Not only will it fail to produce the results which, as Commander in Chief, the President must have in order to win the war, but it will strain to the breaking point the patience of the people, and it will before long, if it is not remedied, grievously impair the President's leadership.

FOR MR. ROOSEVELT is operating under a system where the whole responsibility is concentrated upon himself alone, and as a result every mistake and every failure falls upon him alone, and every criticism, no matter how constructive and loyally wholehearted, whittles away at his prestige and his influence here and throughout the world. This is a very serious matter. For no sane and conscientious man in Congress or in the press or on the platform can wish to do anything but to uphold the hands of the President, to lighten his burdens, and to strengthen him. He is the President of the United States for the duration of the war, and the fate of the country is in his hands.

But it is impossible to suspend criticism of inadequacy, incompetence, or failures in the administration of the war effort. Yet because Mr. Roosevelt maintains a personal and a paternalistic and protective relation with his appointees, never standing them up on their own feet with clear and fixed responsibility, every criticism directed against a lieutenant strikes the Commander in Chief. Loyalty to subordinates is a great and engaging quality. But it ought not to be confused with denying them power on the one hand and then, chivalrously, refusing to hold them responsible.

THE EXTREME EXAMPLE, which however illustrate the principle, is the case of Mrs. Roosevelt and the Office of Civilian Defense. In theory the President appointed Mayor LaGuardia as Director and the Director appointed Mrs. Roosevelt as assistant. What has been the result? There is deep dissatisfaction throughout the country with the way civilian defense has been administered—a sentiment clearly reflected in the vote in the House of Representatives, and indeed acknowledged by the President in his appointment of Mr. Landis.

Yet though Mr. Landis has been brought in, Mayor LaGuardia and Mrs. Roosevelt remain more or less where they were, and nobody will know who really has authority in civilian defense or where the responsibility lies. Now in the case of Mrs. Roosevelt this is particularly awkward and embarrassing. She is the wife of the President and the First Lady of the land. At the same time she administers important aspects of civilian defense and she makes daily pronouncements upon matters of great public interest. To whom is Mrs. Roosevelt accountable? To Mayor LaGuardia? To Mr. Landis? Is she to be immune from public criticism, as she was, for example, in the Congressional debates when everyone was thinking about her and no one mentioned her? If so, then she occupies a dangerously privileged position. On the other hand, if she is to be treated as any other public official, the fact that she is Mrs. Roosevelt and that she lives in the White House means that everything she does involves her husband, and every criticism of her is an injury to the prestige of her husband.

THERE IS, of course, no one else in the Administration who is so indissolubly connected with the President. But there are many others who, because of the President's loyalty to his friends, are carried along and nursed along as members of a political family. They are reshuffled but almost never displaced, and the weak sisters have to be supported by the President, and to save their faces, they are kept on, thus blocking the promotion of abler men.

Wars cannot be won by such soft, cosy good-fellowship in the highest places. For in war the test is results and not good intentions, success and not amiability, efficiency and not auld lang syne.

State Of Siege

By Everett Bauman

Argentine Neutrality

Buenos Aires.

ARGENTINA'S "state of siege"—originally clamped down by acting President Ramon Castillo as part of the Pan American solidarity program—is now being used to suppress anti-Fascist groups and pro-democratic demonstrations throughout the country.

Freedom of speech and press have been suspended on the theory that Argentina's neutrality during the war must be preserved, as well as its solidarity with the United States.

On December 16, Minister of Interior Miguel Culaciati warned newspapers not to print anything "that affected the neutrality of Argentina by criticizing foreign governments, political ideologies, or heads of state." The government's foreign policy, defined as "the defense of the American continent and friendly relations with all other states," must also be immune from attack.

Thus, although Argentina has formally declared its solidarity with the United States against the aggressors, no editorials may appear in newspapers that attack Japan, Germany and Italy. Nazi-inspired attacks on the United States are also forbidden, but as they were few in comparison the government's curb is much more effective when applied to pro-democratic opinion.

FOR EXAMPLE, newspaper censorship hits the pro-democratic press much harder than the pro-Nazi. Six of the seven Spanish language dailies in Buenos Aires are anti-Nazi. Such famous organs as La Prensa and La Nacion—stanch supporters fo the Allied cause—have been reduced to furious impotence in their editorial columns. Two papers came out with great white spaces on their front pages, explaining that they were forbidden criticism of the dictators and could find nothing good to say.

El Pampero, financed by the local German embassy, has been silenced in its anti-Semitic attacks, but still publishes the alleged legal records of Jewish misbehaviors in Germany and central Europe. Although it no longer can attack "Yankee imperialism," it can publish maliciously false news reports—such as the one that the United States had arranged with Great Britain to take over the Falkland Islands in return for more destroyers.

Only one paper has been suppressed outright so far. It was a provincial sheet that headlined: "Corporal Hitler takes over from the Great Marshal Brauchitsch." This was construed by the authorities as a slight aimed at the head of a foreign state.

Censorship also affects foreign news agencies. One American agency was reprimanded for its report on the banning of a public mass meeting in tribute to President Roosevelt. Cables are not censored directly, but news agencies and cable companies are held responsible for what they send.

ONE intimidated telegraph company refused to deliver the message of a local anti-Nazi editor to Norman Armour, the American Ambassador, promising him support against the Axis.

When the mass meeting honoring President Roosevelt was called off, it was officially explained to the American Ambassador that the action was taken for purely internal reasons. The government offered to allow a message from Roosevelt to the suppressed meeting read over the radio. The offer was refused.

A women's organization, planning a similar meeting in honor of Mrs. Roosevelt, evaded government restriction by holding a "Liberty Rally." Native dances of the democracies were displayed, but no speeches allowed. The huge audience rose for a moment of silent tribute to the "purpose" of the meeting.

When a demonstration at the local statue of George Washington was called off by the police, individual demonstrators came throughout the day, leaving behind floral tributes.

There are two theaters in Buenos Aires devoted exclusively to the showing of German propaganda films, such as "War in the East," running here for weeks to half-empty houses. When the March of Time film entitled "Hitler's Promises of Peace," appeared last week, police ordered the name of Hitler dropped from the title. This was done, and the film was allowed to continue.

PUBLIC disapproval of the government's action is widespread, but Argentina does not have the long-standing tradition of individual liberty as exists in the United States. This is the seventeenth time that "state of siege" has been proclaimed in 30 years. Revolutions are not chronic here, as they are in some Latin American states. Moreover, the army, with many German-trained officers, fully sympathizes with the government's present policy.

The overwhelming pro-American sentiment of the populace is evidenced at the theaters, where Hitler is regularly hissed on the screen. Roosevelt and other American leaders enthusiastically cheered. Today Argentine movie audiences will even applaud such solid evidence of Yankee strength as the American fleet.

Two youths marking up pro-Fascist slogans at Rosario, second city of Argentina, were set upon by a crowd of infuriated citizens last week. Police had to be called out to rescue the pair.

NEWSPAPERS, although muzzled, may still resort to ridicule. One notable cartoon appeared recently, showing a hapless schoolteacher with an unmistakable likeness to President Castillo, trying to enforce neutrality upon a classroom of unruly boys.

Coming immediately after Argentina had declared its solidarity with the United States, the state of siege has stifled all public discussion of what Argentina's policy should be at the Rio conference. Public opinion forced the government to comply fully with the Havana pact and declare solidarity. Its absence now will not make the Argentine leaders more disposed toward active inter-American cooperation at Rio.

Castillo has held two closed cabinet sessions to determine what the Argentine policy will be. No results have been announced and the Argentine delegation is expected to depart without having made its attitude public. There may be some official sentiment favoring Pan-American convoys because Argentine's economy is so dependent upon foreign trade. Shortage of shipping space is particularly acute and the government has recently purchased 20 stranded Italian and Danish vessels. These need protection as they are sailing only to British and American ports.

Complete refusal may be expected of any American request for bases along the long, unprotected Argentine coastline. However, if the Argentine military commission now at Washington is given priority on arms purchases, the Argentines themselves may promise to fortify their exposed southern flank. Even the Yankee haters here agree upon the need for new naval and air bases in vulnerable Patagonia.

No Confiscation Of Funds Planned, Morgenthau Says

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., denied yesterday that the Government had any plan or intention of confiscating savings deposits.

He gave reporters a statement saying:

"In view of recurring rumors that the Government is planning to confiscate savings accounts, Secretary Morgenthau today entered an emphatic denial that this was so.

"'I wish to state most emphatically that there are no foundations whatsoever for such rumors,' Mr. Morgenthau said.

"'The Federal Government does not have under consideration any proposal regarding the confiscation of saving deposits of this country for any purpose.

"'Furthermore,' he added, 'any one circulating rumors of this character is acting against the welfare of the Nation.'"

Wartime Washington

By Merlo Pusey

Our Third Legislature

WHATEVER may be said of the District budget that went to Congress last week, it was a local budget. It was not prepared or even extensively mulled over by the Federal Budget Bureau. Department heads of the District government submitted their estimates to the Commissioners months ago, public hearings were held and the program of expenditures for fiscal 1943 was then outlined by District Budget Director Fowler under the general supervision of the city fathers. That budget has now gone to Congress without being torn to pieces by Federal officials unfamiliar with the Capital's needs.

PUSEY

Plenty of shortcomings may be found in this budget. But the procedure by which it was adopted certainly represents notable reform in Washington's chaotic municipal system. Only a few years ago the Budget Bureau took full responsibility for the local estimates sent to Congress. District officials were called before Federal budget officers to explain and justify every item for which an appropriation was requested. The judgment of local official was frequently reversed or partly disregarded. For budgeting purposes the District was merely another bureau of the Federal Government.

Budget Director Harold Smith changed this arrangement about two years ago so that full responsibility for Washington's budget falls upon the Board of Commissioners, where it belongs. Federal officials now review the program of expenditures recommended by the Commissioners only in so far as it affects national agencies or interests. The proposed Federal contribution to the Capital is checked; likewise the amount to be repaid to the Federal Treasury on account of loans to the District. But even in such matters as these District officials are consulted before changes are effected at the Budget Bureau.

IN EFECT, therefore, the District budget has been divorced from the Federal budget. No doubt it would be desirable to go a step farther and print the two budgets separately, to avoid any possible confusion as to the local and national spending program. Still, it appears that a reasonable working relationship has ben established. Perhaps it is a very small victory to have appointed local officials preparing plans to spend funds collected from voteless Americans. But at least this centralization of control in local officials lets the community know who is responsible for the District budget when it goes to Congress.

The amazing fact is that the Budget Bureau continues to function as a sort of third legislature for the Nation's Capital in the case of bills that have nothing to do with appropriations. Before the city fathers can send to Congress any recommendation or report concerning proposed or pending legislation they must first inform the Budget Bureau. If that Federal agency does not approve the proposed bill it is as dead as a dodo before it ever reaches Capitol Hill. To be sure, the Commissioners could send a rejected bill along to Congress accompanied by a statement to the effect that this bill is not in accord with the President's program. But as a matter of practice they don't send such measures to Capitol Hill because it would be a waste of time. The simple fact is that the Budget Bureau has the veto power upon any legislation that may originate in the District government.

Nor is that the extent of the power wielded by Federal budgetary officials over the local government. No representative of the Capital City can advocate or oppose legislation before any committee of Congress without ascertaining and reporting to the committee whether or not it is in accord with the President's (in practical effect the Budget Bureau's) program. In short, the Budget Bureau may hamstring this city of 800,000 residents any time it sees fit to do so.

THE ABSURDITY of this situation is particularly glaring when we remember that the bureau has virtually eliminated itself as a factor in making up the District budget. If there is any field in which it is competent to serve this local community it is in budget making. It has no special competence to serve as a sort of third legislative chamber to pass on what are in effect municipal ordinances for the City of Washington. Yet it continues to exercise precisely that function.

In some instances the Budget Bureau has pigeonholed or rejected proposals from the District Building. In many more cases it has required changes in measures sponsored by the city fathers. Frequently, of course, it has given the city fathers good advice. No doubt that advice is much appreciated, or would be if it came in the form of advice without the threat of a veto behind it. But a local government is in an impossible position when it cannot appeal directly to its own legislative body without having its recommendations censored and perhaps suppressed by an outside agency responsible to neither.

Here again the local authorities and Budget Bureau officials have managed to work in cooperation in most instances. It is a piece of good fortune for Washington that they are disposed to adjust differences instead of fighting every issue to a bitter end. But that does not minimize the disadvantage of muzzling the local government, particularly in time of emergency. Even if there were perfect accord between the two agencies, it would remain a grave mistake to divide the responsibilities of speaking for Washington between them.

THE QUESTION of time in the passage of legislation has become vitally important since the United States got into the war. Emergency bills will be coming up with far more regularity than in the past. And since Washington is the nerve center of the Nation, the way in which they are handled will have a bearing upon our war effort. To route such measures through the slow procedure of the Budget Bureau, after they have cleared the District Building, is equivalent to sending a battleship through the Straits of Magellan instead of the Panama Canal.

These are days when we are stripping our industrial and economic systems for the most efficient action. Where there are bottlenecks in government that magnify confusion without serving any useful purpose, they ought to be eliminated as a simple matter of expediency. Of course, the chaos in which the local government is enveloped should have been lifted years ago as a means of improving the services it renders. Now the war has given new urgency to the common sense that has been so long ignored.

U. S. Asks Governors to Help Stop 'Pirating' of Labor

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Jan. 12.—A War Department spokesman told Southern Governors today that their job in beating the Axis is to work with the Federal Government and see that, in their States, there is no labor piracy and no indiscriminate recruiting.

John H. Ohly, special assistant to the Secretary of War, asserted that the Governors must guide the transition of younger men into the military and older men into industry.

"Your duty as war Governors," said Ohly, "is to see this task through. You assume a major role in helping the Federal Government work out great national problems."

Attempts may be made, because of growing labor shortages, to "pirate" workers from one plant to another, and the spokesman said such activity must be halted. Similarly, he said, every effort must be made to avoid indiscriminate recruiting of men who could serve better in some civilian job.

In connection with the war effort, Gov. J. Melville Broughton said North Carolina had "abandoned or indefinitely postponed" political activity for the duration.

Gov. Prentice Cooper of Tennessee outlined Southern freight rates and their effect on the South's all-out defense manufacturing effort, a subject scheduled for consideration.

"Our view," he said, "is that lower freight rates now are more important than ever in the history of the South. The Nation is in an all-out production effort, and now is not the time for trade barriers.

"What we ask is equality with other sections of the country, the lowering of sectional barriers."

India And The War

Opportunity For A Vital Role

THE REPORT that Mohandas K. Gandhi has asked to be relieved of his leadership of the Indian National Congress is an item of news of the greatest significance. This act in itself opens up the way to the harnessing of India's vast resources of manpower and materials to a fuller co-operation in the Allied war effort.

Some such move as this, on the part of the Mahatma, had been expected for some weeks. Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, his lieutenant and one of the most potent voices in the Congress councils, had already declared himself in favor of full support for Great Britain in the early part of December, shortly after his release from jail.

The reasons for this sudden step toward a turn around in the settled policy of the Indian National Congress are not difficult to find. For the first time in 200 years India is faced with a physical threat to her safety.

Japanese troops have crossed the border into Burma. Japanese bombers have made at least two heavy raids on Rangoon. Burma is the outpost of Assam and Calcutta. Further south the fortress of Singapore, which guards the entrance to the Indian Ocean from the east is seriously imperiled. The bugbear of a Japanese invasion of India itself, which has for a decade exercised the minds of the General Staff of Delhi, is no longer a dream, but a dire possibility.

INDIA IS, in fact, faced with a problem similar to the one which has just been forced upon the people of the United States. She has been brought abruptly near to the vortex of the war. It is no wonder then that there is uneasiness in political circles at Wardha.

The significance of Mahatma Gandhi's decision and the declaration of Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru lies in the importance of these two men in the councils of the Indian National Congress. For 20 years the former has been the unquestioned leader of the movement for independence, although often the policies, which he has laid down, have not always been acceptable in theory to many of the less uncompromising and more realistic followers. The latter has been recognized as the unofficial Foreign Secretary of the Party to whom Gandhi has been accustomed to turn for advice on matters of foreign policy.

At the same time Nehru, one of the extremists in the Congress ranks, has in the past been a most vigorous opponent of co-operation with the British government. The Pandit's changed views together with the Mahatma's self-denying ordinance must have the most profound effect upon the other leaders and the rank and file of the most powerful single political party in India. These two facts together must inevitably go far in swinging the country more fully behind the war effort.

THERE ARE certain factors about India which make her a vital force in the world struggle against totalitarianism. Firstly, India is democratic at heart and fundamentally opposed to the imperialistic aggressions of Germany and Japan. Secondly, she has the largest reserves of man power in the world, outside China. Thirdly, her natural resources and her industrial potential can make her the Asiatic arsenal of democracy. Fourthly, a Delhi-Chungking axis is the only logical reply to Japanese pretentions in the East.

To within a few weeks ago the chances of India fulfilling all or any of these roles were remote. The Congress Party, who alone in India can produce some united effort in the country, was making its protest against the political setup by a strategy of noncooperation. A state of stalemate, recently more confounded by Winston's Churchill's unfortunate statement in regard to India's future under the Atlantic Charter, had resulted in the breakdown of constitutional government in 7 out of 12 provinces.

The more extreme nationalist leaders were arriving at the climax of their disillusionment and some, like Subhash Chandra Bose, were tending to turn to the enemy as the only means by which they felt they could achieve their independence. In such a state neither the human nor the industrial riches of the country could be harnessed in full strength behind the war.

The realization of the key position of India in the coming struggle in the East may have been one of the reasons for the recent release of the imprisoned noncooperating congressmen by the British authorities. If this were the explanation then the success of the maneuver has been immediate. With further wise steps toward a solution of the main Indian problem the success may be complete and that paradox of India in a world where the principles of freedom and democracy are struggling against the forces of oppression, may be solved.

ANYHOW there can be no question of the infinite possibilities which lie in the National Congress' altered stand on India and the war. Years ago Nippon was looked upon as the inspiration of all Eastern countries who were striving to be free from western imperialism. By 1931 Japan had lost her master position. Since then India has become progressively more apprehensive of a yellow imperialism and has turned in mutual sympathy to China. During the course of the past few years Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru has spent time and thought over the creation of a solid Indo-Chinese front. Now might be the occasion for the tightening of those bonds and the formation of a powerful antitotalitarian bloc, stretching over 10,000 miles from the China Sea to the Indian Ocean.

The appointment of Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell to supreme command in the Pacific theater of war may have some bearing on this vital problem. There are few leaders on the Allied side who have a better understanding of the political position and the military potentialities of India. Although the Congress, so far, has only taken negative action in revising its domestic policy of noncooperation and in expressing sympathy with all countries overrun by aggressors, particularly Malaya, China, Burma and Russia, the inexorable pressure of events must force it into a more positive stand. If a compromise can be brought about between the British government and the Congress Party which will align them wholeheartedly side by side, then a load of anxiety would be lifted off the shoulders of Allied strategists. Although the Japanese threat will immediately weaken the military position in the Near East and Libya which depend for much of their reinforcement and supplies on India, in the long view by facing the Congress with hard facts and thus bringing it into cooperation with the British government, the Jap attack will enormously strengthen the eventual flow of men and materials into the common struggle.

If Britain can win the loyal support of the Indian National Congress and can have the assurance of full cooperation, then India, which is the arch of the whole Allied position from Suez to Hawaii, will be able to play a vital role in the progress toward victory in this World War.

Incoming Picture Play Boasts 'Literary' Script

'How Green Was My Valley' Is a Rare Work; Eddie Cantor Gives Flag a Permanent Wave; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

THIS COLUMN'S CONVICTION that "How Green Was My Valley" is one of the cinema's great achievements, up almost until now, has been based on hearsay. A perniciously recurrent combination of ornery circumstances has prevented our seeing the firm from the invitation to the New York premiere, that couldn't be accepted, through all of the previews that have been held locally since. But now we are more than ever convinced—still without having seen it—that "How Green Was My Valley" is a great picture. It must be.

WALTER PIDGEON

We reach this conclusion after having read the "second revised, final" working script from which the Twentieth Century-Fox production was made, presented to this desk recently by Jules Fields, passing through on a flying visit.

A motion picture scenario ordinarily is no place to look for what is commonly referred to as "literary quality." Yet the script for "How Green, etc." has it in abundance. With the description of the scenes printed parallel with the dialogue and commentary, this 169-page blueprint of the picture takes on the life, the beauty—albeit beauty of a slightly somber sort—and much of the dignity of Richard Llewellyn's novel. One is able to read into it, too, something of the fine discretion with which T. C.-F. has cast the picture—Walter Pidgeon, Maureen O'Hara, Donald Crisp, Roddy McDowell, et al.

We raise the battered Homburg and bend in a deep bow to Philip Dunne, who adapted the film play from the book, for the pleasure we have derived from his picture even without ever having viewed it. Seeing it, when it opens at the Palace, Thursday, we suspect, will be one of the major experiences of something that is creeping up relentlessly toward four decades of constant screen-gazing.

It has a bit of the tinge of that "man bit dog" business about it. I mean the idea of a couple of uniformed service men, writing a patriotic song to bolster the morale of their mates and the folks back home. If the George M. Cohans, Irving Berlins, Howard Actons and the rest of them have thought they had a civilian corner on this sort of thing, they now can find out how wrong they have been. Buddy Grover and Ralph Glaser are the lads who have reversed the usual order. Between their tricks of fatigue duty as members of the Thirtieth Engineers, stationed at Fort Belvoir, Va., they have found time to knock out an item titled, "We Salute You, Uncle Sam" that is said to send tingles racing up and down the most useful places. It will be introduced for the first time publicly in a special overture arranged by Director Jo Lombardi for the bill opening Friday at the Earle Theater, with "Sergeant York" as the feature. Composer Grover and Lyricist Glaser will be introduced from the stage at Friday night's last performance.

The Top-Flight Boys Chip In

It is announced with obvious glee on the red, white and blue letterhead of the Treasury Department's Defense Savings Staff that all profits from the Broadway musical comedy hit, "Banjo Eyes" will be invested in United States Defense Savings Bonds. The element of surprise is reduced to the minimum by the fact that "Banjo Eyes" is Eddie Cantor's new show. Eddie's patriotic zeal had reached the boiling point even as far back as his last personal appearance on the stage at Loew's Capitol, when he elicited a trace of thoughtless criticism by bearing down on the forceful plea that the time had come to give Old Glory a "permanent wave, instead of a finger wave."

In the same mail comes word that Spencer Tracy has been selected as chairman of the motion picture committee, named to help conduct the President's birthday celebrations to raise funds for the combat of infantile paralysis.

Tonight, following the club dinner at 7, the dramatic committee of the Arts Club of Washington will present Natalie Hammond Core, popular local actress familiar to patrons of the Roadside Theater, in "Portraits and Patterns," a new group of sketches, and Alice Duer Miller's "The White Cliffs," which Miss Core is repeating by request. The reading of the last named is her piece de resistance—just as it is Lynn Fontanne's.

Have scored a quick public approval in presenting "living entertainment" in various others of his outlying picture houses, Sidney B. Lust is presenting Happy Johnny and His Gang, from Station WBAL, in Baltimore, on the stage of the Milo Theater, in Rockville, on Thursday and Friday nights of this week. That "Happy" is said to fit Johnny like the proverbial snug glove.

Oh, Mr. Warner, how's about making up your mind? My operative No. 000,000,00½ reports that the first name of Mr. Woolley, appearing in the title role of "The Man Who Came to Dinner," is spelled "Monty" on the Earle marquee, and "Monte," on the Ambassador's—or was. Don't ask me. I don't know, either!

ANN AYARS

the Beverly Hills high school girl, who studied for grand opera, gave one concert, was promptly signed to a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer contract and next morning found herself in the nurse's role in "Dr. Kildare's Victory," opening Thursday on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater. Barring the operatic study, of course, it all took three days—possibly a record among Hollywood's Cinderellas

LEONARD LYONS

Voice in the Dark!

New York, Jan. 12.

DRAMA DEPARTMENT: Last week Katharine Hepburn and her mother went to see Tallulah Bankhead in "Clash By Night." They sat, excitedly, watching the performances—through the final scene in which a murder is committed in a projection booth, while a movie sound track is heard off-stage and the operator ridicules the movie dialogue . . . The Hepburns went backstage later and congratulated Miss Bankhead. "Was any of it familiar to you?" Tallulah asked the screen actress, who shook her head and confessed: "No, I didn't recognize any of it" . . . "Well," Tallulah revealed, "the sound track is that of 'Philadelphia Story.' And most of the lines in it were spoken by you."

KATHARINE HEPBURN

MUSIC: Josef Elman, the young son of Violinist Mischa Elman, received a birthday gift of the "Second Concerto," by Vieuxtemps. He began to play it, until his father appeared . . . "Dad," asked Josef, "did you ever play this concerto?" . . . "Of course," replied the violinist, who was the first of the music prodigies. "I played it when I was a child" . . . "How old were you then?" asked the 11-year-old Josef . . . "I was 12," said Elman . . . "In that case," said Josef, triumphantly, "I'm a year ahead of you."

FINANCE DEPARTMENT: DeWill Wallace, editor of Reader's Digest, always writes in the upper left-hand corner of each accepted manuscript the sum which the magazine will pay to the author. Those sums, of course, vary. Sometimes Wallace writes "$1000," sometimes "1200" and in some rare cases even more . . . On one manuscript, however, the editor wrote "$2019.67" . . . "That's an unusual price to pay for an article," said one of his aides. How did you happen to hit on that figure?" . . . "Oh," Wallace confessed, "it just happened to look like a nice sum to me."

THEATER DEPARTMENT: Burnett Hershey, the news commentator, was born in Manhattan's lower East Side. He returned to that neighborhood recently, noticed his watch had stopped and took it to a jeweler nearby . . . The heavy, bald jeweler asked Hershey: "Didn't you go to P. S. 86?" . . . "Yes," said Burnett . . . "Then don't you remember me?" asked the jeweler. "We acted in a school play, 'Miles Standish'" . . . "I remember that very well," said the commentator. "I played the part of John Alden. What did you play?" . . . The fat, bald jeweler reminded: "I played Priscilla."

SOCIAL NOTE: During Winston Churchill's visit to Canada he went to the home of a Canadian worker—in whose back room he saw an unusual piece of statuary. It showed the figure of a sow, feeding 12 suckling pigs. Off to the right were two others of the litter, waiting for a chance to move in . . . Churchill studied the group. "Gentlemen," he announced, "this is somewhat reminiscent of a meeting of Parliament."

MOVIES: Lowell Mellett, the Government's new film coordinator, assured a group of motion picture directors and producers that a movie can be the most potent form of propaganda. "That's because everybody goes to the movies and can be made to believe that which appears on the screen," said Mellett. "And I can let you in on this secret about the popularity of motion pictures. The No. 1 movie fan in America is a frinde of mine. His name is Franklin D. Roosevelt."

HEDDA HOPPER

Always Gets Her Man!

Hollywood, Calif., Jan. 12. Paulette Goddard, proving that she's without fear, is going into "The Forest Rangers," with Madeleine Carroll and Fred MacMurray. And this time, Paulette's been promised the man. She certainly had oodles of them on her trip to Mexico and New York. Even King Carol of Rumania was only too happy to attend a dinner in El Patio restaurant and be photographed all over the place with Paulette. When I asked her what he was like, she said, "Oh, he's just a man. But Madame Lupescu is Anita Stewart with oomph. She's terrific."

PAULETTE GODDARD

The portrait Rivera finally finished of Paulette is going to hang in Chaplin's marble halls, but she brought back five more for herself. When I asked her if she was rested, she said, "Heck, no! I never stopped going for one second. Now I hope to get a week of sun and solitude at Palm Springs before beginning the picture." She meant sun—not solitude.

With Jimmy Cagney leaving Warner Brothers after his next, I suppose Humphrey Bogart will be doing 12 pictures. What with the old guard, like Pat O'Brien, Frank McHugh, Guy Kibbee, Allen Jenkins all gone, it won't look like old home week over there any more.

Has anyone mentioned that the romance between Marlene Dietrich and Greg Bautzer is hotter than hot? He takes over spare time she has from Jean Gabin.

Tommy Mitchell plays his first screen villian in "Moontide," and it's made a completed wreck of him. It was bad enough to beat up little Ida Lupino for two day's shooting, but when he had to finish off by tossing her into a tank of live bait, he just about threw up the job!

If you see Bill "Hopalong Cassidy" Boyd marching down the street with his middle all lit up like an electric light, don't run, but take a good look. Paul Flato has designed him a belt buckle, exact replica of his ranch, with several of the little houses done in diamonds. (I'm not saying which ones.) It is colossal. I'd advise him to keep his coat buttoned so his horse doesn't get a squint at it, or he'll be biting the dust!

On "My Gal Sal" set, Rita Hayworth was wigging out of an 1890 corset. Said she, "I get up at 4:30 a.m., get myself into this thing. If that isn't giving your all for art!" Incidentally, Rita rests in Florida before starting her next, a dancing one, with Fred Astaire.

Now that metal buttons are on the defense materials list, Gwen Wakeling, at Twentieth Century, is using pottery buttons . . . And Eddie Stevenson has designed a dress for Ellen Drew with all accessories made of the same material as dress, which saves leather needed for defense.

There's one defense material most of us will say goodbye to without too much grief, and that's cellophane. The joy of being able to break your way into a cake of soap without losing a fingernail!

Monogram's picture "Here Come the Marines" is the last production filmed with the cooperation of our armed forces. Picture was completed at the Opa Locka Airport in Florida, just prior to our entry into the war.

Freddie Bartholomew and June Lockhart, Gene's daughter, are a twosome.

Mr. Cotten Progresses In Bad Odor!

By Frederick C. Othman

United Press Hollywood Correspondent

Hollywood, Jan. 12.—On stage four at R. K. O.-Radio Studios is one of the foulest-smelling Greek steamships that ever sailed the movies' hardwood seas. It smells like garlic and rancid olive oil—and why does it smell that way?

Producer Orson Welles' orders. So Joseph Cotten, Dolores del Rio and others aboard her will curl up their noses and act like they're smelling garlic and rancid olive oil. Simple enough, when you come to think about it.

Young Cotten, who has played only old men with glued-up faces and padded middles in his first three movies, become a full-fledged picture star in this one. Miss Del Rio, the Mexican actresses who eats gardenia blossoms for lunch and who spends much of her time listening to Producer Welles propose marriage, is his leading lady.

The picture is "Journey Into Fear," based upon the spy novel of Eric Ambler. Welles and Cotton wrote the script into what they hope will be a hair-curler, about the famous ballistic expert who carries his secrets in his head.

All this is by way of introduction to Cotten, the movies' newest star. He was in "Citizen Kane." He played in "Lydia." He's just finished his role in "The Magnificent Ambersons."

Cotten is a native of Petersburg, Va., who lost his Southern accent in Washington, D. C., dramatic school, and who regained it during five years of selling advertising for the Miami, Fla., Herald. Each summer he'd go to New York to look for an acting job. He never got one until the fifth year, when he married and then got up nerve enough to walk into the office of the great Belasco and ask for work.

He got it. Just like that. Belasco made him understudy to Lynn Overman in "Dancing Partner," in 1931. Cotten has been acting and sometimes starving ever since.

Fads on Food Out of Style; Be Sensible!

By Ida Jean Kain

IF YOU have it fixed in your mind that certain foods—fish and milk, or milk and orange juice, or protein and starch—do not mix well, try this luncheon: Have your favorite fish, creamed if you like, a chopped green salad, whole wheat bread, butter, a glass of milk, and for dessert slice up a nice juicy orange. That menu mixes milk, fish, oranges and protein, starch and fats. It is a well balanced lunch. You will feel fine after you have eaten it.

I don't know how many food fads started, but they surely have stuck. In spite of the national nutrition program, a good many of these notions linger on. Besides the one that certain foods won't combine, there is one that meat is injurious to the kidneys; that white meat is less harmful than red, and such old fashioned ideas that cheese is "binding" and that eggs are toxic.

Any wholesome food combines well with any other wholesome food. You can make a delicious flip with half orange juice and half milk. And there's nothing wrong with a scalloped fish dish in which milk is used.

Old Wives' Tales

There is now all kinds of scientific evidence that meat, red or white, does not injure the kidneys, cause high blood pressure, hardening of the arteries, or any of the other ills for which it has been blamed. And certainly red meat is just as easily digested as white meat. In fact, meat is now on the list of protective foods. And the meat organs—liver, heart and kidneys—which used to be discarded are the richest sources of certain vitamins, particularly A, B1, and B2.

Cheese is another of the most valuable protective foods. It furnishes protein, calcium, phosphorus and Vitamin A. We do not use nearly enough cheese in our American diet.

As for eggs being toxic—well, I only wish that everyone in the United States could have an egg every day.

The reason it is so important to toss out these food notions is this: They often lead to a deficiency diet. There are people who take first one thing and then another out of the menu in the belief that certain foods do not mix well, or that these foods do not agree with them. Finally, they discard so many good and necessary foods that they wind up on a deficiency diet and their symptoms of indigestion, acidosis, aches and ills are actually caused by the absence of the needed protective elements.

Allergy Causes Dislike

There are people, however, who cannot tolerate certain foods—milk, eggs, wheat, shell fish and strawberries being the commonest. But that is an allergy, not a notion. In that case, ascertain the offending foods and leave them out of your menus. But guard against narrowing below the point which affords protection, the list of foods you can eat. You need all the protective essentials and must get them in some form.

Bold Prints, Bright Stripes Herald a Gay Spring

The dark ground print frock (below) is of small pattern suitable for wear now and later in the spring. Made of duPont rayon, the print is small enough to look well on the average as well as on the large figure. The belt and collar match the ground of the print, accenting the all-around pleated skirt and well-fitted bodice. Colors available are luggage, black, green and navy—all with a white print

Multi-color stripes streak down the shirtwaist bodice and flicker in the full dirndl skirt of the chic functional dress above. It is comfortable, well-cut and fashion-right for all-day resort or early spring wear. The fabric is a soft jersey, knitted with Eastman rayon—using the grainy side out and the sleek side in. Stripes, such as these, are especially becoming to the girl with the petite figure

Improve Your Letter Writing

YES, THE day comes when, no matter how you hate it, you MUST write letters, to hold the girl or to get the job.

Then for lack of a few simple rules what agony is yours—crossed-out words, endless doodles.

You might spend minutes thinking of a "start," then say "I thought I would write" or "guess you're surprised to hear."

One of the first rules for writing good letters is to throw out meaningless verbiage. So just pitch in, thinking of what the other person would like to hear about. Your new job? Your mutual friends?

Write "The first day on the job was a success! Yes, wasn't fired once." Or "I'm loaded with messages for you from the Smiths. They miss you—me, too!"

Starting simply and naturally your whole letter goes along easily, and the same is true of business letters. In all letters, though, be correct! "Anyways" for "anyway" makes you appear crude.

In our 40-page booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," are 35 interesting sample letters—social and business, also love letters—to help you in your correspondence. Tells letter etiquette errors to avoid.

Send 15c in coins for our booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," to the NEW YORK OFFICE of The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West 19th Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Tip on Skirt-Length

You'll be lucky this spring if your last year's dresses have hems! New suits and dresses will be more dignified and smart in their length. Skirts will be longer by 1 or 1½ inches than last season.

Baby Hair-cut Must Be Varied To Suit Face

Hollywood, Calif.—Since it's the fashion to hippity-hop to the barber shop to get a baby hair-cut, Perc Westmore, of Warner Brothers urges that it be done right.

In a baby hair-cut every strand measures 3 or 4 inches and is springy with curl. The front hairline always shows, with perhaps a few wispy bangs. However, the hair is dressed in a different way for all but two of the seven basic facial types. The object in each case is to make the face appear more oval.

A girl, like Olivia de Havilland, who has a perfect oval face already dresses her hair in the simplest ways and will, if she ultimately decides to wear a shorter coiffure, look best in a rounded effect with the hair combed straight back and up.

Round-faced Jane Wyman, as well as square-faced girls, should dress the hair above their ears, creating width at the top and the illusion of a narrow jaw-line.

A triangle face is one with narrow upper portion. Hair is to be worn high, with most of the fullness at its narrowest point.

For an oblong face, fullest curls are between the jaw-line and the tops of the ears. The top of the head is dressed for flatness.

An inverted triangle face with long, pointed jaw, has hair brushed smoothly over the upper portion of the head but developed into fullness at the jaw-line.

The diamond-shaped face has curly fullness above the ears and at the jaw-line, but the hair is flat over the cheek bones.

Kitchen Quiz

Can you come across with the answers to this kitchen quiz by Polly and Ed East, of the Movies? No peeking):

Questions

1. When food burns and blackens the pot, what is the quickest way to clean it?
2. How can you defrost your refrigerator in about 20 minutes?
3. How can you tell a bad egg without breaking it?
4. How can you remove grease spots from clothing?
5. What is the difference between jelly, jam and preserves?
6. How do you remove the tarnish from silverware?
7. How do you remove lipstick from handkerchiefs?
8. How can you whip evaporated milk?
9. What cooking mistakes can you fix with potatoes?
10. How would you remove chewing gum from upholstery?
11. How do you prevent rugs from sliding?
12. What do you do about a dripping faucet that wakes you up at night?

Answers

1. Fill half the pot with water, add a half cup of vinegar, bring it to a boil and wipe the black off.
2. Replace the ice cubes with boiling water. In a short time all the coils will be completely free of ice.
3. Put it in a pot of water. If it lies on its side at the bottom of the pot, it is fresh. If it stands on end, it is pretty bad. If it floats to the top, it is awful.
4. Tear a blotter in half. Put half of it under the fabric, and the other half on top of it and place a hot iron over the blotter. The grease spot will be absorbed by the blotter.
5. Jelly is made from the juice of the fruit; jam from the pulp, and preserves from the whole fruit.
6. Pour sour milk into a pan and put your tarnished silverware into it. Let it stand for several hours, then wash the silverware in sudsy water. All the tarnish will be removed.
7. Rub it off with a cloth soaked in alcohol.
8. By adding gelatin.
9. If you burn your food, add slices of raw potatoes and they will remove the burnt taste. If you put too much salt in the soup, a few slices of raw potatoes will remove it. A raw potato in the refrigerator will absorb unpleasant odors.
10. Freeze the gum with a piece of ice until it becomes so brittle you can break it off.
11. Get the kind of rubber washers you put on fruit jars and sew them on the under corners and along the sides. They will hold the rug firmly against the floor.
12. Tie a string around faucet, letting the string hang down into the drain so that the drops roll noiselessly down the string. Then go to sleep and call a plumber in the morning.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Enrolled in Local College, Girl Bogs Down in Third-Year Work, Attributing Slump to Father's Refusal to Send Her Away to School; Asks Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am confronted by a problem that I am sure you can help me solve. I am a girl 20 years old and this is my third year in college, but I am making a poor showing in my studies. I failed in one subject and have about eight "incompletes." I am very discouraged. I am planning to quit college and take some more business courses, but my father thinks I must have lost my mind, to be making such a decision. He thinks I should continue in college until I get the necessary credits to graduate, even if it takes me six years. But that is a depressing prospect.

I have always felt that I could never do well in a local college. My ambition has always been to go away to college. But my father would not send me, even though he could afford to. He says I have just as much chance to make good here; but I can't agree with him. Do you think it advisable for me to quit college? Or should I continue, despite all these handicaps? I have lost all ambition to work. Sincerely,

L. R.

DEAR L. R.: Which are you: a high-grade moron or a poisonous parasite? Or a spoiled and wilful brat? It's a fact that your higher educational opportunities have profited you little, thus far,—because your letter (prior to my laborious efforts at organizing and editing) wouldn't have done credit to a grammar grade student. You have a poverty-stricken vocabulary, and were obviously too lazy either to (1) think through in advance what you wished to say; or (2) rewrite your straggling complaint until it assumed orderly, compact form. Maybe you lack critical objectivity where your own performance is concerned.

Your supposition that you would have been a better student if sent away to college is so much baloney. You might have had more fun of an extra-curricular kind, at considerably more expense to your father, than the present arrangement permits; but your scholastic showing probably would have been about the same, or tending to worse, inasmuch as your margin for shirking presumably would have been greater. And I daresay it was this aspect of the dream that inspired your "ambition" to get away.

You may consider yourself a pitiful figure of frustration, vitiated by too close and excessive parental supervision,—but if you had something on the ball, that your parents were standing in the way of your delivering, you would have maneuvered yourself around their stodgy interference, somehow. And the most logical first step toward freedom of intellectual expression would have consisted in doggedly cramming your way (in a hurry) through the curriculum they prescribed,—in order the sooner to emancipate yourself from the student classification of dependency. Graduated at 20 or 21 from college,—any college,—you would then have sufficiently "proven yourself," to be entitled to say, with some authority, what you proposed to do next with yourself.

The fact that you have limply frittered away three golden years of opportunity to discipline your faculties and nourish your mind to socially serviceable proportions, and now defensively hold your father to blame, by implication, for your "failure" rating,—even while readying yourself to dip into his purse for funds with which to "take some more business courses," (when evidently you have made no use of previous instruction of the kind),—suggests to me that you are a chronic work-shirker, buck-passer and ingrate, who has never yet faced the bald truth about herself and tried to do something to change the picture.

I agree with your father that the best thing you could do would be to buckle down and get through college,—even if that means six full years of "nose-to-the-grindstone" effort. Your character needs that exercise and so does your mind. And the fruits of such effort will prove indispensable to your future security,—because, in the society to come, which is even now taking shape around you, it appears that there will be no tolerating of able-bodied drones of either sex.

The fact that you, a junior year college student, have eight "incompleted" courses chalked against you, shows how sketchily you have applied yourself to appointed tasks in the past. If you think to get by with that sort of performance in the business or professional fields, you are much mistaken. Such listless undependability would divorce you from a payroll in just about the time it took your superiors to double-check the list of your defections. So don't delude yourself that the requirements of either a business school course or a business office berth would be a "cinch" compared to your current assignment. As a matter of truth, it's the other way around.

Children In Wartime

This is one of a series of answers to parents' questions by the Child Study Association of America in its booklet, "Children in Wartime."

Just Being Together Helps

ISN'T there a danger in our overdoing the stoical act at this time? Why pretend that nothing unusual is happening? When times are special aren't people's needs special, too?

OF COURSE you are right. Going about grimly pretending that life moves on in the same old way may not be the best thing for either parents or children. There is a kind of bravado which some people assume at this time which is emotionally unhealthy not only for themselves but also for the people who look to them for understanding and support. While going about our business quietly, let us remember, too, that we need to find extra strength and to give it. Just being together is one enormous strengthener: Let's not get so busy, even with war work, that we overlook the emotional needs of our own families. Most of us now feel the need for more evenings at home—we instinctively crave companionship with those whose are closest. Even when we do and say commonplace things we get lots of comfort from just feeling that, come what may, we'll at least see it through together.

If you can't be with your family as much as you'd like, a thoughtful phone call now and then may help to bring that necessary sense that you're thinking of them other anyway. If you're going to be out of reach at times, have a standing arrangement with your children as to how they may get in touch with a neighbor or family friend in case of an emergency, or even if there is no emergency, when they feel the need of homelike support.

Some High-Ranking Capital Hostesses Shelve Custom of Depositing Cards

Comes the revolution . . . the Capital's social revolution, I mean.

In other words, for the first time since the days of Dolly Madison, a few high-ranking hostesses have decided that a few pink-tea rules can well be abandoned—temporarily, at least.

The first custom now in the process of being shelved for the duration has to do with this business of depositing cards every time you turn around. For more years than anybody around here cares to remember, cards have been left to return first calls; and to cancel the obligation of what the French call a "visite de digestion" the day after one attends a dinner, luncheon or evening entertainment. More recently, the wholesale practice of showering white pasteboards has become such a task that, as one official hostess said last year, "That's about all I get done when the social season is in full swing."

Now, however, there's a very good reason why a custom that has become a burden anyway can quietly be dropped . . . either completely, or turned over to the postman. Driving about town to make countless deliveries "by hand" is hard on both time, and tires . . . So, if from now on more and more calling cards come to your house by mail—or not at all—don't think some of our highest placed hostesses have forgotten their manners . . . They're simply being patriotic; saving their tires . . . and their time, for more useful pursuits.

Capital friends of the Nelson T. Johnsons are proudly showing greeting cards just received from the U. S. Minister to Australia, his wife and their son, Nelson, jr., and daughter, Betty . . . On the front is a picture of all four, posing with their bicycles . . . That is how the Johnsons cope with the petrol rationing," says the greeting. Then there's an additional notation above, "Can you trace our year's activity in the clouds?" . . . And close examination of the fleecy masses reveals a variety of outlines, including a Chinese temple (Johnson was formerly our Ambassador to China); a plane (he returned from Peking by clipper); the Capital dome (Mrs. Johnson spent some time in Washington before her husband arrived here); a Wyoming ranch (where the entire family vacationed before starting to Australia); and a ship (something like the one in which they sailed for the envoy's new post).

MRS. NELSON T. JOHNSON

If you haven't seen Mrs. Claude Wickard butterflying about the past few days, it's probably because she has been working hours on end over the speech she's to give in Huron, S. D., Thursday afternoon . . . Scheduled to talk to a large group of farm women at the "Production Exposition," she hopes to show how ruralites can help the country at large by organization on home territory.

She wrote every word of the speech herself, and she knows the subject thoroughly from first-hand farm experience; but the hardest part, she frankly admits, is yet to come . . . The event, in fact, will be her public-speaking debut, and if she doesn't have a bad case of stage fright, nobody there will be more surprised than she . . . She's hoping, however, that a bit of experience she had at singing in public a number of years ago, may come to her rescue when she stands before the throng . . . En route back to Washington, she'll stop off at Purdue University for a brief visit with daughter, Ann, who's a sophomore there (and, incidentally, quite an authority on farming herself); and in Indianapolis, where the other Wickard daughter, Betty, is employed in a department store. January 22 will find the wife of the Agriculture Secretary back in Washington once more.

MRS. CLAUDE WICKARD

ABOUT THE TOWN: It's not just by chance that most of our high-ranking Army officers are among those missing at current cocktail parties . . . Shortly after Pearl Harbor hit the headlines, Chief of Staff Gen. George Marshall called a meeting for the express purpose of laying down the law about officers being seen about, at Capital bars—private and public . . . That's why so many of them have "been too busy" to get away for most social functions since the war began.

As thrilled as anybody in Washington these days is the 13-year-old daughter of Dr. and Mme. T. V. Soong . . . She's to be a junior bridesmaid when her uncle, Tse-Liang Soong, marries Miss Mayling Hsi in New York Friday . . . I understand, however, that in contrast to one or two other big-league weddings in the Soong clan, the forthcoming ceremony is to be an extremely quiet one—with only relatives, a few close friends and the Chinese Ambassador, Dr. Hu Shih, in attendance.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Snowden Hill will be guests of honor when Mrs. Walter Denegre entertains at dinner Wednesday evening, January 21 . . . Among others there will be the Governor of New Jersey and Mrs. Charles Edison . . . Mrs. Edward Beale McLean is planning a dinner on the evening of the President's birthday, having as her guests of honor Mr. and Mrs. Merrill Meigs . . . One of the most ambitious "family portraits" ever attempted will be that of Vice President Henry A. Wallace and his family, to be presented in a book, now being written by Russell Lord . . . The title is to be "The Henry Wallaces of Iowa."

Mrs. Rotalde Gives 'Farewell'

With Senora de Soler, wife of the Minister of Paraguay, as her guest of honor, Mrs. Felipe Rotalde entertained at a "farewell luncheon" yesterday in her home in Takoma Park.

The Minister and Senora de Soler will leave tomorrow for New York and will sail Friday for Paraguay. Mr. and Mrs. Rotalde will accompany the retiring Minister and his wife to New York to bid them bon voyage.

Among the guests at the luncheon were Mrs. Lawrence Arnold, Mrs. Tomas Cajigas, Mrs. Henry Lewis, Mrs. W. J. Perricelli, Mrs. Mario Julia and Mrs. Trendley Dean.

Informal Luncheon Honors Mrs. Grady

In compliment to Mrs. Henry F. Grady, Miss Lavinia Engle gathered a group of six friends together for informal luncheon at Pierre's yesterday, filling her "noon hour" of freedom from her duties with the Social Security Board fully but pleasantly.

The half dozen who joined them for a bit of talk and food were Mrs. Raymond Clapper, Mrs. Donald Richberg, Mrs. Basil Manly, Mrs. Arthur Altmeyer, Mrs. Oscar Chapman and Mrs. Rilla Schroeder.

Mrs. Roosevelt Will Attend Concert Tonight

Although as assistant OCD director Mrs. Roosevelt is a 12-hour-a-day working woman, she still manages to have a crowded calendar in other respects.

Tonight the First Lady will be on hand when the conductor of the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra wields his baton at Constitution Hall. Yesterday afternoon after attending the opening of the "Mile of Dimes," Mrs. Roosevelt was guest at a tea at the Newspaper Women's Club. Tomorrow afternoon she will speak before a gathering of Congressional wives at the Congressional Club.

On Monday of next week Mrs. Roosevelt will receive several members of the American Legion at 10:30 o'clock at the White House. Later she will greet members of the award committee of Chi Omega and they will remain for luncheon. That afternoon she will receive members of the entertainment committee of the Birthday Ball committee.

Friday Mrs. Roosevelt will be in New York where she will keep several important engagements. She will lunch with the New York University educators group and later will meet with the camping group. That night she will dine at the Ritz-Carlton preceding the Pan-American exhibit at Macy's. Back in Washington Mrs. Roosevelt will meet with the national defense health clinic group, of which Dr. W. P. Dearing is an active member. Mrs. Roosevelt will join them in a broadcast at 3:45 Sunday afternoon.

Countess Palffy Daughter Bride

Countess Eleanor Palffy, of Washington, and Harrison Tweed, of New York, announce the marriage of their daughter, Mrs. Eleanor Tweed Aldrich to Francis Vinton Lindley on Saturday in Greenwich, Conn. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindley, of New York.

The bride's previous marriage to Nelson W. Aldrich was terminated by divorce a few years ago. Mr. Lindley, who was graduated from Yale in 1933, is a descendant of Gen. Francis Vinton Greene. The newly wedded couple will make their home in New York.

Countess Palffy, who attended the wedding and then stopped over in New York on Sunday, returned early yesterday to her apartment at the Fairfax. An accomplished platform speaker, Countess Palffy has a number of engagements on her forthcoming calendar. She will talk before the Women's Congressional Club the latter part of this week and she is scheduled to appear before the Colony Club in New York on February 3.

'Surgical' Workers at Local Red Cross

Harris & Ewing.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

"SOMETHING NEW both nights" is promised for the annual President's Birthday Horse Show, notices and entry blanks for which have been sent out by Maj. Charles B. McClelland, of the Third Cavalry, Fort Myer, manager of the show. This year's show will be held Wednesday and Thursday evenings, January 28 and 29, in the Riding Hall at the fort.

The hunt country's interest in both performances is high, as many plan to exhibit for the good cause, the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis. There will be six classes each evening, including three hunter classes, two jumping classes and a pony class. The Gray Horse Battery of Fort Myer will give a military exhibition each night, a thrilling thing to see.

To add to the excitement, there will be several movie stars present, among them Miss Dorothy Lamour. No large parties are being planned in connection with horse show this year on account of war conditions, but many informal and private parties will be given.

A new feature this year which is causing interest is a class for Ladies vs. Gentlemen. The four women on the team selected by the management include Mrs. W. Haggin Perry, of Keswick, Va.; Mrs. Fred Hughes and Miss Margaret Cotter, of Washington, and Mrs. Lasker, of New York, the latter is an active exhibitor in all horse-show circles.

On the men's team two Army officers and two civilians will compete. Merton (Cappy) Smith, of New York, will be one, and it has not yet been decided who the others will be.

THE PONY CLASS is also a new feature with this show. Officials at Fort Myer have decided to try it out as it went over with such success and was so well filled at Madison Square Garden, New York, in November. Mrs. James C. Hamilton, of Warrenton, with her riding family including "pickens," Jimmy and Barry, and her marvelous Dunnotar Farm ponies will exhibit.

Mrs. George P. Greenhalgh will also enter her Wonder pony, as well as some of her famous show and hunter string. Mr. and Mrs. W. Haggin Perry will bring a number of horses also.

Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Whitney will be among the exhibitors, as well as such veterans in the horse show world as Louie C. Leith, Ernest Redmon and Turner Wiltshire, of Middleburg. Also James McCormick and Mrs. Dorothy M. Lee—just to name a few. Those asked to judge the classes include Gen. Guy Henry, Humphrey Finney, of Baltimore; William Bell Watkins, of Berryville, and Ray Norton, of Washington.

Walter P. Chrysler, jr., owner of North Wales, near Warrenton, is attractively pictured on the cover of the Thoroughbred Record of the past week. Mr. Chrysler, the most important recruit to the ranks of breeding and racing in years, started purchasing thoroughbreds about two years ago. His desire was to breed and race his own horses, so the majority of his purchases were brood mares, which he intended for his nursery as soon as a location was selected.

SINCE HE purchased North Wales, Mr. Chrysler has made many improvements. With his great love of horses, he is making his stables completely modern, healthful and convenient. Those who know think he has original ideas on how a breeding establishment should be run and how it should be built. Practical horsemen of more experience have said that his ideas are good, and they predict a real future for the Chrysler horses at North Wales.

His four stallions have been listed before in this column. They include Bahram, unbeaten English Triple Crown, in which Mr. Chrysler owns one-fourth, other owners being Alfred Gwynn Vanderbilt, jr., Sylvester Labrot, jr., and James Cox Brady, jr. The other three are Chrysler II, which Mr. Chrysler owns, Quatre Bras II, which he partly owns, and Head Play, which he has leased from Mrs. Silas B. Mason, of Lexington, Ky.

Misses Langer And Stirling To Visit N. Y.

Miss Lydia Langer, daughter of Senator and Mrs. William Langer, of North Dakota, and Miss Margheritta Stirling, debutante daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William Calhoun Stirling, will leave Washington for New York on January 26 for a ten-day stay.

While there they will make their headquarters at Sarah Lawrence College in Bronxville, N. Y., and will renew friendships with their former classmates. Both Miss Stirling and Miss Langer attended Sarah Lawrence College last year.

On Saturday evening Miss Stirling and her mother returned from Charleston, S. C., where Miss Stirling was presented to Charleston society at the St. Cecelia Ball on Thursday evening. While in Charleston, they were house guests of Lieut. E. H. Tillman, U. S. N., and Mrs. Tillman, brother and sister-in-law of Mrs. Stirling. Lieut. and Mrs. Tillman were the debutante's chaperons at the ball and she was escorted by Robert Parsons, who is assistant director of the Corcoran Art School here.

Mrs. Ansberry Back in Capital

Mrs. Timothy Peter Ansberry has returned to Washington after a quick trip by air to Miami Beach, Fla., where she served as matron of honor at the wedding of her cousin. Mrs. Doris Morgan Madison, to Burke Osborne Hedges, January 7 at the Miami Beach Community Church. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Burnes Edward Morgan, of New York and Indianhead, Md., and the late Mr. Morgan, of Havana.

The bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dayton Hedges, live in Havana, where the newlyweds will reside and where they met as children. The elder Mr. Hedges is a prominent capitalist, owns one of the largest textile mills in Cuba and the only lithographing firm on the island. The bride's parents lived in Havana many years.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Hedges attended Ruston Academy in Havana. She later was graduated from Sacred Heart and Livingston Academy of Art in Washington. Mr. Hedges is a graduate of Oglethorpe University, Atlanta, Ga., and is a member of Delta Sigma Phi.

The bride wore a bois-de-rose faille tailored afternoon dress, pink and brown accessories and corsage of white orchids. Mrs. Ansberry wore blue with white accessories and Mrs. James Hedges, as bridesmaid, wore yellow and gray. She and her husband, brother of the bridegroom, who was best man, came from Havana for the wedding.

Senator Pepper To Leave Today For Indiana

Having arrived in town from Florida only several days ago, Mrs. Claude Pepper is "getting back to her defense work," but Senator Pepepr will be off again today—this time to Indiana—to make a speech.

The Peppers left about a month ago to visit their home in Florida. Their first stop was in Tallahassee, and from there Mrs. Pepper went down to St. Petersburg to visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. P. Webster.

Early in the year the Peppers were in Miami, where something of a family reunion took place. They were joined by Mrs. Pepper's two brothers, B. Webster and Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Webster, as well as her sister, Mrs. T. L. Snyder. The Websters, who now make their home here, returned to Washington last week.

Chester Handler Weds Miss Fraser

The Trinity Episcopal Church in Takoma Park was the scene of the wedding recently of Miss Elinor Leblond Fraser, daughter of Mrs. Lemuel Anderson Fraser, and Chester James Handler, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Handler. The Rev. Reno S. Harp, jr., officiated at the 8:30 o'clock ceremony.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Lemuel Anderson Fraser, wore a long-trained gown of white satin accented with lace inserts in the skirt. Her full-length veil fell from a cap of heirloom lace and she carried a shower bouquet of white roses and gardenias.

Mrs. Meredith M. Leaman, the matron of honor, wore a Christmas red dress of velveteen made with puffed sleeves and a sweetheart neckline. Her headdress was of green ostrich plumes and she carried a sheaf of red poinsettas. Miss Margaret Hannah Burdett, a cousin of the bride, was the only other attendant. Her costume was similar to that of the matron of honor, in cedar green velveteen, and her corsage was also of poinsettas.

Foster L. Boyd served as best man and the ushers were Foster J. Biser, Howard L. Cramwell, Will Doying and Richard M. Evans.

Democratic Women Hear Biddle Deplore Alien Mistreatment

By Lucia Giddens

Attorney General Francis Biddle yesterday deplored the fact that some employers are discharging enemy aliens without cause, simply because of their foreign background.

In an address at the luncheon of the Woman's National Democratic Club, Mr. Biddle said that, as a result, workers who are loyal are being "thrown back on the community and on public charity." And many of them are skilled workers, he added.

"We," he said, meaning the Department of Justice, "will take care of the disloyal."

Speaking at the clubhouse, Mr. Biddle told of the swiftness with which the department moved after war was declared. Within two hours after he had signed warrants for the apprehension of the first list of enemy aliens, every man on the list had been apprehended, he said.

Since then, the total number of Germans apprehended has risen to 1287; Italians, 243, and Japanese, 1557.

Emphasizing the care with which the cases are handled, he told of the 90 boards of review throughout the country, with outstanding citizens in the community serving on them. These boards make recommendations which are sent to the Attorney General's office. "On doubtful cases there are two or three reviews in my office," he added.

Mr. Biddle pointed out that the policy of the department has been against arresting men for expressing opinions, unless such opinions interfere with national defense.

"If a man says that the Attorney General ought to be impeached, let him talk," he said. "Put him on a soap box. Don't make a martyr of him." Mr. Biddle added that the Department of Justice was concerned when the opinions took the form of "incitement to action."

The Solicitor General, Charles Fahy, and Mrs. Fahy, and Mrs. Thurman Arnold, wife of the Assistant Attorney General, were among the guests at the speaker's table. Mrs. Curtis Shears, club president, presided, and Mrs. W. Meade Fletcher, jr., who was in charge of the program, introduced the speaker.

Alliance Francaise Meets Tomorrow

The Alliance Francaise of Washington at its meeting at the Sulgrave Club, at 4:30 p. m. tomorrow, will hear Andre Morize, writer and lecturer, on the human value of the French culture.

Mr. Morize in 1940 came to this country from France, where he was secretary at the French ministry of information. He is now professor of French literature at Harvard University. Persons interested in the French language may attend by applying at Alliance headquarters, 2700 Q Street Northwest, it was announced.

Natalie Core to Act At Arts Club Tonight

Natalie Hammond Core, D. C. actress, will present a program of sketches at the Arts Club at 8:30 tonight at the clubhouse. On the program will be two sketches by Mildred Hoyl Core entitled "Midnight Madonna" and "Lady in the Harbor;" two musical numbers with accompaniment by Walter S. Studdiford and, by request, "The White Cliffs," with musical background by Edna Merton.

Mrs. Karl W. Core and Mr. Walter S. Studdiford will be the hosts at the dinner preceding the program.

Dr. Hu Helps Present Brazier To News Club

Dr. Hu-Shih, the Chinese Ambassador, made a cup of tea for Mrs. Roosevelt yesterday afternoon, in dedicating the Chinese brazier given to the Newspaper Women's Club by Mrs. Gretchen Smith, a member.

She made the presentation in memory of her father, the late Col. Herman C. Schumm, who bought the stove at a shop in Peking in 1912. He was then on a military mission to China from Manila where he was stationed.

Chinese tea was served yesterday afternoon, along with Chinese rice cakes and almond cakes. The table was decorated in Chinese lilies. Mrs. Robert Patterson, Mrs. Robmert Whitney Imbrie Mrs. Robert Whitney White poured tea. In the absence of the club president, Mrs. Marie McNair, guests were received by Mrs. Sophia Kepner, vice president, with Mrs. Smith.

District P.-T. A. Board To Discuss Nutrition

Plans whereby its emergency nutrition committee may contribute to the defense program will be discussed at the District Congress of Parents and Teachers board of managers' meeting at 10 a. m. today in the National Education Association Building.

An assistant treasurer will be elected by the board to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mrs. Henry Duerst.

Mrs. Bolles Heads A. A. U. W. Defense

Mrs. Lemuel Bolles, whose husband, Col. Bolles, is in charge of civilian defense in the metropolitan area of Washington, has been appointed chairman of the civilian defense committee of the local branch, American Association of University Women, it was announced yesterday by Mrs. William C. Van Vleck, president.

Mrs. Bolles announced that a large number of members of the A. A. U. W. have signed up for various types of work in civilian defense, as well as for instruction in first-aid and other services.

Under the leadership of Miss Nelle Ingels, chairman of the A. A. U. W. committee of the economic and legal status of women, tabulations have been made of the various skills and professions of the club members for the purpose of furnishing assistance to the war effort. Every Wednesday afternoon a group meets at the clubhouse, under the leadership of Dr. Edith L. Allen, for knitting and work on garments for the Red Cross.

Mrs. Bolles was employed in Red Cross work during the two years Col. Bolles was overseas in the last war. She is a member of the American Legion Auxiliary and has served on its national radio committee and national FIDAC committee and attended the first Congress of the Women's Auxiliary of the FIDAC, in Rome, Italy, for the American Legion Auxiliary.

SEC Goes to Philadelphia Within Sixty Days

Securities and Exchange Commission will move to Philadelphia within 60 days. Its new home will be the Penn Athletic Club. Division heads made this announcement to their employes yesterday. A liaison office will be maintained here of about 50 employes. The Patent Office will start to move to Richmond by the weekend. Files and equipment will be the first to go. The first employes will be sent to Richmond in two weeks and the entire mass transfer is expected to be completed by the end of next month.

SEC announced that all division chiefs and their assistants would move to Philadelphia. Unlike several of the other agencies to be transferred, SEC (has adopted a liberal policy toward the release of its employes who would prefer to remain in Washington. It will release employes outright and help them find other jobs in cases where "undue hardship" would be involved in their moving. All other employes will be released when they can be replaced.

Another precedent was broken yesterday when the Government opened a school to train stenographers.

The school, which is located in the Lincoln Building, is being operated by Civil Service Commisison's Division of Training, whose chief is Winston B. Stephens. OPM is financing it. Under consideration is a plan for the commission to give pre-assignment training to typists and stenographers for all departments. To be eligible for training, you must first pass a Civil Service test. Faculty members are Alice Wakefield, Nina Richardson and Fern V. Calvert.

Sunday Work Possible

Under the order, which will extend the work week of Commerce Department employes to 44 hours, it's possible that Sunday work will be ordered. But if it is, the employes who work Sunday will be given a week day off. Navy started Sunday work on a large scale. The defense units of Federal Works followed, and now the possibility is being considered in half a dozen other war agencies. Saturday afternoon holidays will be banned soon for the duration, by several other agencies.

Irving J. Levy has been promoted to associate Solicitor and Roy Frank to assistant solicitor at the Labor Department . . . The House has approved the bill which would pay Federal employes who volunteer for military service their accumulated annual leave . . . UFWA locals at FCA and Agriculture have merged . . . Interior Secretary Ickes is fighting the proposed transfer of Fish and Wildlife Service, National Parks, and Indian Affairs to Chicago. He wants headquarters of the three agencies to be kept here. . . . If you have flunked a Civil Service test for either typist or stenographer, you can now take another exam within 30 days.

Dr. Norman P. Bekkedahl, director of the rubber section at the Bureau of Standards, will direct rubber research for the Brazilian government. A new laboratory is being built at Belem, Brazil, where Bekkedahl will be stationed. Bekkedahl is now buying the equipment for the laboratory, but it'll be several months before he leaves on his new asignment . . . William L. Mitchell, Social Security's assistant executive director, has been appointed associate director of the Bureau of Unemployment Security . . . Recreation Opportunities for Government Workers will be discussed at a round-table today at 9:15 a. m. at the Jewish Community Center. Mark McCloskey, Federal Security's director of recreation, will lead the discussion.

SEC hopes to be moved back after the war but it wouldn't promise its employes yesterday that they would or wouldn't be . . . Clyde B. Aitchison has been named acting ICC chairman to pinch-hit for Joseph B. Eastman, who is spending most of his time on his new job as Defense Transportation Coordinator . . . The Navy has taken over five lieutenants of the Coast and Geodetic Survey. In wartime, the Navy has authority to take over all the agency's personnel.

Keep the Change

A woman motorist, convicted of a traffic violation in Alexandria, presented a glass bank containing 1300 pennies, the amount needed to pay her fine plus court costs. While Clerk R. Marvin Zimmerman was counting the coins, Judge Harry F. Kennedy reconsidered, and agreed to suspend the fine. Then the defendant demanded a recount before accepting her bank savings

Referee Now Un-neutral

If the Navy will have him, Representative Weiss (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, will enlist today as a seaman. Near 40, Weiss has a wife and two children, but said all between him and service is his physical examination. "And I think I can pass it," he said. "I just refereed 19 high school and college football games."

Grand Jury Clears Eddy In Car Death

Torpedo Factory Worker Was Held After Coroner's Jury Had Absolved Him

Alexandria Bureau of The Post, Telephone Temple 2356

An Alexandria motorist held for grand jury action in connection with the traffic death of a 10-year-old boy last October, despite the fact that a coroner's investigation held him blameless, was absolved of responsibility yesterday when the jury returned as "no true bill" a presentment charging him with involuntary manslaughter.

The motorist, Russell Eddy, a naval torpedo factory employe who resides at 218 South Fairfax street, was absolved by Dr. John A. Sims, Alexandria coroner, in the death of Douglas Stack, who was fatally injured by Eddy's car on the Mount Vernon Boulevard, when the coroner issued a verdict of accidental death.

Subsequently, a technical charge of reckless driving which had been lodged against him following the accident was withdrawn by United States Commissioner John P. Strauss, but he was later held for the grand jury when the boy's father informed court officials that several additional witnesses had not been available for the coroner's investigation.

It is considered unusual for court action to follow any coroner's jury action in which a defendant is absolved of responsibility.

The special grand jury reviewed seven other presentments and returned true bills in all cases, charging defendants with offenses ranging from robbery to first-degree murder. The defendants in all seven cases were Negroes.

Earline Jackson was indicted for first-degree murder in connection with the death of Charles Johnson, who died last week as the result of pistol wounds sustained New Year's Eve. Others indicted were James Williams, charged with raping a white woman; George Stephen, auto theft; John Page, felonious assault; Thomas Wood, robbery; Sidney Herron, robbery, and Aaron Jackson, attempted arson.

The Alexandria City Council will review ten items, including six rezoning applications, when it meets tonight at 7:30. An agreement with the Government providing for the council's acceptance of a $35,000 defense grant for operation and maintenance of public schools will be considered.

These rezoning applications will be considered: Eppa D. Kane, for rezoning of northwest corner of Mount Vernon Avenue and Braddock Road to D-2 commercial; American Chlorophyll, Inc., to rezone property at Third and N. Fairfax Streets to E industrial; Kate Rosenberg, to rezone southwest corner of Braddock Road and Scroggin Lane to C-2 residential; M. I. Howell to rezone southern section of area bounded by Patrick, Franklin, Columbus and Jefferson Streets to C-1 residential; Armstrong Lumber Co. to rezone lots 11 and 12, block 25, section 4, of city land map 202, in the Rosemont Subdivision, to C-1 residential; John P. Strauss et als, to rezone east side of Commonwealth Avenue between Braddock Road and Craik Street to C-2 residential.

Four Children Escape Flaming Home at Vienna

Four small children, including a 7-day-old baby, were carried to safety yesterday when fire destroyed a 16-room frame apartment dwelling at Vienna, Va., rounting seven persons into the sub-freezing weather with a few of their household furnishings.

The seven-day-old infant was Eula Marie daughter of Mrs. June Whitt. The mother and her baby girl had been staying at the apartment of Mrs. Eva Rowland.

Mrs. Rowland and her daughter, Mrs. Mae Woody, also carried from the blazing house three other children—Shirley Rowland, 17 months; Edna Woody, 2, and Gordon Woody, 7 months.

Mrs. Fred Brown and two children, who occupied another apartment in the building, were not at home when the fire broke out near a flue in an unoccupied second-floor apartment. Four volunteer fifire companies responded to the alarm, but difficutly in reaching water made is impossible to save the structure.

$70,000 Pledged For Civil Defense By A. F. L. Here

A collection campaign to provide $70,000 in needed funds for Washington's hard-pressed civilian defense organization has been launched by the Central Labor Union, American Federation of Labor central body here.

Unions affiliated with the C. L. U. have been asked to pledge a set sum and then use their wits to raise the money. Among the various money raising devices suggested include the donation of a day's pay, direct assessment of members, holding of dances, shows, lectures, motion pictures, parties, or games, or direct appropriation out of the union's treasury.

A notice of the drive, issued by Frank Coleman, secretary of the C. L. U. stated: "Time is short. Speed is of essence. Let us prove to the members of our unions who fought side by side with the Marines at Wake Island, Guam, and Pearl Harbor and to the general public of our city that organized labor is proud to defend our country from the treacherous attacks of the Axis powers against freedom-loving men and women everywhere."

Book Depots For Fairfax Announced

Miss Dorothea Asher, Fairfax County librarian, who is in charge of the drive to collect books for soldiers, yesterday announced a list of 26 "deposit stations" where contributions may be made. The county drive is part of a Nation-wide effort to collect 10 million books for men in the service.

Books may be donated at the municipal libraries in Fairfax, Herndon, Falls Church, Forestville, Lorton and McLean. In addition, Miss Asher said, donations may be left at the following places:

Fairfax Station, Wycoff's store; Dunn Loring, Kenyon's store; Burke, Staub's store; Clifton, Buckley's store; Lorton, Women's Reformatory; Idylwood, Llewellyn's store; Hunter, Mrs. L. D. Kendall's home; Telegraph Road section, the homes of Mrs. Charles B. Sparks and Mrs. Dorothy Cathey; Franconia, Fitzgerald's store; Groveton, Mrs. A. J. Schalow's home; Newington, Mrs. R. A. Winstead's home; Hickory Hall, Mrs. Kortright Church's home; Popes Head Road section, Stafford's store; Oakton, postoffice; Pleasant Valley, Rector's store; Fort Belvoir, Service Club Library; Merryfield, Vincent's store; Navy, Dove's service station, and Dranesville, Old Dranesville Tavern.

Contributions also may be made to library officials in charge of the county's "bookmobile," which makes daily trips through the rural sections of the county, Miss Asher said.

Stores Discontinue Luxury Deliveries

To save tires, gas and wear on automobiles, druggists of Arlington County have agreed to cut out deliveries on luxury articles such as cigarettes, ice cream, candy and beverages, it was announced yesterday.

Delivery service will be maintained for necessary drugs and medicines.

Relief Sought For Arlington Tax Appeals

Arlington County residents will be given 30 days in which to protest higher assessments on their property under proposed legislation to be sought at the session of the Virginia General Assembly opening at Richmond tomorrow.

Harry K. Green, Arlington County commissioner of revenue, said he will ask the county's legislators, Senator William D. Medley and Charles R. Fenwick, to sponsor the assessment measure.

At present, Green said the only way taxpayers may protest higher assessments on their property is to file a petition in the circuit court, a process which is expensive and troublesome.

The proposed measure would require that all taxpayers be given 30 days' notice of changes in their property assessment, during which they will have a chance to be heard by the assessment board.

Green said he also would advocate a measure which would exempt from State income taxes all persons who live outside the State but who maintain their franchise by paying the Virginia poll tax. The measure would be modeled after one recently adopted in North Carolina, Green said.

Acting in his capacity as chairman of the legislative committee of the Commissioners of Revenue Association of Virginia, Green said he would seek passage of still another measure whose purpose would be to clarify the status of new residents of the State. The legislation would make all those subject to the State income tax when they have resided a year in the State.

Montgomery Fire Chiefs Elect Officers

Giammateo Heads Association With Donald McBride as Vice President

Chief Joseph A. Giammatteo, of Glen Echo Volunteer Fire Department, was elected president at the organization meeting of the newly formed Fire Chiefs Association of Montgomery County, Md. The meeting was held at the Chevy Chase Firehouse.

Other officers elected were: Chief-elect Donald McBride, of Takoma Park Volunteer Fire Department, vice president; Deputy Chief Ernest Wood, of Glen Echo, secretary-treasurer; Chief Herman Dilg, of Hillandale Volunteer Fire Department, statistician.

Ten of the county's 13 fire departments were represented. The other three chiefs were prevented from attending by other business.

The new association will act as a clearing house for fire chiefs' troubles in the county and particularly will act as advisory council for John Oden, chief of fire service of the county defense council.

The association is working out a running call setup to provide for departments filling in for departments called out on alarms, is conducting a survey of all fire-fighting equipment in the county and a mutual assistance plan.

Citizens Plan to Form Women's Auto Corps

Plans are under way to form a motor corps for women from the Park Hills Citizens Association of Silver Spring, Md., it was announced yesterday. Mrs. Texas Rosenson has charge of organizing the group.

All officers of the organization were reelected last week: J. E. Hayes, president; R. D. Boyd, vice president; C. L. Walker, recording secretary; G. B. Birrel, corresponding secretary, and G. D. Gardiner, treasurer.

Silver Spring Traders To Elect Tomorrow

A close contest in the annual election of the Silver Spring (Md.) Board of Trade is anticipated for tomorrow at a dinner meeting at 6:30 p. m. at the Indian Spring Golf Club, Colesville Road.

Two members have been nominated for each office. Candidates are: Dr. J. Howell Forsyth and Lee H. Robinson, vice president; A. J. Cunningham and A. G. Briggs, secretary; Raymond E. Barrett and George A. Shikle, treasurer. Five of the following will be elected to the board of directors: Claude A. Todd, H. Brooks Perring, Fred D. McMillan, A. C. Bready, D. H. Gottwalls, J. D. Draper, C. F Armiger, Robert Gaylor, Lewis Hopfenmaier and E. G. Cogan. J. D. Draper is retiring president.

City Acts to Solve Traffic Problem In Defense Area

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Jan. 12.—The Department of Public Works announced today that the Race Street cutoff would be opened promptly to help relieve traffic congestion in the Curtis Bay-Fairfield area.

This congestion, industrial leaders charged, is hampering defense production in the area.

Opening of the cutoff had not been expected until spring, but today's announcement said the road would be opened soon with or without temporary surfacing.

It was suggested that a city-operated ferry be used to relieve traffic congestion, but this proposal was flatly opposed by J. M. Willis, general manager of the Bethlehem-Fairfield Shipbuilding Co.

Mrs. Burrows Dies At Home in Bethesda

Mrs. Elizabeth Burrows, 76, widow of William J. Burrows, died Sunday at her home, Wilson Lane, Bethesda, after a long illness. She is survived by a son, Stanley F. Burrows, Bethesda. Funeral services and interment will be at Kent, Mich.

Mrs. Burrows was a native of Ohio and had lived in Bethesda 22 years.

Montgomery Charter Vote Forestalled

Federation's Hectic Meeting Dissolved Before Balloting One Explosive Issue

A resolution which in effect would approve a move to place before the county voters the question of a charter form of government, was left hanging in the air by the Montgomery County Civic Federation last night, when a hectic meeting broke up before the resolution was acted upon.

Allen H. Gardner, chairman of the organization's special committee studying the Brookings survey of the county government, presented the resolution.

The federation, the resolution read, favors the circulation of a petition among registered voters of the county, in order to determine if a charter board should be selected at the next general election.

The resolution continued that the charter board would then draft a charter, after proper hearings and investigations, with improvements "for economy, efficiency, democracy and the general good" of the county.

Trial Magistrate Hugh Frampton immediately attacked the resolution as "highly deceptive." He insisted there was nothing in the Brookings report asserting that a charter form of government would bring a good government to the county.

He pointed out that according to the State constitution, incorporated town and special taxing areas are exempted from the provisions of a charter government, and that there were 51 such exempted areas in Montgomery County.

James W. Gill, a member of the State Legislature, charged that adoption of a charter form of government in place of the present commissioner form would be the substitution of checks and balances for an "autonomous board of five."

After further discussion, Carey Quinn offered an amendment to the resolution, forbidding delegates to the federations, or constituent members, from circulating the petition.

In the ensuing arguments, amendment to amendments, etc., a motion to adjourn the meeting was approved and the controversy was left unsettled.

Earlier in the evening, Clyde Isham presented on behalf of the woodworking class boys of Montgomery Blair Senior High School a gavel to Federation President Joseph B. Matre.

Dr. P. F. Mulhern Discusses Work Of Freud

Dr. P. F. Mulhern, O. P., professor of history at the Dominican House of Studies, last night criticized the books of Sigmund Freud in the second of three lectures on the place of passions in human life, before the Layman's Forum in the Willard Hotel.

Dr. Mulhern declared the teachings Freud's book, "Civilization and Its Discontent," are the product of an undisciplined mind. "If followed to their logical conclusion they threaten things which we in America at this time consider most precious possessions," he said.

"Based not on reality, but on the grossest of materialistic preconceptions, Freud's doctrine makes of man the plaything of blind instinct, freedom in his philosophy is nonexistent, human dignity is an illusion, and patriotism an artificiality which impedes man's happiness—erotic love."

Elks to Aid Youths In Air Corps Tests

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 12 (AP).—The Charlottesville lodge of Elks will offer refresher courses for young men preparing to take Army corps entrance examinations. Those who complete the course will be transported by the Elks to Richmond to take the May 12 examinations.

Virginian, 25, Denies Kidnaping Charge

Wheeling, W. Va., Jan. 12 (AP).—Edgar Montgomery Dellinger, 25, of Jerome, Va., entered a plea of innocent today to a Federal indictment which charged him with kidnaping a 13-year-old Wardensville, W. Va., girl and taking her to an abandoned CCC camp at Wolf Gap, Va.

No date was set for trial.

Greenbelt Citizens to Vote On Hospital Assessment

The Greenbelt (Md.) Council last night voted to poll the town on a proposal to levy an assessment of 50 cents to a dollar a month per family to raise funds to maintain the community's ten-bed hospital.

The council authorized questionnaires to be prepared and distributed immediately to determine the sentiment of the residents as to the proposal. If the plan is approved, the council indicated it would enact an ordinance authorizing the levy.

The deficit amounting to about $8000 annually, for maintenance of the hospital heretofore has been paid by the Farm Security Administration, which has supervision of the United States owned town. Yesterday it was announced the FSA would discontinue support of the hospital.

About 40 citizens attended last night's meeting to urge that some plan be devised to maintain the hospital. Spokesmen pointed out that the need for a hospital now was greater than in the past because of the emergency.

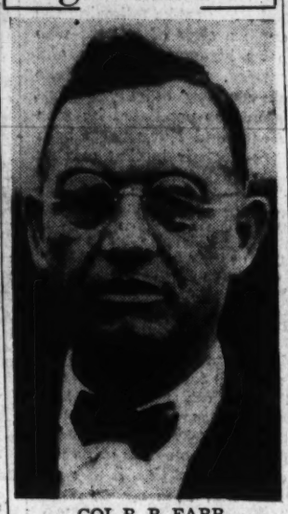
Farr Misses Opening of Legislature



COL R. R. FARR

The 1942 session of the Virginia General Assembly, to which Fairfax County voters last November elected Col. R. R. Farr, will open at Richmond tomorrow, but Col. Farr will not be there.

The Delegate-elect, a Republican who overcame heavy odds to win in the normally Democratic stronghold of Fairfax County, lies gravely ill at Georgetown Hospital, cheated of the fruits of his stunning victory by an attack of pneumonia, followed by serious complications.

Col. Farr's 189-vote victory over Francis Pickens Miller, Democratic incumbent, in the November election, marked the Republican candidate's second attempt to capture the Fairfax Delegate seat. In 1939, Col. Farr waged a whirlwind campaign that saw him lose to Miller by only 79 votes.

The 1941 campaign was even more bitterly contested. Col. Farr stumped the whole county and continued to take care of his law practice. His friends say his efforts cost him his health.

Three weeks after the election, November 4, Col. Farr was stricken, and he has been confined to the hospital almost ever since. On December 10, he passed his sixtieth birthday.

Col. Farr frequently refers to the pending session of the legislature, which he counted so heavily on attending, his friends say. It has been a blow to him to realize he can't attend, but he's still the "fighter" he was when he swung Fairfax County voters behind his candidacy.

"Col. Farr has a fight on his hands now," his friends say, "but he's going to win. He's an old campaigner who doesn't know what it means to give up."

Gaithersburg Post Names Committees

Commander J. W. Vollmer, of Barber-Briggs Post, No. 104, American Legion, Gaithersburg, Md., announced the following committee chairmen for the post.

Ernest C. Rickets, B. F. Anderson and Maurice H. Chiswell have been named to the executive committee.

The committee chairmen are: Membership, Otho Trundle; rehabilitation, Frank J. Broscart; child welfare, Mr. Trundle; Americanism, Norman Belt; finance, Walter Reinhart; national defense, Charles Orme; community service, Mr. Trundle; disaster relief, Merle Jacobs; legislative, G. Robert Gray; grave registration, William Phoebus; veterans' employment, Mr. Phoebus, and safety, Paul Watkins.

Shortage of Men Cited For Forest Fire Work

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 12 (AP).—The problem of getting men for forest fire work is being discussed by the forest and park personnel of western Maryland.

H. C. Buckingham, district forester, said the discussions which started today may be continued tomorrow without final decisions for several days. He said limited appropriations make it difficult to hire men for forest fire work in competition with industries paying high wages.

Heat Trouble Vexes County School Board

Rapid Depletion Of Prince Georges Teaching Force Also Worries Officials

Prince Georges County school officials were having a hot time of it yesterday despite the lack of heat in several schools.

Teachers and parents were keeping the telephone lines busy complaining that the schools were too cold and school officials also were worrying over the rapid depletion of the teaching force.

The Board of Education officials who were answering the telephones could sympathize with the complaints. They were in overcoats themselves most of the morning because the courthouse heating plant had broken down.

Supt. of Schools Nicholas Orem denied emphatically that he was wearing a muffler and mittens, though. "I don't own either. I hope that is a suggestion if anyone is thinking about what to get me for next Christmas," he said.

He admitted he was worried both by the furnace breakdown and the resignation of teachers.

"We are doing the best we can," he said. "We believe we have the situation in hand now."

Riverdale School, which has been having trouble for several days, closed again yesterday. Supt. Orem said he believed a new boiler was going to be necessary, but in the meantime the old boiler will have to be handfired. Two sessions last week were closed part way through the day because of a defective stoker and children were sent home again yesterday.

At Greenbelt High School and a colored elementary school in North Brentwood more trouble reports piled in, but Supt. Orem said he believed classes would resume today.

A meeting of the Riverdale Parent-Teacher Association scheduled for last night was canceled by Mrs. A. Stanley Moreau, president, because of the lack of heat.

Approximately 145 county teachers have resigned so far this year, 7 more having resigned Saturday, one so hurriedly she had to call Mr. Orem on the telephone to resign.

Building Association Elects Directors

Directors were elected as follows at the annual meeting of the Prince Georges County Building Association, Inc., of Upper Marlboro: W. Carroll Beatty, T. Van Clagett, T. Van Clagett, jr., William T. Davis, Adrian P. Fisher, James S. Heal, Harry W. McNamee, A. Douglas Parran, LeRoy Pumphrey, Charles A. Ryon and Samuel A. Wyvill.

The association has qualified for sale of defense savings bonds and the stockholders, through the institution, applied for bonds in the amount of $1700.

Aides Appointed In Bundle Drive At Silver Spring

Mrs. J. Russell McQueen, newly appointed chairman of the Montgomery County branch of Bundles for Bluejackets, last night appointed Mrs. Russell Miller and Miss Grace Barnes cotreasurers of the Silver Spring, Md. unit.

Mrs. McQueen, who also heads the Silver Spring unit of Bundles for Britain, announced that headquarters for the organization in the county building will, in the future, be open 10 a. m. to 1 p. m. daily except Sunday.

An order for wool to be distributed to volunteer knitters for Bundles for Bluejackets will be placed within a few days, it was said. Plans are being made to raise funds in various ways for the purchase of the wool.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

During this war, organized baseball will spend more than $100,000 to put bats, balls and mitts into the hands of the nation's armed forces, but the baseball industry is not expecting any return for its bounty aside from the satisfaction of making the lot of U. S. soldier and sailor a bit happier.

POVICH

The Army and Navy won't produce any ball players for the club owners. In fact, the war's chief effect on baseball will be to bite deeply into the source of player supply. In contrast, boxing profited greatly from the last war and the present one also promises to be a boon to the prize ring industry.

Out of Army and Navy ranks following the 1918 Armistice came a slew of fellows who were to burgeon as big-game fighters and stimulate boxing gates. The names of Gene Tunney and Jack Sharkey quickly suggest themselves but every weight division was populated by men who had fought with gloves in Army and Navy posts both here and abroad. For many of them, their boxing careers were born in the service.

Baseball gets no such break from its own participation in Army and Navy recreation. Not a single ball player can attribute his success in organized baseball to any baseball training he may have gotten in the service. Army and Navy baseball doesn't develop ball players for the big leagues. Because of the nature of their fighting jobs, there can be no organized leagues of any duration and the game's chief scope is recreation.

Army Boxers Got a Better Break

There is no substitute for the minor leagues as the majors' source of supply. Even the cream of the talent skimmed from the high minors is skimpy, the the club owners know that they can anticipate no help from service teams as talent incubators. The money they are putting into the hands of the armed forces in the form of baseball equipment, they can kiss off merely as their contribution to the soldier or sailor's lot. It won't come back in the form of talent.

Boxing gets a better break. In the last war, when camp fighters displayed evidence of particular skill, it was the custom to keep him out of the front lines and capitalize on his ability otherwise. He met the best men of other outfits in tournaments behind the lines and the bouts were recognized as a vital part of the morale program. Out of such bouts came a host of boxing's big-name fighters, as we were saying, and post-war fight gates zoomed.

The baseball competition in the armed forces cannot be, necessarily, so systematized or organized as was boxing. Where boxing rings might be pitched, baseball diamonds could not be laid out. Baseball is that much more complex and less transportable. Thus the ball player with talent is denied the organized competition that helped to develop fighters in the last war.

There is one item, however, that should cushion the shock of war for baseball this time, compared to 1917-18. The soldier's lot this time may not be as tough on the ball player. Bing Miller, of the old Athletics, who served with distinction in World War I, orated along those lines last summer following the induction of Hank Greenberg into the Army.

No Long Marches, Heavy Packs

"A couple of years in the Army shouldn't hurt Greenberg's baseball career," said Miller. "Army conditions have changed. Today's soldiers don't have those long marches that wear a man out, and the chances are he's riding a tank or a jeep where we were trudging along with heavy packs in the last war. And when it rained, those packs seemed twice as heavy.

"I always thought I was in pretty good shape to play ball again while I was in the Army, but when I came out I learned I was muscle bound around the shoulders from carrying those big packs on those long marches. I could hardly get a bat around when I tried to swing at a pitch. I had to have those hard back and shoulder muscles broken up before I was in shape to play ball again.

"The fellows in this army should have a cinch, though. They don't do enough marching to hurt 'em, and those big packs are a thing of the past. There isn't any reason why a fellow who puts in a couple of years as a soldier shouldn't be able to get back into baseball without any trouble, if he was a good ball player."

We were about to say that we couldn't recall a ball player who got his start while in the Army, but there was one. He was Alvin Crowder, the old pitcher, who served a long hitch with the Army in the Philippines and learned to pitch in the camp games. Crowder went on to an illustrious career in the big leagues, but as a former soldier ball player, he was a shining exception.

MORE NAMES FOR HALL OF FAME

New York, Jan. 12.—The veteran baseball fans of the country—at least the good cross-section which responded to a recent plea from this department—are agreed that of all the great baseball figures of the past who are now in the Hall of Fame, the man who most deserves that honor is Rogers Hornsby.

CONSIDINE

The great right-handed hitter, who has been tacitly barred from a major league managerial berth because owners fear they'll arouse the wrath of Judge Landis if they appoint a man who in turn aroused Landis' antiracing ire, has a lifetime batting average of .358. Only Cobb's suitably immortalized .363 average tops Hornsby's. The Rajah thrice hit over .400 and was a winning World Series manager.

But he has never been able to muster enough votes among the baseball writers of the country to induct him in the Cooperstown, N. Y., memorial to the game. The rules state that only players garnering 75 per cent of the total sportswriters' votes are eligible.

We saw so few of the old-timers in action that we asked the more seasoned fans to guide us in making the ten choices we are permitted as a baseball writer. It was Hornsby, by a comfortable margin, for first choice—even among fans whose shaky handwriting proved their statements that they are close students of the game as far back as the 1880's.

Behind Hornsby finished the late great Miller Huggins, tiny boss of the Yankees during the fabulous twenties. Dozens of old-timers remembered him as a player, but by and large he gained votes as a manager who miraculously held together a gang of the toughest, wildest and greatest players the game ever knew.

Frankie Frisch Rates a Place

Immediately back of Huggins finished Frankie Frisch, now manager of the Pirates, but a great player from the day he left Fordham in 1919 to join the Giants until he played his final rheumatic game for the Cardinals in 1937. His lifetime batting average is .316, and he holds a host of records and near records. He made six hits in six consecutive times at bat in a game in 1924; set a record for most chances accepted by a second baseman, plus a record for most assists; led his league three times in stolen bases, played in eight World Series; hit .571 in his two all-star games and was always a great, driving force on the field.

Mickey Cochrane, of almost similar temperament, finished behind Frisch in fourth place in our poll. Many called him the greatest catcher they had ever seen. Curiously enough, the baseball writers have never given a catcher enough votes to put him in the Hall of Fame.

Our poll became snarled in a tie for fifth place, a tie between Clark Griffith and the late Rube Waddell. Griffith pioneered with Ban Johnson and Charles Comiskey (both in the hall) to form the American League and became its first winning manager, as pilot of the White Sox in 1901. He won 24 games and lost only 7 that year; won 235 and lost 138 during his long, active life in the sport, inaugurated many helpful reforms, installed much new technique into pitching—and hasn't been forgotten by the old-timers.

Brooklyn Remembers the Dazzler

Waddell, the great eccentric who needed a keeper, won 203 games and lost 142 during his curious career and struck out the appalling number of 2375 men. He struck out 343 men in 1904, and once pitched a full doubleheader. It was during his minor league days that he once called in all of his fielders—and struck out the side with the aid of only his catcher.

Brooklyn hasn't forgotten Dazzy Vance, in the rush to hail "Dem Bums." The old "Dazzler" copped seventh place in this poll. Back of Vance came Iron Man Joseph Jerome McGinnity, who started pitching for Montgomery (Ala.) in 1893 and finished with Dubuque in 1925. Five times McGinnity, who reached his greatest fame under McGraw, pitched doubleheaders. Back of the "Iron Man," in ninth place, finished Hughie Jennings, manager of the Tigers from 1907 through 1920, a great batter in the era of the dead ball (and hit by the pitcher 49 times in one season). And in tenth place came Frank Chance, the "Peerless Leader," boss of the Cubs in the early 1900's when the Cubs made four World Series between 1906 and 1910.

These ten names will go on our Hall of Fame ballot. Thanks.

Hogan, Thomson Tie for Rich Golf Title

Snead Blows Lead With 8 On Last Hole

Thompson Finishes With Par 72 to Tie Hogan; Cooper Takes 285 at Los Angeles

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Jan. 12.—Drama and heartbreaks were written into the finish of the seventeenth annual $10,000 Los Angeles Open Golf Tournament today as Wee Benny Hogan and Husky Jimmy Thomson wound up in a deadlock for the rich prize and history repeated itself with a slap in the face for Hard-Luck Sam Snead.

Hogan and Thomson, golf's mightiest men today, finished the four-day 72-hole battle over the green acres of Hillcrest Country Club tied at 282 blows apiece. Thomson shot the finish round over the par 36, 36—72 course in uneventful, consistent fashion, leaving Hogan to supply the gallery thrill, and Snead and Pace-Setter Harry Cooper to furnish the disappointment.

Out Goes Slammin' Sam

Slamming Sam from Hot Springs, Va., blew himself out of the tournament on the eighteeth. He took eight blows to conquer the steep elevated par-five hole and ended with 285.

It was an eight on a par-five hole at Philadelphia in 1939 that cost Snead the United States Open.

Cooper, who started out on the final round with a two-stroke lead over Hogan and three strokes over Thomson and Snead, faded under the bristling pace of these two power sluggers, Hogan and Jimmy, and took a 75 for 285.

Thomson finished first with a brilliant 69, and Hogan, biggest money winner in the game today, came up to the 500-yard eighteenth needing a birdie four.

Sam Snead had reached the eighteenth but a short time before, but he was three blows under par. Then came Snead's explosion from the front rank with a 72 for 285.

Hogan Gains a Tie

Hogan's drive traveled 325 yards, and he reached the green with an iron, going past the flag by 25 feet. He got down in two for his birdie, a score of 70 and a tie with Thomson.

The crowd loved it.

The two play the deadlock off tomorrow for the prize money—$3500 to the winner and $1700 to the runner-up.

Snead, cooper and young Chick Harbert, of Battle Creek, Mich., who had a 70, tied in the 285 bracket, while six strokes back of the twin leaders were former National Champion Byron Nelson, of Toledo, and Willie Goggin, of White Plains, N. Y.

Horton Smith, the first-round leader, took 75 blows to get around today and tied with Herman Barron, White Plains, and Paul Runyan, Rumson, N. J.

Chandler Harper, Portsmouth, Va., slipped in late to tie Nelson and Goggin at 288 after shooting a 69. Jimmy Demaret, Detroit, a former Los Angeles winner, had 75 for 292, tying with P. G. A. Champion Vic

Movies Now Beckon Golf's Ben Hogan; Screen Test Taken

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Jan. 12.—Golf Star Benny Hogan may become a motion picture actor.

Hollywood cinema producers watched his dramatic birdie on the eighteenth hole of the Los Angeles Open today, tying for the big prize, and renewed negotiations to get the Texas-born Hershey (Pa.) pro, into the movies.

Hogan, top money winner of the professional links ranks in 1942, already has taken a screen test.

The studio about ready to sign Hogan to a contract—and all the formalities were said to be nearly over—is Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Amsterdam Sends Donnelly to Akron

Amsterdam, N. Y., Jan. 12 (AP).—Amsterdam's baseball club traded Second Baseman Ed Donnelly, former Colgate footballer, today to Arkon, of the Middle Atlantic League, for four players and cash, amount undisclosed.

Amsterdam gets Bill Balfour, owned by Arkon; Bill Woop and Charlie Hag, who played with Easton, of the Eastern Shore League, and Salvatore Reca, who was with Butler, of the Penn State Association.

In a second deal, Amsterdam sold Pitcher Bob James outright to Binghamton.

All of the clubs figuring in the two deals are members of the New York Yankees' chain system.

Columbus Five Beaten, 49-48, By Baltimore

By Bill Burnett

The toughest kind of all to lose—by one point—was Columbus University's lot last night when the basketball forces of Baltimore U., nine points behind with as many minutes to go, swept to victory in an up and down battle at Tech gym.

It was 49-48 at the final horn, but only because the Explorers missed three straight chances to tie it up in the last four minutes. And it was the efforts of a Mutt and Jeff combination that made the invading Bees' triumph possible.

Towering Paul Oberhaus, center, and squat Nat Winitsky were the prize pair, scoring all but six of the winners' points as they dug out of a 39-30 deficit in the last half of the final period. Oberhaus got ten of those points before going out on personal fouls, and Winitsky kicked in with three of them, including the winning one. His belated flurry built Oberhaus' total for the game to 22 points, easily high.

In the last few minutes it was Acky Viana and Gerald Burns who flunked their big tests. Twice Viana missed shots from the foul line, and Burns was unsuccessful once.

Otherwise the game, which saw Baltimore seeking its seventh victory in nine starts, and Columbus its sixth in seven, was anybody's. The Bees quickly took a 9-3 margin, built it to 14-6 with half the first session gone.

But Columbus came to life at that point. Lenny Stanton and Burns started pouring 'em in, and with three minutes remaining Stanton tapped home a follow shot that put the hosts ahead, 15-14. Despite one more Baltimore rush, Columbus was out front by 21-20 at the half.

The advantage was again being shunted around like a boxcar in the second half before the Explorers

Indiana Five Gives Purdue First Defeat

Hoosiers Take 40-to-39 Game Before 6000; Crowd Stops Game

By the Associated Press

Bloomington, Ind., Jan. 12.—Indiana's Hoosiers, beaten by both Northwestern and Minnesota, dealt Purdue's first Big Ten basketball defeat of the season here tonight, 40 to 39, in a game which had 6000 fans in such an uproar it was necessary to stop play in the final minute to straighten out players and officials alike on the score.

Irvin Swanson, tow-headed forward of Laporte, Ind., scored 14 points to provide the spark that gave Indiana its second Big Ten triumph in four starts. Purdue had won three.

The Boilermakers trailed until there was only nine minutes to go. Then they took a 35-to-34 lead only to have Andy Zimmer, of Goodland, Ind., and Swanson shoot Indiana out in front at 37 to 35. Forrest (Frosty) Sprowl, of Oblong, Ill., who was about all Purdue had in the way of offense tonight, tied it up again, but that man Swanson popped up and hit a free throw to give Indiana a 38-to-37 margin.

Then came the final uproar. Sprowl hit from the field for Purdue, but the officials ruled it no goal because he traveled. So terrific was the din that the scoreboard registered the field goal and Ed Denton, of Jeffersonville, hit for Indiana before the referee stopped play and explained to players and scorers that Sprowl's goal did not count.

Howard Hoffman connected for Purdue just as the final gun scored, but it left the Boilermakers one point in arrears.

Mexican Tops 3-Cushion Title Play

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Jan. 12.—Joe Chamaco, of Mexico City, today became the first player to win two matches in the world's championship three-cushion billiards tournament with a 50-to-31 victory over Earle Lookabaugh, of Chicago, in 50 innings. Lookabaugh thereby suffered his second defeat, having been beaten by Champion Willie Hoppe in his opening match.

Arthur Rubin, of Brooklyn, also lost his second straight, falling before Jake Schaefer, of Cleveland, 50 to 41, in 42 innings. It was Schaefer's first triumph, since he bowed earlier to Otto Reiselt, of Philadelphia.

Schaefer helped his own cause with a high run of nine and later clicked off a run of eight. The only contestant previously to rack up a nine was Welker Cochran, of San Francisco, who with Hoppe was idle today.

In evening matches Ralph Greenleaf, of Monmouth, Ill., and John Fitzpatrick were paired as were Reiselt and Arthur Thurnblad, of Chicago.

Mounts Whip Catholic U. Five, 42 to 36

By the Associated Press.

Emmitsburg, Md., Jan. 12.—Mount St. Mary's court team downed Catholic University, 42-36, tonight to tally its first win in five started.

The game, a Mason-Dixon Conference battle, gave the Mounts revenge for a 47-44 defeat earlier in the season by the Washingtonians.

The Mounts took an early lead but lost it when Scanlon, Catholic center, sparked the first visitors' attack. From then on it was a nip-and-tuck battle, with the Mounts ahead at half time, 18-16.

Let by Masterson, who tallied 11 of the Mount's points, the home team stayed out front throughout the second half, and broke up Catholic plays.

Scanlon was high scorer of the game with 15 points.

Duke Beats V.M.I. Quintet, 52-47, in Last 2 Minutes

By the Associated Press

Lynchburg, Va., Jan. 12.—Duke University surged ahead in the last two minutes to defeat Virginia Military, 52 to 47, in a hard-fought Southern Conference battle here tonight.

Playing in the Lynchburg Armory before a crowd of 500 spectators, the Keydets took a slight lead over the Blue Devils at the beginning of the contest and held it through the first half. The half ended: V. M. I., 20; Duke, 19.

The Blue Devils came back and snatched the lead in the second half. Then the lead stayed nip and tuck until about five minutes before the end of the game when Duke finally held the Keydets.

W. & L. Five Beats Virginia, 32-31, in Last 15 Seconds

By the Associated Press

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 12.—Washington and Lee's basketball team nosed out the University of Virginia, 32 to 31, here tonight, with Lee Signiago sinking the clinching basket in the last 15 seconds of the game.

A six-basket barrage by Dick Wiltshire, Virginia ace, in the second half helped the Cavaliers overcome the Generals' long lead, but the men from Lexington won out in the final scramble.

Hoyas Avert Beating by Sudden Rally

Schmidli Ties Score, Bormheimer Tosses Winning Goal; Owls Pile Up Foul Points

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Georgetown answered the hysterical cries of 1800 Riverside Stadium spectators with two baskets in the last 45 seconds last night to hand a highly-advertised Temple University team a 42-40 defeat in an enduring court thriller.

Georgetown trailed, 40-38, with less than a minute to play when Charlie Schmidt came up with a two-pointer from a huddle under the basket to tie the score. Then after the Hoyas had taken the ball away from Temple, Bill Bornheimer stood in his favorite side-court position and arched a shot which was good all the way and swished through the cords for victory with five seconds remaining to play.

Hoyas Celebrate

The charging Hoyas again took the ball away from the Owls on the return trip down court and when Temple took time out with three seconds remaining to play Georgetown was in possession of the ball. It was all over but the shouting which was terrific.

The victorious Georgetown players immediately staged an impromptu celebration in the middle of the floor, embracing each other in glee over their first major triumph of the season. Temple came here with one of the outstanding records in the Nation, eight victories and one defeat, including a Saturday night triumph over famed Rhode Island State.

Temple Fouls Count

The Hoyas had apparently tossed the game away from the foul stripe, making but 4 out of 12 from the gift-line, while Temple cashed in on 10 of 11 free throws, with 6-foot-6 Bobby Dorn underhanding seven in without a miss. The colorful Pat Kennedy, a basketball sideshow, handled the officialing in his usual crowd-pleasing style.

The first half was a basket-for-basket pace as the lead changed hands eight times and Temple went to intermission with a slim 22-21 advantage. The Owls, who beat Georgetown 35-34 in December, managed to stay a point or two ahead in the second half until Schmidli tied the score with a foul shot at 34-all.

Bill Morganstine tucked in a lay-up shot for the Owls and Al Snyder followed with his first points of the evening, a pot-shot from mid-court and when Dorn converted from the charity stripe Temple led, 39 to 34, and it looked like good-night, Georgetown.

Cotton-haired Don Martin plunked a pot-shot through for the Hoyas and Schmidli reduced the margin to a point when he took a quick pass from Buddy O'Grady under the basket and made it 39-38 with a perfectly executed layup shot. Morganstine set the stage for the bangup finish with a foul which made it 40-38 and Temple was

Missing Rebounds, Foul Shots Cost G.W. Latest Games—Coach

Reinhart Gives Squad Long Drill Upon Return From Duke, Wake Forest Losses

Failing to get the ball on rebounds and missing foul shots cost George Washington both the Wake Forest and Duke games, Coach Bill Reinhart said yesterday as he drove the Colonials through a long session at the Tin Tabernacle in preparation for the Georgetown game on Thursday.

"We've run up against a lot of good ball clubs this season and it's no disgrace to lose to any of them," Reinhart said yesterday, "but at the same time a basket or two at the right minute would have won most of them and we should start clicking here at any time."

The George Washington court mentor had the squad spend most of the afternoon on lay-up and short shots as the Colonials have been missing far too many of the inside-the-foul-line variety in their seven games this season.

John Konizewski, the grid tackle who made the freshman basketball team but has not played varsity ball due to his football knee, joined the squad yesterday but he will hardly make many ball games due to his late start.

Southern sports writers all raved over Matt Zunic on the Colonials' trip last week and the All-American candidate gathered considerable prestige, even though his club lost two games. Zunic is averaging better than 13 points a game with 94 in seven games.

The G. W. coach and squad took in the Georgetown-Temple game last night in a body. The Colonials have lost three games in a row to the Hoyas and will be out to snap the losing streak.

Baltimoreans Trail Throughout; Foul Shots Give Johnnies Five-Point Victory

After two straight beatings, St. John's High basketers finally got back in the victory column yesterday when they played host to Mount St. Joseph, of Baltimore, and eked out a 35-30 decision.

The Johnnies were out front all the way, but there were times they were sorely pressed. One of these was at intermission when their lead was a mere 13-11.

Chuck Dudley, veteran forward, stepped out of his defensive role to assume scoring honors with four field goals and five charity tosses, 13 points. Those five single-pointers, incidentally, made up the difference between the clubs.

Tops in scoring for the losers were Everett and Kerchner, each with nine points.

Navy Relief Fund Swelled by $89,092 By Louis-Baer Bout

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 12.—Promoter Mike Jacobs announced today that the Navy Relief Fund received $89,092.01 from last Friday night's benefit fight between Joe Louis and Buddy Baer.

This represented Louis' entire purse, minus only training expenses; Jacobs' entire promotional profits, a portion of Baer's cut, a contribution from every preliminary fighter on the card and half the salary of every ring official who worked as referee or judge.

Jacobs said the Navy would announce the complete breakdown of the figures tomorrow. The gross gate was $189,700.55. The net was estimated at $161,000, of which Louis' share would have been in the neighborhood of $64,000. His training expenses ordinarily run about $13,000 or $14,000 for a fight, which would make his contribution to the Navy fund approximately $50,000.

Louis Declared Fit By Army Doctors

Heavyweight Champion Passes Physical at Fort Jay; Induction Set for Tomorrow

By Sid Feder

United Press Sports Writer.

New York, Jan. 12.—Uncle Sam's Army told Joe Louis today that he doesn't have flat feet and that he's husky enough to put on a soldier suit Wednesday.

The heavyweight champion of the world took a five-minute ferry ride across New York Harbor, became draft registrant No. 374 at the First Army Headquarters at Fort Jay on Governors Island, and, after an hour and a half session with a set of doctors, was given his final physical "okay" for the Army.

Then, munching a handful of peanuts, he took the ferry back to Manhattan for his last 48 hours as Joe Louis, the champ who gets $100,000 or so for a few brief minutes' work. Wednesday at his induction at Camp Upton, Long Island, he becomes Private J. Louis Barrow at $21 per month.

Afterward, the Army will shift him to its morale division, and in late March he'll probably have a furlough to fight for the Army fund. Last Friday he trotted out his guns for the Navy Relief Society and knocked out Buddy Baer in 2 minutes and 56 seconds, a benefit for which the Navy fund received a check for $89,092.01 today.

Center of Attraction

The Army took over Joe Louis today—but in the process Joe just about took over the Army. He created more furore at First Army Headquarters than a full dress inspection for the chief of staff. Some 400 other selectees, on hand for their own physical tests, flocked around him on the ferry and in the long chute-like examination rooms of Fort Jay's Medical Building and paid little, if any, attention to the sergeants and the "M. P.'s trying to keep them lined up. Majors and colonels and captains at the post came over to shake his hand and be photographed with him. And even Jim Braddock, the gallant old warrior from whom Joe won the heavyweight title back in 1937, took the ferry ride to give him a "good luck, pardner."

In fact, Joe was about the calmest citizen in sight during the proceedings. He got up at 6 a. m., and was still sleepy-eyed when he turned up at the ferry house with Julian Black, one of his managers; Promoter Mike Jacobs, Col. H. Clay Supplee, Second Corps morale of-

Official attendance figures were not disclosed. Unofficial estimates place the A's 1941 attendance in excess of 500,000.

Tunney Faces Louis, Sticks To His Guns

By Bob Considine

New York, Jan. 12.—Lieut. Comdr. Gene Tunney had just finished charging that the United States Army is going sissy under the "gentle ministrations of hostesses," this afternoon, when there was a shuffle outside of Tunney's office door and in moved the Army's newest and the world's most destructive soldier—Private Joe Louis.

Louis wasn't there to demonstrate possible flaws in Tunney's blast, nor was he there to let the lieutenant commander see that he was standing up pretty well under Tunney's several magazine articles of late, in which Louis finished a bad second to the fistic shades of Dempsey and Tunney. Joe's call was purely social.

Louis had just come from Fort Jay, where he underwent a two-hour physical examination, was judged to be in perfect shape, asked for some Japs to fight, but was told to be patient and to report to nearby Camp Upton on Wednesday for the remainder of his induction ceremonies.

Tunney, outspoken former Marine, who retired undefeated from the heavyweight championship Louis now holds, pumped Joe's paw enthusiastically. He congratulated Joe on his physical condition and lauded him for hastening his entrance into the Army by reporting to a New York instead of a Chicago draft board.

But Tunney didn't take back a word about the mollycoddling of Army men. And, to boot, he even included the Navy and his beloved Marines.

"What the men need is less pampering from hostesses of all types," Gene asserted. "The boys in the other World War didn't get that kind of babying—and they did all right They trained all day long, physically and mentally. They learned the trade of two-fisted fighting men. They were warriors with a purpose—from 5:30 in the morning until 9 o'clock at night, when taps blew."

As for the service man of today who has fallen under the spell of "hostesses" he expects to be the beneficiary of cigarette campaigns,

Dempsey Seeks National Guard Post

By International News Ser.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 12.—Denied admission to the Regular Army because of his age, Jack Dempsey, 46-year-old former king of the heavyweights, applied to Gov. Herbert Lehman today for permission to enlist in the New York State Guard.

Jack, determined to serve his country in some manner even though he's been adjudged too old to shoulder a gun, offered his services to the State Guard "in any capacity." Dempsey appeared in person before the Governor, who thanked the former champion, but said that application for enlistment must be made through Maj. Gen. William Ottman, commander of the State Guard, at New York City.

Organized a year ago to replace the Federalized National Guard, the State organization now has 17,000 officers and men with Lieut. Gov. Charles Poletti as a private.

Arch McDonald Gets the 'Bong' From the Baton—Pals Carry On

Burly Announcer, Interviewing Miss Brown, Tries Twirling Gadget and Quickly Goes Down

Participation in violent (?) sports and talking about them over the air are two different matters, one of the city's ace sports commentators found out yesterday.

The unhappy victim was Arch McDonald, burly WJSV expert on everything of a sports nature from the Nats to Nurmi. This is how he learned his lesson:

During his regular broadcast at 6:15 last night, Arch attempted an interview with Betty Brown, whom the "Ice-Capades of 1942" bill as the world champion drum majorette. The interview went all right until Arch tried to put to practice Miss Brown's demonstration of baton-swinging. Then——

The Victim

"I was spinning the baton slowly," Arch admits, "but Miss Brown insisted I do it faster. Suddenly the 'bong' end swung around and hit me on the temple. I was dizzy for several minutes, but I think I'll live."

Announcer Reg Allen and Bill McCormick, of the Variety Club, finished the program for the injured hero.

"And it wasn't a press agent gag," McDonald concluded.

Tunney Is Seeking Instructors to Aid In Physical Work

By the Associated Press

Lieut. Comdr. J. J. (Gene) Tunney, the Navy's director of physical education, yesterday began a Nation-wide tour in search of instructors to carry out the Navy's physical education program.

His tour opened in New York today and will end in Raleigh, N. C., February 28.

His itinerary will include Cleveland, Ohio (January 19 to 21); Chicago (January 22 to 25); Kansas City, Mo. (January 26 to 28); Denver, Colo. (January 30-31); Portland, Oreg. (February 3-4); San Francisco (February 5-7); Los Angeles (February 9-10); Dallas, Tex. (February 13-14).

Accepted applicants will be enlisted as chief specialists (athletic, acting appointment), Naval Reserve.

Manor Again Names Jones President

William L. Jones, assistant to the president of PEPCO, was reelected president of Manor Country Club at the annual meeting last night.

Jones and the entire 1941 slated was reelected, others being Ralph D. Pittman, vice president; George M. Quirk, treasurer; H. L. Simcoe, assistant treasurer, and E. B. Wilson, secretary. Ira L. Ewers was elected to a new position as assistant secretary.

W. A. Covert was the only newly elected member of the board of governors, succeeding Walter L. Funderburk. Covert and Albert M. Boulc, Quirk, Wilson and Simcoe will serve as community members on the board and Pittman, Jones, Ewers and E. L. Norris were re-elected active board members.

All committee chairman were re-appointed, Harry G. Pitt, golf; Harry Whitlock, house; Ralph Gibson, greens; John R. Daily, entertainment, and C. S. Browning, swimming.

The annual treasurer's report showed a substantial gain over last year despite increased operation costs.

Now we both think I'm Swell
. . . thanks to that BETTER ROOM!"
1. I'm leader of a band which is strictly sockeroo. In other words, terrific! When I notice this fellow giving me the ear four nights in a row, I'm pleased. I figure he knows good music. So during the intermission I walk over to him and say, "Back again, eh? Glad you like the band." His answer amazes me . . . "The band? Oh, it's all right. But I'm really here to escape that awful room I live in!"
2. I don't know whether to be mad or sorry. So I become a little of each. "Listen, brother," I shout, "when it comes to better music—I got it! See? And when it comes to a Better Room—The Washington Post Want Ads got it! Get it?" With that he stands up. "Say that again, buddy—about The Washington Post." I snap back, "Y'heard me! Every day in The Washington Post—under 'Rooms for Rent'—you find a selection of the finest rooms in town. Why, people tell me they'd rather advertise there because they get such nice tenants. So that's the place to look!"
3. He glares at me a second. Then he starts for the door and I start for the bandstand. "Whew!" I say to myself, "that was close!" But then a few nights later he's back! . . . and he heads straight for me. "There!" he shouts gruffly. "Accept this new baton, maestro, from a grateful public. Your music is marvelous! So is that Better Room I just found in The Washington Post!"

DeKalb Wins Indian Creek Purse; Arcaro Rides 'Triple'

Eddie Scores By 4 Lengths In Feature

Victory Breaks Run Of Longshots; Place Spoils to Doublrab; Alaking Runs Third

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Jan. 12.—Eddie Arcaro, whose four-month sentence for rough riding expired on New Year's Day, booted home a trio of winners today at Tropical Park, among them De Kalb, winner of the featured 6-furlong Indian Creek Purse.

De Kalb, recently claimed for $4500 by W. Hirschensohn, won by fourth lengths on a track that was drying out fast. The winner was the only favorite in the first five races to reward the betters. The black 4-year-old went to the post a 9-to-10 choice in a field of five. His time was 1:11 4-5.

Doublrab, representing F. Campagna, was second, with H. P. Headley's Alaking third.

Arcaro also won with Sizzling Pan in the fifth and on Wise Hobby in the eighth.

This was the next-to-last card of the meeting. Hialeah Park opens its ornate gates Wednesday for 46 days of the sport.

The Indian Creek was strictly a two-horse race between two old rivals. De Kalb had command of the situation from the drop of the flag to the finish. He was hustled into a wide lead before the first furlong had been covered and never showed a sign of faltering. Doublrab had just as easy an assignment in outfooting the other three starters.

Brooklyn Six Sends Thurier to Farm Club

New York, Jan. 12 (AP).—Manager Red Dutton, of the Brooklyn Americans, today sent Center Fred Thurier down to the club's Springfield, Mass., far min the American Hockey League. Club officials explained that Thurier, top scorer of the American League last year, had not fitted in as well as expected with Brooklyn.

Eagles' Half of Prospective Goalie Duel

This burly young gent is Craig McClelland, veteran goalie whom the Washington Eagles will be depending on in their battle with the Atlantic City Gulls tonight at Riverside Stadium. His play will be observed closely, because across from him will be the Gulls' Goalie Leith Dickie, whom the Eagles released in favor of McClelland

Goalie Duel Seen Tonight In Eagle Game

Nineteen-year-old Leith Dickie, the handsome, curly haired American boy from Saranac Lake, N. Y., who started the season with the Washington Eagles, will be in the nets for Atlantic City's Sea Gulls tonight when they bid for their fourth victory in five starts against the defending Eastern Hockey League champions at Riverside Stadium, 8:30 o'clock.

On Friday night at Riverside the Eagles are to play host to the fast New York Rovers in an outstanding game that is to donate ten per cent of its gross receipts to the Blood Bank Fund, sponsored by the Washington Post in the interests of Children's Hospital.

Craig McClelland, the 180-pound veteran who played his finest game since joining the Eagles as the champions turned back the New York Rovers by a 4-3 score in Madison Square Garden last Sunday, will tend goal for the Eagles.

Dickie Promises Revenge

Dickie was released to the Sea Gulls several weeks ago when the Eagles acquired the broad beamed McClelland from the Corwall Flyers and has worked up a bitter personal feud with his old teammates since.

"Red MacKenzie let me go on the shortest possible notice," Dickie exploded upon receiving notice of the transfer," and I'll spend the rest of the season making him sorry."

Dickie kept the first installment of his promise in Atlantic City recently as he turned back the Eagles, 6-2. He also shattered precedent only last Tuesday night by administering Johnstown its first defeat on home ice in 15 games, 7-4, and has mastered both Atlantic City and Baltimore in recent games.

Battle of Goalies

That Dickie may experience some difficulty in making the Eagles sorry tonight, however, was best expressed by his successor, the quiet-mannered McClelland, yesterday.

"I'll be in the nets for the Eagles tomorrow night," McClelland said, "and there's a good chance that Dickie will have to show his best, and a mighty good best at that, to beat me."

The goal tending duel between the youthful Dickie (19 years) and experienced McClelland (27 years) may easily prove the game's feature. Both are fired to a high competitive pitch, and neither will be satisfied with anything short of convincing victory.

The Eagles again will be skating two men short in the continued absence of Paul Courteau and Tommy McCormack, who are on the hospital list. The Gulls likewise are short two players following releases recently handed to Defenseman Nels Dixon and Greg Kirby, center, who have been shipped back to Canada.

Tropical Park Racing Notes

By the Associated Press

For the purpose of testifying to its interest and sympathy in the needs of the Army and Navy personnel, and in the Red Cross, the Tropical Park management yesterday announced that it would at once present $3000 to three designated service charities. These are the Army Relief Society, Navy Relief Society and the Red Cross, each receiving $1000.

Horses due from Santa Anita early yesterday were held up when two trains were derailed at Bayard, Fla., just outside the old St. Johns Park Racetrack. This necessitated a rerouting of the train carrying the horses. They unloaded at Tropical Park in the afternoon.

Apprentice Willie Day, top rider at Tropical Park with 16 firsts, is a thoughtful young man. At the close of the Empire City fall meeting, the New Yorker presented his parents with a gift of a new home at Woodside on Long Island. His dad, Jimmy Day, was a pugilist and represented the United States of America in the Olympics. Willie himself was an amateur boxer before drifting into racing. It was his uncle, Pat Hogan, famous detective of New York, who encouraged the lad to become a race rider.

Conn McCreary is determined to overhaul Willie Day for the Tropical riding honors in the final day of the meeting. The diminutive saddle star trails the New Yorker by only one marker, his score this morning totaling 15 winners.

The first shipment of Santa Anita horses arrived at Tropical Park Sunday night. They consisted of 14 head in care of William Baker, the property of several owners. Best known of the lot are Bucking and Equistar, stake performers who will race here under the banner of Mrs. A. K. Weast. The first named, a one-time Joseph E. Widener representative, is a good stayer and winner of the Johnny Bullman Handicap, a 2¼-mile test at Washington Park last August. Equistar, a former New Yorker, is a sprinting son of Equipoise.

Knox, Indian Center, Leads S. C. Scorers

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., Jan. 12.—Glenn Knox, gangling center on the William and Mary basketball team which is now setting the pace in the Southern Conference campaign, holds the scoring lead with 61 points in four family tilts.

The second best sharpshooter is Matt Zunic, George Washington, with 56 points in four games. Travis, of Maryland, has gotten 42 points in three games. "Bones" McKinney, North Carolina State soph, picked up 23 points in his only conference appearance against Davidson.

Knox played end on the W. & M. grid squad and earned a berth on the second All-Southern eleven, missing a first team spot by only a few votes. He hails from Niota, Tenn., and transferred to W. & M. last year from Tennessee Wesleyan where he rolled up 467 points in 23 games.

A step behind W. and M.'s Indians in the team race are Duke's defending champions with three successes so far, and an engagement with V. M. I. coming up tonight at Lynchburg.

Furman Ranks Next

The surprising Furman club, which conquered Clemson and the highly regarded South Carolina quint last week, ranks next with two wins, and North Carolina and North Carolina State have both overwhelmed Davidson in their only loop engagements.

W. and M.'s leaders have only one contest scheduled prior to retiring from action to study for examinations, meeting Richmond here Tuesday night.

North Carolina, pace setters throughout the 1941 campaign, but ousted in the first game of the title tournament by Duke, will be hosts to Wake Forest Tuesday and travel to Clemson and South Carolina Friday and Saturday.

Clemson plays at North Carolina State Tuesday and at Wake Forest on Wednesday. Other loop games are Davidson at South Carolina, Tuesday; W. and L. at Virginia Tech, Thursday; Richmond at V. M. I., Friday, and Richmond at W. and L., Saturday.

The eight teams in the circuit with the best records at the end of the season will meet in the annual tournament at Raleigh, N. C., in a battle for the championship.

Canadian Open Golf Tourney To Be Retained

By the Associated Press

Toronto, Jan. —The Canadian Open golf tournament, the only national golf tournament still being held in Canada, will take place as usual this year, officials of the Royal Canadian Golf Association said today. Other national championships were canceled earlier in the war.

One official said he saw no reason to cancel this national championship match as has been done by the United States Golf Association.

(In New York the United States Open and amateur tourneys, along with the women's title play and public links tournament, were canceled because of the war Saturday.)

The use of war saving certificates as prizes in amateur matches was accepted by the Canadian association last year and will continue to be used without jeopardizing the standing of amateurs.

War Not to Seriously Hurt 1942 Indoor Track Season

Big-Time Fixtures Will Be Run Off; New York's Annual Meets to Go On

New York, Jan. 12.—The indoor track and field season, with New York as the capital of the board-floor racers, will have almost as lengthy a program for 1492 as in previous years, with only a slight drop due to wartime cancellations.

A survey of the various cities where track and field meets have reigned annually as big-time fixtures reveals that all of the time-tried tournaments, although starting later than usual, will be run off almost without exception in Chicago, Washington, Philadelphia, Kansas City, Cleveland, Boston and New York.

Seven major events are listed on the local schedule, starting with the Metropolitan Amateur Athletic Union senior championships on January 24 at the Bronx Coliseum and finishing with the New York chapter Knights of Columbus invitation fixture on March 14 at Madison Square Garden.

The Garden, annually the scene of prolific record-busting by the track and field contingent, will stage its regular quintet of major meets—the Millrose games on February 7, the New York A. C. events on February 21, the National A. A. U. competition on February 28, the Intercollegiate A. A. A. A. on March 7 and the New York chapter, K. of C., games on March 14.

Repeat Performance

At the Coliseum where the Metropolitan A. A. U. and Intercollegiate title events were run off for the first time last year, both events will be restaged, the former on January 24 and the latter on February 12.

Chief sufferer because of military rulings against the use of armories was Boston, where the Veterans of Foreign Wars meet and the Prout Memorial games were canceled. Only local casualties were the Columbia K. of C. meet here and the Seton Hall College games in New Jersey.

The "proceeding as usual" sign has been hung out for nearly all other out-of-town meets, the program listing the following—Penn A. C. at Philadelphia, February 13; the Southern Conference competition at Chapel Hill, N. C., February 28; Big Ten championships at Chicago, March 7; Missouri Valley A. A. U. title races at Kansas City, March 16; Chicago Daily News relays, March 20; Washington, D. C., A. A. meet, March 21, and the Cleveland K. of C. championships on March 27.

In line with the request for stepping up of the entire college sports schedule by Asa S. Bushnell, all members of the Intercollegiate A. A. A. are expanding their efforts with some sort of board-track practice meets. Columbia, Princeton and Penn have scheduled the Polar Bear meet for Philadelphia on February 18 and throughout the winter there will be dual and triangular competition among Army, Yale, Harvard, Cornell, Princeton, Dartmouth, Brown, New Hampshire, Tufts and Penn State.

Stars Are Available

As far as individuals go, although the armed services have dipped deeply into the personnel of the track and field world, several stars of major caliber will be available. Such well-known figures as the following will head the various divisions: Leslie MacMitchell, Walter Mehl, Tommy Quinn, Ed Culp and Campbell Kane in the mile; Greg Rice, 2 and 3 miles; Fred Wolcott, the Nation's best hurdle-hopper; Cornelius Warmerdam, the pole vaulter; Les Steers, ruler of the high jumpers and a whole crop of headliners who also include Roy Cochran, Charlie Beetham, Jimmy Herbert, Phil Lelbowitz, Johnny Borican, Al Blozis, Joe McCluskey, Dick Ganslen and Mel Trutt.

Ganslen, currently in the Army, is stationed at nearby Fort Monmouth, N. J., and expects no difficulty in competing.

Challedon, Pictor Arrive At Hialeah

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Jan. 12.—Challedon, Pictor and ten other W. L. Brann horses arrived at Hialeah Park today after a five-day train trip from California, where racing was suspended because of the war.

The two stars kicked up their heels and kept their handlers at a respectful distance when they were taken from their car, but Brann reported both made the journey in good shape.

"Challendon is in better condition than he ever has been," the owner said. "He weighs 1160 pounds now."

The two horses are entered in the $50,000 Widener, the Hialeah meeting feature, while others in the group may race in lesser stakes.

Expected during the week are Charles S. Howard's Mioland and Porter's Cap.

Always a Good Show, Chums: Come on Out

The battle over the selection of a referee to handle Thursday night's struggle at Turner's Arena of "Former Champions" — Ed (Strangler Lewis, one time undisputed ruler of the wrestling universe, and Ray Steele, erstwhile National Wrestling Association titleholder—opened yesterday.

Lewis, told Promoter Joe Turner, "I want omeone other than Casey Berger."

Steele, calmer of the two principals, allowed as how he would like to see Turner invite Willie Clark, famous Philadelphia official as recognized by the N. W. A. and the Philadelphia Athletic Commission, to referee the bout.

And before Turger had closed his arena doors for the evening, Benny Bortnick, the "Watermelon King," who hasn't refereed in a year, offered his services as a tribute to what he termed "two great wrestlers."

The Strangler struck out at Berger, the husky airport guard, claiming that Casey on a number of occasions broke legitimate headlocks he thought were strangles in matches with The Green Hornet and Stanley Pinto.

Gladys Gillem, the rip-roaring Oklahoma Cowgirl, yesterday was selected as the opponent for Mildred Burke, recognized feminine champion, in the special championship bout. Miss Gillem who dropped a close match to the titleholder last year at the arena, wants revenge.

Also closed out was a 30-minute bout between Emil Dusek and Fred Grobmier, rivals of Lewis and Steele a decade or so ago.

Tickets, priced at 65 cents, $1, and $1.50, are on sale at the Arena, Fourteenth and W Street Northwest.

Brewers, Sphas To Play Sunday For Naismith Fund

The Washington Brewers, fighting to overcome the Wilmington Blue Bombers in the drive for first half honors, will dedicate next Sunday night's American Professional Basketball League game with the Champion Philadelphia Sphas at Turner's Arena to the Naismith Memorial Fund.

Cach Mack Posnak announced that a portion of the gate receipts would be turned over to the committee in Springfield, Mass., planning a network of golden jubilee games in honor of Dr. James A. Naismith, the beloved one who originated the cage game back in 1891.

Posnak already has dispatched word to Roger L. Putnam, general chairman and Mayor of Springfield, that the Brewer-Sphas game would be the first in a series to aid the memorial campaign.

The Naismith Memorial Committee is undertaking to raise $300,000 to construct the Temple of Basketball as a memorial to the father of the sport on the site where his far-reaching work was begun 50 years ago.

Davis Cup Star Now In Australian Army

Sydney, Australia.—One of the latest Australians to volunteer for the Australian Imperial Force is Vivian Bede McGrath, 23-year-old tennis champion and player of five Davis Cup matches, famous for his two-handed drive.

Bill Bennings

Whether he deserves it or not, Bill is taking a winter vacation. It is reported that Alan Clarke has loaned him the use of a paddock at his farm and that Bill has turned himself out to freshen up. During his absence Clocker Mike will wire selections daily. When Bennings returns to action, he will be on the racing scene at Hialeah Park.

Two District Skaters Pass Official Tests

Barbara Philips and Dick Vass, both members of the Winter Club of Washington, Chevy Chase Ice Palace, and topflight amateur figure skaters of the District, added to their laurels in Philadelphia Monday when they passed official United States Figure Skating Association tests with high honors.

Barbara, 16-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene D. Philips, 5429 Thirtieth Place Northwest, passed her third test in figure skating, having taken the first two last season, while Dick, 17-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. George O. Vass, Chevy Chase, Md., passed his first and second tests in figures.

The tests were taken before three official judges under auspices of the Philadelphia Figure Skating Club and Humane Society. The contestants will receive official awards for each of the tests from the Winter Club.

Barbara and Dick, pupils of Dorothy Snell, Winter Club instructress, plan to seek further skating honors in the Eastern State competition which will be held in New York City, January 30, 31 and February 1.

Mason-Dixon Scorers Paced By Loyola Ace

Baltimore, Jan. 12. — Bernard Thobe, center of the Loyola Greyhounds, current leaders of the Mason-Dixon Basketball Conference with four victories and no defeats, gained the individual scoring lead today by tallying 34 points in his last two games for a total of 54 counters.

In conference games up to and including January 10, Thobe tanked 24 field goals and 6 free throws, and managed to pass Dick Scanlan, Catholic University center, who led league scoring a week ago with 35 points. Scanlan's 48-point total in five games, however, left him in second place.

This was 2 points ahead of Irv Tannebaum, Johns Hopkins ace, who came up from 35 a week ago to 46 through games of January 10.

Joe Garber, Bridgewater co-captain, topped out-of-State Mason-Dixon Conference members, with 26 points, but the Virginians have played only two league contests.

Ed Magowski, of Western Maryland, who poured in ten field goals as the Terrors trimmed Johns Hopkins Saturday night, 54-40, made it a tie for tenth place with Joe Corrado, Catholic University forward, both having 31 points in conference play.

First ten conference scoring leaders (including games of January 10):

Player.	Games.	Pts.	Avg.
Thobe (Loyola)	4	54
Scanlan (Catholic)	5	48
Tannebaum (Hopkins)	4	46

Tri-State Player Hopes to Join Cadets

Special Dispatch to The Post

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 12.—Frank J. Urbas, of Vale Summit, well known baseball player of the Tri-State territory, who was a member of the Beaver Falls team in the Pennsylvania State Association last season, has signed for the refresher course sponsored by the Elks' lodges of Cumberland and Frostburg. The course leads to entrance into the United States Army's Aviation Cadet Corps.

Cross had signed to play next season with Charlotte, N. C., in the Piedmont League. A few seasons ago Urbas played third base in the Midland and Frostburg teams of the Bi-State League.

Retailers Hear Wage Control Lack Assailed

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 12.—An economist today said "Omission of any effort to control wages" was a "key weakness" in the Administration's price control bill now before Congress and could prove disastrous.

The statement was made by Dr. Paul H. Nystrom, Columbia University professor of marketing, at a luncheon of the Association of Buying Offices, Inc.

Another economist, A. W. Zelomek, president of International Statistical Bureau, Inc., and consultant to the office of Price Administrator Leon Henderson, pointed out that as the war continues purchasing power will exceed available supplies of consumer goods.

"There are," Dr. Nystrom said, "two fatal weaknesses in the price control bill: The provision setting agricultural prices on a parity basis an dthe entire omission of any control over wages and salaries."

Emphasizing the "seriousness of the omission of any efforts to control wages," Dr. Nystrom added, "Labor costs make up more than two thirds of all costs entering into the price paid for goods and services by consumers."

"If all you concern yourself about in considering the 1942 demand-supply is this new tax bill you will be looking into the wrong end of the gun to see if it is loaded.

"The inflation that is packed into the Federal deficit—$19,000,000,000 this fiscal year and $42,000,000,000 in the next fiscal year—will explode right in your face."

War Output Leading

Urging retailers to see both sides of the picture, Zelomek said war production, growing by leaps and bounds, every day is cutting deeper into civilian supply.

Zelomek told those at the luncheon, held in conjunction with the annual convention of the National Retail Dry Goods Association opening tonight:

"Don't scare the consumer by talking about nonexistent scarcities but don't deceive him about the availability of supply. Take the middle course. Scour the markets for substitutes. Get ready for a production shortage before it develops and have something else lined up to take its place."

There are still good sized stocks of most consumers' goods around, he said, but warned that a scarcity of production would move into the foreground of the nation's economic picture in the next fiscal year.

OPA Action Seen

Asserting that Henderson knows he is "sitting on an inflationary firecracker he is supposed to keep from going off when its time-fuse reaches zero sometime in the last half of this year," Zelomek said:

"What I am telling you in a roundabout way is to expect action out of the Office of the Price Administration as soon as the price control bill is passed that will reach right down into the retail field."

Zelomek made this forecast of the effect of the war on different markets:

Worsteds—growing difficulties; woolens—supply close to adequate; shoes—no need for civilian rationing; cotton—no basic shortage for civilian use in sight.

Warns Against 'Fads'

Warning against "fads and crazes," Robert R. Guthrie, chief of the textile, clothing and equipage branch of the OPM's division of purchases, said:

"In war time as in peace there are fads and crazes which lead people to try things which they either don't need at all or use only during the short life of the fad. But in wartime we cannot afford to waste goods in this manner."

Stressing the need now to promote consumer acceptance of new products developed to conserve scarce materials, Guthrie told the delegates of the National Retail Dry Goods Association, which numbers more than 6000 dry goods and department stores in the United States:

"We shall not, I hope, have as many ersatz products to put on the market as Germany or Italy, but we shall have a great many.

"You can expect that increasingly severe shortages of consumer goods will necessitate the rationing to consumers of a lengthening list of products and you can expect widening control of prices at the retail level."

The extent to which OPM will have to resort to both those types of control, Guthrie said, will depend on the kind of job America's retailers do in channeling demand into the purchase of essential items.

The president of N. R. D. G. A., Frank M. Mayfield, who is also president of Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney, Inc., St. Louis, Mo., said the organization was ready to "sacrifice our business" to win the war and wants taxes raised to help pay for the struggle against the Axis.

Farm Staples Spurt On Price Legislation

By the Associated Press

Prices of farm products pushed ahead yesterday to highest levels in many years as markets watched price-control legislation taking shape in Washington.

Heavy buying in futures markets lifted all grains to around four-year peaks and cotton to about the highest in more than a decade.

Demand was based on Senate approval of a price bill which would raise ceiling prices of many farm commodities well above current market quotations.

At New York cotton advanced $1.75 to $2 a bale and closed around the day's peaks.

Wheat at Chicago jumped 3⅞ to 4⅜ cents a bushel: corn, 1⅛ to 1⅜ cents; rye, 4⅛ to 4⅝, and oats, 1⅛ to 1⅜.

Soybeans shot up the maximum of 6 cents a bushel permitted in a single day's trade.

Wool tops advanced at New York, cottonseed oil and cocoa declined and Santos coffee was mixed.

Large receipts at Chicago and other marketing centers depressed hog quotations. Prices were unchanged to 10 cents a hundredweight lower. Similar conditions influenced a decline in cattle and sheep.

The Associated Press weighted index of 35 wholesale spot commodities struck a new four-year high at 96.68 per cent of the 1926 average. This compared with 96.47 per cent Saturday.

Buttter futures established new peaks for two months or longer on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, with March standard contracts reaching a high for the season at 33¾ cents a pound. Cash butter, which has been advancing steadily in the wholesale market, over the past 10 days, gained ¼ to ½ cent.

October refrigerator egg futures rose ½ cent a dozen to reach their established 21-year top of 33½ cents.

Grains at 5-Year High

Chicago, Jan. 12 (AP).—Grain prices soared today to highs unequaled in almost five years as the market responded excitedly to indications that price control legislation affecting agricultural products may be less restrictive than had been expected.

Buying spurred by the Senate vote Saturday after the market had closed lifted wheat and rye more than 4 cents a bushel, corn and oats more than a cent and soybeans 6 cents, the limit permitted for beans in one day. Prices of oats reached best levels since 1928; corn and soy beans were near four-year peaks established last September; wheat and rye were at highs since 1937.

The market opened strong, with wheat up about 2 cents, rye 3 cents and soybeans more than 3 cents. Increased buying in the final half hour forced short covering orders into execution.

Closing figures were at or near the highs in all pits, with wheat 3⅞ to 4⅜ cents higher than Saturday, May $1.33 ¼ to ⅜, July $1.35, to $1.34⅛; corn 1⅛ to 1⅜ up, May 87⅛ to ¼, July 89; oats 1⅛ to 1⅜ up, May 69 to 59⅞; rye 4¼ to 4⅝ higher, May 85¾ to 86; soybeans 6 higher, May $1.90½; lard 5 to 10 higher.

Traders said the principal market factor was Senate approval of a price control bill which, they said, would lift minimum ceilings to be imposed on farm products well above levels provided under the House version of this legislation. Uncertainty as to what would be ironed out in the conference committee caused hesitancy on the part of traders at times, resulting in scattered profit taking sales. Traders estimated under the Senate version ceilings on a Chicago basis would be above $1.60 for wheat, near $1.20 for corn, above 70 cents for oats and near $1.40 for rye.

Rail Cost Rise Estimated at 362 Million

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Jan. 12.—R. V. Fletcher, general counsel for the American Association of Railroads, estimated today more than $362,000,000 would be required by the nation's railroads to meet higher wages and increased operating costs this year.

He compared this to an estimated increase of 358,911,000 in revenue resulting from defense hauling and increased passenger travel.

Chief spokesman for the railroads in their bid for a general 10 per cent increase in freight and passenger rates, Fletcher was the principal rebuttal witness as the Interstate Commerce Commission heard final arguments in the case.

Second Week of Hearing

More than 250 witnesses representing the railroads, water carriers—also seeking a 10 per cent increase—business, producing and shipping interests throughout the country appeared before three members of the Commission at preliminary hearings on the measure last week.

Many of the witnesses admitted some readjustment in rates probably would be necessary but doubted if the increase should be as high as 10 per cent.

All members of the ICC were present at today's arguments.

"The main reliance of the country is on the railroads," Fletcher declared, "and they should be allowed liberal allowances in helping win the war."

Would Give Fair Return

Arguing the proposed 10 per cent hike would bring no more than a "fair return" on the valuation of railroad properties, Fletcher declared any increases in rail revenue due to the war "will be offset" by decreased shipment of civilian goods. He labeled this his answer to critics who maintain the railroads would enjoy sufficient increased business to meet the higher wage and operating demands.

Alloted 5½ hours for his discussion, Fletcher explored the railroads' position thoroughly and asserted there were many other "hidden costs" linked with the recent payroll increase resulting from a mediation agreement. He cited the increased cost of equipment, higher taxes, salary adjustments for thousands of workers who are not members of railroad unions and special services due to the war emergency.

In discussing the latter, Fletcher explained the railroads often were called upon to move war materials and troops quickly wtihout consideration of economy.

Firestone to Enter Ordnance Field

Akron, Ohio, Jan 12 (AP).—Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. is taking charge of a new ordnance project, a bomb-loading plant to be constructed on a 17,000-acre site, President John W. Thomas informed the annual stockholders' meeting.

"Personnel from our Akron, Memphis and Los Angeles organizations will compose the supervisory staff of this important new war project," said Thomas, adding that for military reasons he was unable to give further details.

He disclosed that Firestone has completed plans for a new Akron building with 100,000 square feet of floor space, for armament production.

Stock Market Inches Higher In Quiet Trade

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 12.—For the first time in a week the Stock Market, on average, today leaned toward the recovery side.

Buyers came in for steels, rails and assorted specialties after a hesitant start and, at the top, gains ran to a point or so for favorites, with a few "blue chips" in front 2 to 3. Peak prices were reduced in the majority of cases at the close.

The selective come-back was attributed mainly to the belief the recent substantial decline had put the list in a better position technically. Confusing war news from the Far East was a restraining influence, brokers said, while some encouragement was derived from further reports of Nazi losses in Russia and other troubles besetting the Hitlerites.

First Rise in Week

The Associated Press composite of 60 stocks was up .2 of a point at 37.8, first advance in this barometer since last Monday. The principal fly in the bullish ointment was the lack of volume on the right-about. Transfers totaled 491,540 shares, compared with 654,490 Friday, and were the smallest since October 27.

Bright earnings statements and persistent hopes of rate increases continued to buoy the carriers. Steels were propped by a larger than expected expansion in this week's mill operations.

Omnibus Corporation and N. Y. C. Omnibus were lively on the swing, apparently reflecting talk of subway fare boosts in New York and the idea private automobile restrictions would bring back passengers to the bus lines. Patino Mines, on the other hand, handed back some of its run-up of the past week when Bolivia declared a state of siege in several mining areas of the republic.

Steel Issues Buoyant

Prominent stocks on the forward tilt included U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Youngstown Sheet, Union Pacific, Great Northern, American Telephone, Coca-Cola, Douglas Aircraft, Anaconda, General Electric, U. S. Rubber and Montgomery Ward.

Allied Chemical dropped 4 on a negligible turnover. Lesser declines were posted for United Aircraft, Sperry, Eastman Kodak, Standard Oil (N. J.), Goodrich and Caterpillar Tractor. Motors, coppers, oils, utilities and aircrafts were, for the most part, narrow. Tax doubts remained as a detriment to a number of stocks.

Rising moderately in the Curb were Bell Aircraft, Gulf Oil, Lake Shore, Aluminum of America and Electric Bond & Share.

Your Federal Income Tax

No. 9—Methods of Accounting

The Internal Revenue code provides that the net income of a taxpayer shall be computed upon the basis of his annual accounting period in accordance with the method of accounting regularly employed in keeping his books; but if no such method of accounting has been so employed or if the method employed does not clearly refict the income, the computation is to be made in accordance with such method as in the opinion of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue does clearly reflect the income.

The regulations recognize that no uniform method of accounting can be prescribed for all taxpayers, and the law contemplates that each taxpayer shall adopt such forms and systems of accounting as are in his judgment best suited to his purpose. The methods of accounting most generally used are (1) the cash receipts and disbursement method, and (2) the accrual method. The regulations provide that in order to reflect net income correctly, inventories at the beginning and end of each taxable year are necessary in every case in which the production, purchase, or sale of merchandise is an income-producing factor, and that in any case in which it is necessary to use an inventory, no method of accounting in regard to purchase and sales will correctly reflect income except an accrual method.

Each taxpayer is required by law to make a return of his true income and under the regulations he is required to maintain such accounting records as will enable him to do so. His books and records must be kept at all times available for inspection by Internal Revenue officers and retained as long as the contents thereof may become material in the administration of any Internal Revenue law.

B. & O. Operating Efficiency Sets New High in 1941

Baltimore, Jan. 12 (AP).—The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co. said today that "new high records in operating efficiency" were made on the B. & O. in 1941.

With the December figures estimated, revenue tons were 985 per train compared with 942.16 for 1940 and 868.55 for 1929, and car miles per serviceaable freight car day were 40 compared with 35.2 for 1940 and 32.9 for 1929," a company statement said.

Locomotives and freight cars of greater capacity played a part by hauling heavier trains faster between terminals, and shippers and receivers of freight contributed to the result by giving the best cooperation record in loading cars to capacity and loading and unloading them promptly.

"While revenue ton miles for 1941 were only about 1 per cent less than for 1929, total operating revenues of approximately 227 million dollars for 1941 were 14.34 per cent less than the $264,998,143 received in 1929.

"This reflects the substantial decrease in rates d uring the 12-year period, amounting to almost 9 per cent for freight on the basis of average revenue per ton mile, and 38 per cent for passenger on the basis of agerave revenue per passenger mile."

The Outlook

By Merryle S. Rukeyser, Post Special Writer

Financial Preparedness, Declares Sen. Byrd, Is As Important As Military Preparedness

As Congress is confronted with the proposal for the largest budget in the Nation's history, Senator Byrd, chairman of the Joint Committee on nonessential expenditures, in a statement to this column, reminded his fellow Americans that national solvency is the price for perpetuating human freedom.

The Senator from Virginia told me that reckless use of the public credit would impair the free enterprise system, and enslave the people with some form of socialism.

Senator Byrd's interview further clarifies the position of the joint economy committee which he heads, and which is seeking to help finance victory through clamping down on nondefense expenditures. He said:

"The financial preparedness and the financial security of America are just as important to our national welfare as military preparedness. Without a solvent nation, all of the freedoms we now have would be destroyed. Today in America we have no greater responsibility than to preserve the financial solvency of our country. The sooner and the more completely the citizens of our republic appreciate this fundamental fact the better we can do these things essential to preventing the disasters that will follow the creation of a public debt beyond the capacity of future generations to cope with.

"We must constantly keep clear in our minds that, unless the private enterprise system of America is preserved, then we face state socialism.

"Only so long as the efforts of America's free enterprise system are able to pay the cost of Government—only so long as that fundamental principle of our democracy is preserved—will our Government be able to maintain the liberty and freedom upon which it was founded.

"In this titantic world struggle with totalitarian forces, democracies must not only conquer; they must preserve their democratic system. That means the preservation of solvent government. National solvency—difficult in this emergency and so essential to the preservation of the democratic system—if of no necessary concern to totalitarian governments.

"Our democratic way of life depends upon our system of free business enterprise. If crushing taxation and indebtedness are allowed to impair or destroy that system, there is likely to result some form of state socialism destructive of fundamental principles upon which were founded our Nation and its institutions."

Getting down to bookkeeping brass tacks, Mr. Byrd added: "Our financial picture today is a sad one. Our Federal indebtedness is now approaching 60 billion dollars, as compared to one billion when America first became a shooting belligerent in the First World War. Our total expenditures for the next fiscal year may reach the colossal sum of 40 billion to 50 billions or more, of which only about 15 billion will be provided by taxation, unless and until further tax burdens are imposed upon the American people. Our expenditures for defense are increasing daily, so that I confidently predict within a period of less than two years our Federal Government will have an indebtedness approaching 100 billion dollars, and before the present emergency ends this debt may be twice that sum.

"And this, in the face of the fact that we are paying the most colossal taxes in our history. The taxes we now pay are merely an interlude to those we will soon be called upon to pay.

"I know of no more patriotic obligations on the part of every citizen than to cooperate with the Congress in reducing nonessential spending and in preserving the financial solvency of our Republic."

Visible Grain Supply

New York, Jan. 12 (AP).—Visible supply of American grain showed the following changes from a week ago (in bushels): Wheat decreased 1,831,000; corn decreased 798,000; oats decreased 168,000; rye decreased 209,000; barley decreased 127,000.

Banks' Loans Up 1.7 Billion During Year

By the Associated Press

The Federal Reserve Board said yesterday that the $6,726,000,000 total of commercial, industrial and agricultural loans of banks in 101 leading cities was unchanged during the week ended January 7. In the last year, this figure increased more than $1,700,000,000.

The board's 101-city member bank condition statement gave the following summary of assets and liabilities on January 7, together with the increase or decrease since the previous week and the corresponding week last year (in millions of dollars):

Fuel Oil Price Boost Rejected

Price Administrator Leon Henderson has denied the petitions of a group of large oil companies for permission to raise the price of grade C bunker fuel oil at Eastern and Gulf Coast locations.

Several oil companies proposed to raise the price of bunker C fuel oil 15 cents a barrel to $1.50 per barrel in New York Harbor, with corresponding advances at other points on the Eastern Seaboard. Similar raises were proposed for Gulf Coast locations.

Henderson's office issued a schedule of maximum prices for fuel oil at 14 locations, ranging from a low of 85 cents per barrel at New Orleans and the Gulf Coast to $1.55 a barrel at Albany, N. Y.

Socony Lists Pay Plan For Aides in Army

New York, Jan. 12 (AP).—Socony-Vacuum Oil Co., Inc., announced today that effective last December 8 employes entering military service would receive full pay for the first two months, in addition to Government compensation.

After the first two months, the company said, each employe with dependents will be paid 50 per cent of his regular wages, less the Government compensation.

The plan supersedes previously adopted employe benefits, the announcement said.

900-Mile Gas Line Planned by Phillips

New York, Jan. 12 (AP).—Phillips Petroleum Co. today announced plans for constructing a natural gas pipe line about 900 miles long from the Texas Panhandle into southern and eastern Wisconsin.

Theconcern's subsidiary, Wisconsin Gas Transmission Co., has received a conditional order from the Wisconsin Public Service Commission to build the line, which would supply gas to 10 public utility companies operating 15 distributing systems in the State.

Va. Manganese Firm Incorporated in Ohio

Canton, Ohio, Jan. 12 (AP).—The Biggam Manganese Co., Inc., incorporated in Ohio today with 250 shares of no par stock, will center operations in Bland and Giles Counties, Virginia, Herbert J. Cox, of Canton, one of the incorporators, announced.

The company has leased 27,000 acres of mountainous Virginia country and has been producing 100 tons of manganese a week from its pits since last September 1, Cox said. The history of the firm dates from the first World War when Miller's father prospected in the area and found small but rich manganese deposits.

Union Oil Issue Scheduled Today

New York, Jan. 12 (AP).—Financial circles heard today that Dillon, Read & Co. and associates would publicly offer tomorrow 15 million dollars worth of 3 per cent debentures of the Union Oil Co. of California, due in 1967.

Net proceeds would permit enlargement of the company's capital expenditures to extend and modernize its refining and marine transportation facilities, it was said, and would call for construction of a gas reversion plant, and black oil cracking plant and building tankers.

Ceiling Price Raised On Wholesale Sugar

New York, Jan. 12 (AP).—Leading sugar refiners today announced an increase of 1-5 cent a pound to 5.45 cents in the price of wholesale refined sugar.

The advance had Government approval.

The previous ceiling price of 5.25 cents a pound was raised late last week to compensate for an increase in the cost of raw sugar.

Figures Show Where Waste Paper Will Go

Remembering Pearl Harbor through the saving of waste paper may take on a new significance to realize that one ton of the material will produce any one of the following:

Nearly 47,000 boxes for .30-caliber ammunition, 71,000 dust covers for plane engines, 36,000 practice targets or 1500 shell containers. These figures were announced recently by the British ministry of supply.

The National Waste Paper Campaign is being carried on in 37 large cities throughout the country, a statement pointed out, and virtually everything the defense program needs must be either wrapped in paper or boxed in cartons. Leon Henderson, National Price Control Administrator, has estimated that defense needs will require 50 per cent more waste paper in 1942 than was accumulated in 1941, it added.

FBI to Launch Defense Training

Richmond, Va., Jan. 12 (AP).—Federal Bureau of Investigation schools to train local police officers in wartime tasks will open at Roanoke, Newport News and Norfolk on January 19 to continue throughout that week.

The officers will be given training in connection with blackouts, convoys, gas, grounded planes, communications, air-raid shelters, looting and fire protection.

Men who attend the schools will serve as instructors for other groups in their home communities. A school was held recently in Richmond and one will be held later in Bristol.

Scrap Shortage Hits Ohio Mills

Cleveland, Jan. 12 (AP).—The scrap shortage is banking the fires in at least 10 per cent of the open hearth furnaces in Mahoning and Cuyahoga Valley steel mills.

Eighteen of the 110 open hearths in the Youngstown and Cleveland districts will be idle this week—12 of them because of the lack of scrap and 6 for repairs.

Ingot production will drop 1 point to 89 per cent of capacity in the Youngstown area as Youngstown Sheet & Tube and Carnegie-Illinois steel companies close one open hearth apiece, making inactive 15 of the 83 furnaces in the district. Ten of the 15 will be closed because of the shortage.

Republic Steel Corporation, whose Youngstown mills were the first to feel the shortage there, has restored one furnace to the active list and has experienced no pinch in its Cleveland district. Of 14 open hearths here, Republic has only one inactive and that because of repairs. Sustained ingot production at Cleveland is due partly to the company's use of shavings from its rolling mills, which are compressed into scrap.

Lumber Production Gains 5% in Week

By the Associated Press

The National Lumber Manufacturers Association reported yesterday that lumber production for the week ended January 3 stood at 121 per cent of the average of the corresponding week 1935-39, and shipments 132 per cent.

Production totaled 142,996,000 feet, which was 5 per cent greater than the previous week, and 9 per cent less than the corresponding week a year ago.

Shipments aggregated 198,178,000 feet, which was 21 per cent greater than the previous week and 7 per cent less than last year's corresponding week.

New Alloy Developed As Tin Substitute

New York, Jan 12 (AP).—Phelps Dodge Copper Products Corporation announced today increased production and forecast wider use of a silicon-bronze alloy intended to replace tin in bearings and similar industrial products.

Large tonnages, said the company, are now being used by the Navy Department and by private shipbuilders, especially in making bronze castings. Several hundred tons of tin annually are now being saved by using the metal in bearings alone, the company said.

Hogan Tied By Thomson For Golf Title

Dawson Tops Amateurs

Johnny Dawson, of Hollywood, with a par 72 for 293, captured amateur honors.

It was Thomson's second finish in the top spot. He won the 1938 tournament on the Griffith Park public course here with a score of 285.

Snead had a chance for a 69 and 282, which would have tied the ultimate winners. He might easily have had a 68 for 281 and the tournament. But his second shot of the 500-yard eighteenth hole rested 30 yards from the flag on the side of the steep incline. He took three approach shots to the green; each failed to reach the top and all rolled back. He finally got on with his fourth try and got down in two.

ice cream and cake socials, to have his hand held and have some well-meaning hostess read good books to him, Gene said scornfully:

"What the men need is less attention from fawning women and more play areas for vigorous athletic activities. They need fewer cigarettes and luxuries, and more boxing gloves and skipping ropes," ised in Readers Digest to knock out wicked weed. Gene recently promthundered the arch enemy of the Joe Louis if Louis smoked two packs of cigarettes a day for six weeks. Louis was a little confused by the article. "That's funny," he said, scratching. "I don't smoke."

"It's perfectly amazing the amount of work which recruits can stand without the so-called good offices of morale building," Tunney finished. He mentioned no organized service men's social group by name.

Hoyas Defeat Temple Owls Here, 42 to 40

through for the night—but Georgetown wasn't.

O'Grady, the good-looking little guard of the Hoyas baffled the big, rangy Temple team with a passing, shooting and ball-handling performance which ranks with the best. Buddy was closer to the ball than the stitches all night and continually faked and out-smarted the Philadelphians to the delight of the partisan crowd.

Bornheimer, the only Georgetown player to match the height of Dorn; Bill Getchell and Jim Albee gave them a battle for ball-hawking honors and drew a number of jump balls when the tall Owls were apparently in sole possession. He was the smartest ball retriever of the evening.

Owls Put Height to Use

Dorn, the rangy sophomore, was the spearhead of the Owls' first-half drive with his field goals, made by leaping past his guard and dropping the ball in the bucket, and foul shots accounting for ten points. Getchell also was using his height to advantage while Bechtloff and Morganstine used speed and tricky under-the-basket maneuvers for their points.

Schmidli, who tied up the ball game with his timely shot while falling to the court, made up for past sins with his fifth basket of the evening, for his wild passing and ragged ball handling had helped Temple on several occasions. He also saved Gabbianelli from the goat's role as the Hoya sub had missed a setup, thrown the ball away and fouled a man all in the last two minutes when Georgetown was in desperate need of the ball. Kennedy angles tossed in the first two Hoya baskets and Don Martin also clicked for four points. O'Grady and Bornheimer's nine points trailed Schmidli's 11 for Georgetown.

Frosh Rout Roosevelt

Georgetown's sensational freshman club continued its unbeaten pace with a 51-15 rout of Roosevelt's interhigh champions in a preliminary.

The schoolboys were no match for the young Hoyas, who were out in front 24-8 at half time and added to the margin in the second period. Andy Kostezka tossed in 19 points for the winners and Meggs Reilly added nine. The freshman squad, composed mainly of boys from the Metropolitan New York area, is one of the best Hoya units in years. Elmer Ripley coaches both the varsity and frosh teams.

With This Article, Champion Cowboy Sees Wish Come True

Homer Pettigrew, a Tough Hombre, Crashes Sports Pages; Tells How to Be a Cowboy

By the Associated Press

Denver, Jan. 12.—"You got to be a real he-man to win this cowboy championship," says Homer Pettigrew, a young man who favors the direct approach as the best way of saving words.

Meet Homer, the world's champion all-around cowboy for 1941. He's 26, solemn-faced, with admirable shoulder and chest muscles under a purple silk shirt and a human desire to see his name on the sports pages.

"Why they don't put rodeo news on the sports pages, I can't see," says Homer, here to bulldog steers and rope calves in the National Western Rodeo and Horse Show. "Boxing, football—they ain't none of those sports anywhere near as tough as rodeo work."

Made $5000 Last Year

"Well, I made about $5000 last year. Practiced on my mother's ranch near Grady, N. Mex., when I wasn't making the circuit. You get a point toward the championship for every dollar you win—and man, you earn it."

Will the draft catch many rodeo hands?

"Yeah, quite a few will go. I figger to be called any day now. But most of the boys are married. A lot of them that look healthy have been rejected on account of busted bones they got in rodeos."

They're All Nervous

Does the champion get scared before a show?

"Sure, you're nervous, like anybody else. Get an all-gone feeling in your stomach. But I've never been hurt, just had some hide scraped off. Just luck."

What's the cowboys' favorite rodeo?

"New York. That's where the big money is."

How long can a tophand keep going?

"I've been at it five or six years and I guess I could go until I'm 40 or 45, but I won't. I want to get enough to buy a ranch of my own."

ficer, and Maj. Neal O'Brien.

"That was the toughest part about it," Joe yawned, "this gettin' up. But I guess I'm gonna get used to it, so I might's well start right now."

Like an automobile on the assembly line, Joe passed from one doctor to the other as they examined his chest, eyes, ears, nose, throat and heart, took his blood pressure and his pulse beat, measured him and weighed him, and, finally, fingerprinted him.

"Hope everything's all right," he told his sports-writing friends as he went down the line. "Only thing, I dunno if I got flat feet. D'you think I stand kinda flat? Maybe they won't examine me lower than the knees.

"This is a lot tougher examination," he added, "than I get from Doc Walker, isn't it?" (Dr. William Walker, State athletic commission physician, has examined Joe before each of his fights in New York for the last seven years.)

A whistle went up as Joe stepped on the scales and Sergt. William Chrastina called out "220." This included Joe, his trousers and shoes and probably the loudest pair of suspenders ever conceived. The sergeant estimated that without the clothes he probably was 215. This represented an increase of 8¼ pounds since he weighed in Friday at noon for his brief bombing job against Baer, indicating he hasn't been sparing on the fried chicken the last couple of days.

Later, Joe revealed, that in transferring his induction from Chicago to New York, and waiving all notices and delays, he had done it so suddenly he had not even advised his wife, Marva. As a result, she was coming in today from Chicago.

"Guess she'll have somethin' to say," Joe reckoned. "But I'm Uncle Sam's boy now, as long as the war's on."

A. A. U. Track Entries Mailed Member Bodies

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, Jan. 12.—Entry blanks were dispatched yesterday to the 41 member associations of the Amateur Athletic Union and to all national champions for the annual National A. A. U. track and field championships which will be held on February 28, in Madison Square Garden in New York.

The program has been streamlined. The 2-mile steeplechase, distance medley relay and the 880-yard relay have been dropped in favor of a spectacular 60-yard low hurdle race and a 2-mile relay.

The 1941 champions who contributed 11 records a year ago are expected to defend their titles. They are Herbert Thompson, of Jersey City, in the 60-yard dash; Allan Tolmich, of Detroit, in the high hurdles; Jim Herbert, of the Grand Street Boys, in the 600; John Borican, of the Asbury Park A. C., in the 1000; Walter Mehl, of Madison, Wis., in the mile; Greg Rice, of the New York A. C., in the 3-mile run; Nat Jaeger, of the Ninety-second Street Y. M. H. A., in the mile walk; N. Y. U. in the sprint medley relay, and Georgetown in the mile relay.

jumped on top, 27-24. They steadily went ahead from there until the fateful nine minutes.

Using a peculiar one-handed motion, Oberhaus also stole honors at the foul line. He rang up 6 points in seven tries, part of the reason he outscored teammate Winitsky by 11 points.

Local honors went to Stanton, who wound up with 14 points. Burns beat out Bob Berry for second by a single point.

British Fliers in Russia Spend Spare Time Skiing

London (INS).—The R. A. F. wing in Russia is meeting wintry conditions with cheerful fortitude, according to the British air ministry. Their base is in a sparsely inhabited area which the climate has now turned into a snowy waste. Skis have been given them by Russians, and many members of the wing are learning to ski in their spare time.

Bridgeport Out Of Interstate Baseball Body

By the Associated Press

Wilmington, Del., Jan. 12.—Bridgeport, Conn., will not be represented in the Interstate Baseball League this year, President Arthur H. Ehlers announced officially today at the circuit's annual meeting.

The National League Boston Braves, owner of the Bridgeport franchise, was reported considering the possibility of sponsoring a farm team in some other city.

Conferees said the Braves had considered York, Pa., but were hesitant because of setbacks suffered when they sponsored a team there in 1940.

Paterson, N. J., considered a possible replacement for Bridgeport, was ruled out, Ehlers said, by a regulation that minor league clubs may not represent cities less than 10 miles apart. Paterson is 9 miles from Newark, N. J., which holds an International League berth.

The league said the 1942 season would open April 29, but deferred announcement of a season schedule. It decided upon a later meeting at Hagerstown, Md., but left the date open.

Bridgeport and Allentown, Pa., were not represented at th meeting.

Ehlers said the league could operate with only seven teams, but that search for an eighth would be continued.

Surprising G.W. Courtmen Show Power

Special Dispatch to The Post

Alexandria, Va., Jan. 12.—George Washington High School's cagers jumped off to an early lead in the Central District of the Virginia Class A Conference over the weekend. The school took first place with a pair of victories in its first invasion of enemy territory. The Presidents opened their conference drive by edging Thomas Jefferson in Richmond Friday night, 29-28. On the following night, they took the scalp of Hopewell High, 39-27.

While George Washington was operating on its conference rivals, Washington and Lee, of Arlington, was being entertained by the same two schools in reverse order.

The Generals defeated Hopewell while the Presidents were beating Jefferson, but on the following night they bowed to the Richmonders, 42-31.

Resultantly, the inexperienced G. W. team, which was not rated an outside chance in the conference race, now looms as the "dark horse" of the campaign. Coach Al Doran is elated over his team's showing, and confident of finishing strongly in the conference race.

In 1939 Doran came up with a championship contender which was moulded from a group of raw recruits. The inexperienced G. W. cagers breezed to the District title; defeated Newport News high in the semifinals, and then lost a heartbreaker to Lynchburg for the conference title, losing out by one point.

The Presidents are leading the loop with two triumphs, while Thomas Jefferson is in second place with two victories and a loss. Washington and Lee boasts a .500 average in two games, while Hopewell has lost two, and Petersburg has dropped one. The other two entrants have not played.

19 Enemy Aliens Plead for Release From Internment

The cases of 19 enemy aliens, who have protested their internment, will be heard by the District Enemy Alien Board at its first meeting, in Baltimore, today. The board may advise continued restraint, parole or release.

Four of the aliens are held in Gloucester City, N. J., and 15 are detained at Fort Howard, Md. District Attorney Edward M. Curran said no names would be given out.

Curran and Assistant District Attorney Bernard J. Long, who is in charge of enemy alien cases, will attend the meeting. Members of the board are Attorney John S. Flannery, chairman; the Rev. Robert J. White, dean of the Catholic University Law School, and A. F. E. Horn, Washington businessman.

Attorney General Biddle announced yesterday that 92 boards have been set up in the United States to hear the pleas of interned aliens in Alaska, Hawaii and Panama Canal Zone alien matters are in the hands of the Army.

New Highway South of D.C. Is Proposed

Strategic Artery Would Give Better Access to Bridge At Morgantown

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Jan. 12.—State Roads Commission Chairman Ezra B. Whitman said today engineers were surveying a new road—requested by the War and Navy Departments—which would provide a "straight shoot" from Washington to the Morgantown Bridge.

Purpose of the strategic road, Whitman said, was to provide better access to the naval powder plant at Indianhead, Md., and to the naval proving grounds at Dahlgren, Va., western terminus of the Morgantown Bridge.

Whitman said it also would provide a direct artery for North-South troop movement which would speed troops to and from the Nation's Capitol and permit through convoys to by-pass heavy Washington traffic.

The contemplated road would require approximately nine miles of new highway, running directly south from Piscataway to the Crain Highway about two miles north of La Plata.

From La Plata to the bridge, the roads commission recently has completed a reconstruction project providing a first-class single-lane road. Whitman said that was built on property for which land rights sufficient for a dual-lane highway had been purchased.

From Piscataway north through Silesia to Washington it will be necessary to rebuild State Route No. 224, either as a single-lane or dual-lane road. Whitman said the entire highway from Washington to Morgantown ridge might be made dual lane, with a separation strip down the center.

Whitman declared the project was approved by the public roads administration and work on it probably would be rushed.

While it would not touch Indianhead, the roadway would be a considerable improvement over existing facilities, the roads chairman said, adding that improvement work on roads leading into Indianhead might be necessary.

Extortion Suspect Was Teacher in Sunday School

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 12—James G. Trenary, 23-year-old cement worker, who pleaded guilty before U. S. Commissioner D. Angle Wolfinger here at a preliminary hearing on a charge of attempting to extort under threat $5000 from the North American Cement Corp. at Security, his employer, taught his Sunday School class at the Sholih U. B. Church near here and also conducted the Christian Endeavor service on Sunday, January 5, according to police.

Trenary, who is being held in jail here under $25,000 bond, was quoted by police here as saying he could not account for his actions, that he did not need the money and cautioned his brothers to profit by his "mistake" and lead clean lives.

Trenary was arrested when he was attempting to remove a package which company officials had placed at a spot designated in the letters.

Bus Driver Indicted In Death of Child

Special Dispatch to The Post

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 12.—The January term grand jury, in session here, indicted William Arthur Moore, 21, of Mexico Farms, for manslaughter in connection with the death of Lawrence Malamphy, 6, son of George E. Malamphy, Lakewood Farm.

Moore is a school bus driver. The child alighted from the bus and his hand or clothing apparently caught in the door. He was dragged 40 feet before he fell, the rear wheel passing over him. Moore says he heard no unusual sounds nor did he know of the accident until a motorist halted the bus.

Bernard Lane, Retired U. S. Editor, Dies

Bernard Harlin Lane, 75, retired editor in chief of the United States Geological Survey, died yesterday in Doctors' Hospital after a brief illness.

He was born in Andover, Mass., and came to this city in 1897 to work in the Government Printing Office. In 1905 Mr. Lane was appointed to the editorial staff of the Geological Survey, where he remained until September 30, 1937, serving a year beyond the usual retirement age under special authorization of an executive order of the President.

During his 32 years in the Geological Survey, Mr. Lane held successively positions as editorial clerk, assistant editor, and associate editor, and from 1925 until his retirement he was editor in chief. In this capacity he was charged with the work of preparing for publication the texts of technical reports that set forth the results of the varied research projects conducted by the Geological Survey.

Mr. Lane in collaboration with his predecessor, George McLane Wood, prepared a pamphlet entitled "Suggestions to Authors of Papers Submitted for Publication by the Geological Survey." This was revised and enlarged in 1935 and has been reprinted many times.

He was active in church work during his life and in his spare time occupied himself with creative gardening at his home, 5327 Conduit Road Northwest. His wife, the former Bertha Belle Johnson, whom he married in 1903, died in 1937.

Surviving are one brother, John A. Lane, 37 Oxford Street, Chevy Chase, Md.; two daughters, Mrs. Albert E. Gingrich, of Berkeley Springs, W. Va., and Mrs. George Q. Shepard, of 5327 Conduit Road Northwest, and three granddaughters.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 4 p. m. in the First Congregational Church, Tenth and G Streets Northwest, of which Mr. Lane was a member.

Owen Froest Mills, Of Rockville, Dies

A heart attack is believed to have caused the death of Owen Forest Mills, 60, of Rockville, who was found dead near Rockville on Sunday. He was a lifelong resident of Rockville and Gaithersburg.

The funeral will take place at 11 a. m. tomorrow from the funeral home of W. Reuben Pumphrey, Rockville, with burial in Forest Oak Cemetery, Gaithersburg. The Rev. John W. Roenberger, pastor of the Rockville Methodist Church, will conduct the exercises.

Mr. Mills is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mary J. Mills; eight children, ranging ages from 4 to 23 years; two sisters and three brothers.

Luray Pastor to Leave

Luray, Va., Jan. 12—Rev. Glenn Bolick, pastor of St. Mark's Lutheran Church for ten years, preached his last sermon here yesterday before a packed congregation. Rev. Mr. Bolick will leave January 15 to assume his new post as superintendent of missions at Front Royal.

Coordination In Blackouts Urged in Area

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Jan. 12.—A Baltimore blackout is useless unless Washington, Philadelphia and the area between were also blacked out, industrial executives were told today.

Lieut. Comdr. Samuel Singer, of the Office of Civilian Defense, spoke at the opening meeting of a three-day plant protection school sponsored by the Maryland Council of Defense.

Singer said that lights of one city would aid an enemy to locate another city.

Capt. L. C. Woods, member of the British Military Commission which accompanied Prime Minister Churchill to Washington, said that Baltimore would probably be subjected to "suicide raids" before the war is over.

He said the enemy is likely to attempt sporadic raids in an effort to affect American morale.

"Don't make the mistake of not being prepared as England was when the blitz came," he said.

How to handle incendiary bombs, gas attacks and other emergency problems are being discussed at the school.

Three-Year Course Announced for M. W. College

Special Dispatch to The Post

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 12.—Dr. Morgan L. Combs, president of Mary Washington College, has announced a plan whereby students could complete the four-year course in three years and "superior" students in a shorter period.

Under the three-year program, sessions will run for 11 months each. Students who are contemplating entering college in September will enter in June, if possible, and complete one-third of a year's work this summer. The session will open at Mary Washington on June 14.

Teachers and others who attend the college during the summer session in order to work for degrees or pursue other courses of study will continue to do so as heretofore.

The work for a degree may be completed in three years by attending three general sessions and three summer sessions, and this time may be further reduced, Dr. Combs said, if desired, by superior students or those who have proven themselves capable of independent study, carrying heavier loads.

Mrs. Davies' Yacht Will Be Refitted For Coast Guard

Baltimore, Jan. 12 (AP).—The palatial brigantine yacht Sea Cloud lay berthed in Baltimore harbor today, awaiting refitting for use by the Coast Guard.

The yacht, launched in Germany in 1931, was leased by its owner, Mrs. Joseph E. Davies, to the U. S. Navy for $1 a year for duration of the war. The 2,323-ton craft is one of the largest private yachts afloat.

Mrs. Davies' husband, formerly United States Ambassador to Russia, is a special assistant to Secretary of State Hull.

The Sea Cloud will be stripped of her cabin furnishings, and other valuables before she is put into commission.

Muskrats Back, Trappers Happy

Princess Anne, Md., Jan. 12 (AP).—The muskrats have returned to Somerset County and trappers are happy about the whole thing.

The muskrat population on the marshes has dwindled steadily for the last few years, trappers say, but ideal 1941 weather for marshland owners to protect the muskrats from dogs and foxes have helped increase the muskrats, trappers say.

Prices for the skins open here at $1.10 to $1.20 per hide with the meat bringing 30 to 35 cents per pair. Muskrat is known as "marsh rabbit" when it appears on Eastern Shore tables as a delicacy with sweet potatoes and hominy.

Contract Bridge

"To make peace in two families," contributor C. M., of Arlington, Va., asks us to consider his overcall and discuss overcalling in general.

"Since we four have always found overcalling (overbidding, really) a most difficult problem," he writes, "we would appreciate some word from you, and don't tell us, please, to consult Culbertson, Sims or the Four Aces.

Today's Hand

Neither Side Vulnerable
EAST DEALER

	♠ 8 6 4 ♡ K 9 7 4 ◇ J 5 3 ♣ A 9 7
♠ 5 ♡ 10 5 ◇ Q 10 7 2 ♣ K Q 10 8 6 5	NORTH WEST EAST SOUTH	♠ A Q 9 7 3 ♡ 8 3 ◇ A K 9 ♣ J 4 3
	♠ K J 10 2 ♡ A Q J 6 2 ◇ 8 6 4 ♣ 2

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 ♠	2 ♡	Pass	3 ♡
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead—5 ♠.

"We were starting a new rubber with the accompanying hand. East opened with one spade; I overcalled with two hearts, but when my partner raised me to three, I got chicken-hearted and passed. This was just as well, as it turned out.

"My partner's argument is that, having overcalled, I should have a hand strong enough to go game following a raise. My own contention is that I hoped to push the opponents to three or four and then double with a good set in prospect."

The problem of overcalling and part-score bidding is one of the most difficult, if not the most difficult, in bridge. It is not adaptable to rules, as successful competitive bidding of this type requires psychology and knowledge of the bidding tendencies of the opponents.

Naturally, a margin of safety has to be established. Even the most aggressive overcaller must put a limit on the "lightness" of his bids. For years the "two-and-three-trick rule" has been recommended by most champions, Culbertson, perhaps, first. Overbid by not more than two tricks, vulnerable; three tricks, not vulnerable, is the rule.

As for the hand in question, we are inclined to indorse C. M.'s bidding. Certainly he should not try for game. Length in the adversary's suit is always a disadvantage, and it is no better illustrated than in this hand. Despite declarer's king, jack, ten, East and West can win one spade trick with the ace and two on ruffs. With three diamond tricks, this means that the defenders can set a game contract three tricks, doubled, of course, for a gain of 500 points.

But South has a fair overcall; he has a right to "push" a little. North, however, has no raise. Opposite an opening one bid, he would raise on his ace, king and four trumps without much elation. Surely there is no reason to encourage his partner's overcall.

His distribution is a definite handicap. If forced to do so he might find a raise to prevent selling the contract to the adversaries, but the hand is not sufficiently attractive for free action.

It is wise to remember that defensive bidding is not at all like offensive bidding. Like defensive play, the objective is different, for seldom do the defenders hold the best cards. There is no need for "courtesy bids" or showing partner a suit or giving information, as in answer to an opening bid. With overcalls and responses the first consideration must be of the adversaries' reaction: will they double, will they bid on, will they stop short?

Partner has to hang on to his cards, keep out of the way and look after himself.

Plummer, deceased? 2. Was the said Lillian G. Plummer at the time of making and subscribing or of the acknowledging by her of the said paper-writing of sound and disposing mind and capable of executing a valid deed or contract? 3. Was the said paper-writing dated the 20th day of July, 1936, obtained, or the execution thereof, or the subscription thereto, procured from the said Lillian G. Plummer, deceased, by fraud or deceit practiced upon the said Lillian G. Plummer by Anna Pleasanton or some other person or persons? 4. Was the said paper-writing dated the 20th day of July, 1936, obtained, or the execution thereof, procured from the said Lillian G. Plummer, deceased, by the undue influence or duress, or coercion of Anna Pleasanton or any other person or persons? O. R. LUHRING, Justice. A true copy. Attest: (Seal.) THEODORE GOGSWELL, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court.

ODD BODKINS — BY FRED FOX and CHASE CRAIG

THESE ARE THE PLANS FOR A GRENADE-THROWER! IT'S A SECRET WEAPON — AND IT'S TERRIFIC! YOU WILL DELIVER IT TO SOMEONE!
WHO?
I DON'T EVEN KNOW! IT'S A MILITARY SECRET! BUT SOMEONE WILL COME HERE AND SAY: "HUT SUT."
THEN I HAND OVER THE PLANS?
WOULDN'T IT BE BETTER IF WE TORE THE PLANS IN TWO? THEN YOU COULD KEEP HALF AND I COULD KEEP HALF!
AN EXCELLENT IDEA, BODKINS! COME TO MY OFFICE!
MEN ARE PUTTY IN THE HANDS OF A CLEVER WOMAN — AND MATTI HARRA IS CLEVER, AREN'T YOU, MATTI?

OOOOH TELL 'EM T'STOP THAT NOISE.. TELL 'EM I SAID STOP IT
THAT'S OUR GUNS-- A NAZI SUB COME UP---ALL OF A SUDDEN THERE IT WAS--- LET 'EM SINK US-- ANYTHING T'GIT OFF-- OHHHH-- I'M SO SICK OHHHH--
AN' WE GOT IT--- BLASTED THE RAT T'PIECES--
WHAT--OH BOY--I DIDN'T KNOW WHAT I WAS SAYIN'--- I WAS DALEERIOUS--- YIPPEEEE-

WINNIE WINKLE — Adjectively Speaking — BY BRANNER

THIS IS GETTING TO BE TOO MUCH, AD! YOU'RE NEGLECTING YOUR WORK AND MAKING ME NEGLECT MINE!
HOW COME?
BUT THEY'RE MARVELOUS! THEY'RE GIGANTIC! THEY'RE COLOSSAL!!
DON'T YOU DARE SAY THAT ABOUT MY TWINS! THEY'RE NOT OVER-SIZED OR OVER-WEIGHT! THEY'RE JUST NORMAL, HEALTHY BABIES!

JANE ARDEN — Reg. U. S. Pat. Off. — A Simple Code — BY MONTE BARRETT and RUSSELL ROSS

THIS LETTER HAD TO GET BY THE CENSORS- IT COULDN'T BE IN CODE- WHOEVER SENT IT DIDN'T DARE MENTION RUPERT, EITHER-BUT IT'S FROM HOLBEIN- THAT'S WHERE RUPERT IS-NOW DON'T GO BUILDING UP FALSE HOPES, JANE.
IT SAYS "YOUR MERCHANDISE CAN'T BE SHIPPED TO AMERICA NOW."-
WHY, RUPERT, OF COURSE!
THEN IT SAYS- "BUT WE HAVE IT ON HAND AND IN GOOD CONDITION"
WHAT IS THERE IN HOLBEIN THAT'S MINE- THAT I WANT BACK IN AMERICA?
THAT COULD MEAN ONLY ONE THING- BUT HE IS SAFE HERE, ALIVE AND WELL-AND HE'LL BE BACK WHEN THE WAR'S OVER-
OUR WITS- HYAW! HYAW!
GOLLY, IT SOUNDED JUST LIKE A BUSINESS LETTER UNTIL WE GOT OUR WITS TO WORKING!

SUPERMAN — Think Fast, Clark! — BY JERRY SIEGEL AND JOE SHUSTER

LOIS!! B-BUT HOW DID YOU GET HERE....AND WHY DID YOU SHOVE THAT GUN IN MY BACK?
I GOT THE CHIEF'S PERMISSION TO COME TO HOLLYWOOD AND SEE HOW YOU WERE GETTING ALONG. THAT WAS A PROP GUN, YOU FOOL. I WAS ONLY TRYING TO STARTLE YOU.
YOU CERTAINLY SUCCEEDED- EVEN BETTER THAN YOU INTENDED. I- I'M TERRIBLY SORRY.
NEVER MIND THE APOLOGY. I HAD IT COMING TO ME.
WHAT I WANT TO KNOW IS WHEN I CAN COME ON THE "SUPERMAN" SET, AND WATCH YOU ACT. I'M SURE IT WOULD BE A PRICELESS EXPERIENCE.
(-NO!- SHE MUSTN'T SEE ME ON THE SET! IF LOIS SAW ME IN ACTION I'M SURE SHE'D CATCH ON TO THE TRUTH- THAT I REALLY AM SUPERMAN!)
I-ER-WHAT WAS THAT???
I ASKED YOU WHEN I COULD COME ON THE SET AND WATCH YOU GIVE OUT WITH A LITTLE HIGH-CLASS EMOTING.
OH-HH....SO THAT'S WHAT YOU SAID...!
(-SOMETHING.... I'VE GOT TO DO SOMETHING TO PREVENT HER FROM SEEING ME ON THE SET! BUT- WHAT?!)

There is much in common between Bob Burns, the modern "Arkansas Traveler," and the almost legendary figure who first bore the name.

Sanford C. Faulkner, generall accepted as the original "Traveler," was a soldier in the Civil War, a fine marksman, a great story-teller, a successful farmer and a talented musician.

Burns, who portrays "The Arkansas Traveler" in his CBS series, which you hear over WJSV every Tuesday night, was a gunnery sergeant in the first World War, winning the A. E. F. overseas medal as the best rifle marksman in the Army. Continuing the parallel with Faulkner, Bob has become one of the nation's favorite humorists and story-tellers, both on the screen and radio; he is one of the leading farmers in California's San Fernando Valley, and he can play well on several musical instruments, including, of course, the bazooka.

The original "Arkansas Traveler" won acclaim as a story-teller throughout the South in the days immediately before and after the Civil War. He traveled through the rural sections of Arkansas, Tennessee and Louisiana, gathering folk lore, folk music and information in general about the natives. His material formed the basis for many long and delightful evenings of yorn-spinning before groups of gentle-folk along the Mississippi River.

Without intentionally doing so, Burns has followed closely in Faulkner's footsteps. Except that Bob's yarn spinning, thanks to that new fangled thing called radio, is heard by a considerably larger audience.

Health Group Stresses Need For Hospitals

The pressure now being experienced by Washington's public and private hospitals under the city's steady population growth was detailed yesterday by a panel of public health authorities to the Health Division of the Council of Social Agencies.

Gallinger Hospital, through its superintendent, Dr. Edgar Bocock expressed its needs in three specific points and excluding the possibilities of war casualties.

1. A women's and children's building at Gallinger with capacity of 225 beds for adults and for children up to 12 years old, and for 130 newborn infants. This building would house all obstetrical cases. "The present existing accommodations for obstetrical patients are seriously overcrowded; the nurseries are dangerously inadequate," Dr. Bocock stated.

2. An additional building for tuberculosis patients with a capacity of 400 beds, also to be located at Gallinger. With a decrease in need for such beds, as is expected in the future, the building could be used for other types of patients, he stated. Over 100 tuberculosis patients "occupy frame shacks at Gallinger that should have long since been demolished," he said. "It is definitely felt that completely acceptable progress in tuberculosis control may not be expected until more adequate facilities for hospitalization are available. What can be gained by finding people infected with tuberculosis when no hospital bed is available in which to treat them?" Dr. Bocock asked.

3. A building having a capacity of 200 beds for the care of hospital patients suffering with chronic or prolonged illness. The city's facilities, at present are restricted to the infirmary at Blue Plains.

"These three new units totaling 425 general adult hospital beds and 400 beds for tuberculosis patients are pressingly required," said Dr. Bocock.

Dr. Herbert, board member, Health Security Administration, reported that hospitals are now functioning at capacity with scarcely a bed to be had. Dr. Ralph Beachley, health officer, Arlington County, reminded that 164,800 persons are in Alexandria, Fairfax and Arlington —that the Alexandria Hospital with 100 beds is the only one in that Virginia area.

"In my opinion the time has arrived for the voluntary hospitals to let political subdivisions fulfill their obligations to the indigent of the community by adding additional beds to Gallinger Hospital, by Prince Georges County, Md., Alexandria and Arlington County building new permanent hospitals with Government assistance if necessary to provide facilities for pay patients and their indigent, thus making available those beds in the voluntary hospitals of Washington to the new population who are certainly not medical indigents and who are in a position to pay a reasonable rate for their hospital care," O. K. Fike, director, Doctors Hospital, said:

Fike, who emphasized that he was speaking as a citizen and not for the hospital, said "such a program would give us approximately 4500 beds, not including beds available in the Navy Medical Center, Walter Reed and Mount Alto Hospitals, some of which are now used by our citizens. We will all concede," he said, "that a large percentage of our hospital facilities are old, obsolete and costly to operate and ultimately must be replaced with modern, up-to-date buildings and equipment."

Conceding a metropolitan population of 1,200,000, "we must be equipped to render 1,200,000 days of hospital care annually during the emergency. This job can be accomplished with 4000 beds operating on an 80 per cent occupancy basis," he said.

The meeting, held in the Y. W. C. A., was attended by about 300 council members. Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer, presided.

Nurses Urged To Help Guard Public Health

Graduate nurses meeting here yesterday were urged to carry simple health instructions to the public as best they can with the aim of preventing such epidemics as customarily accompany war times.

The nurses, members of the Graduate Nurses Association and the League of Nursing Education in thirty-eighth annual meeting at the Willard Hotel, were told by Dr. Daniel Seckinger, assistant health officer, District of Columbia Health Department, that programs of public education along health lines have reduced epidemics in wartime Britain, probably below even normal levels.

He called proper nutrition a main key to good health and threw out other hints as safeguards against colds and influenza, as follows:

Secure adequate sleep and rest; eat a moderate mixed diet and partake freely of water, six to eight glasses daily; avoid people with colds; keep out of crowds; avoid the use of common towels and eating utensile; avoid alcohol and stimulants of all sorts, and wear clothes to suit the environment.

The nurses, during the afternoon session, gave a practical demonstration on the care of communicable diseases in the home, showing, in effect, what advice a trained nurse would give a sick person.

The program today will include a Red Cross luncheon at noon and a session on communicable diseases, to begin at 2:30 p. m. and to be addressed by Dr. William A. Howard, of Children's Hospital, and Mrs. Mildred M. Pinner, an instructor at the same hospital.

Union Denies Bricklayers Were Fired in Richmond

Harry C. Bates, president of the A. F. L. Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers' International Union, said yestetrday it was "entirely untrue" that 40 bricklayers had been discharged from a Chesterfield County (Va.) Army construction project for "soldiering" on the job. He quoted P. Mitchell, chief of the labor relations branch of the Army Officeof Engineers, as reporting:

"An investigation by this office discloses that this article appeared . . . without first being confirmed by the officer in charge of construction and that 40 bricklayers were not discharged but resigned of their own accord.

"The freezing temperature of the last few days forced the contractor to lay off some of the bricklayers during certain hours of the day. Because of their inability to earn a full day's pay, 40 of these men left to seek jobs elsewhere."

Mrs. Prettyman To Head Defense In Silver Spring

Mrs. Charles W. Prettyman, of Four Corners, Md., was named chairman of a defense area yesterday for the Silver Spring Branch of the Montgomery County, Women's Division, Maryland Council of Defense by Mrs. Claude W. Mitchell, chairman of the Silver Spring section.

Th earea includes Burnt Mills Hills, Woodmoor, Northwood Park and Old Bladensburg Road. Miss Olive Kinsman, of Burnt Mills, was named public relations chairman for the area.

Several meetings will be held to get the organization functioning. A meeting of mothers will be held Friday at 2 p. m. in St. Michael's Catholic School, Wayne Avenue, Silver Spring, Md. A similar meeting will be held at the Parkside School, January 21 at 2 p. m., it was announced.

Stores With Lone Employe Urged to Lock Up in Blackout

Washington business firms, of the type which remain open at night and usually with only a woman or other lone attendant in charge, were being instructed by metropolitan police last night to lock all doors during test and regular blackouts.

A precautionary move against holdups, the instructions were being relayed particularly to ice cream stores, delicatessens, liquor stores and similar business firms.

Let Stove Pilot Light Burn If Air Raid Comes

District defense officials yesterday reiterated that Washingtonians should not cut off pilot lights on gas stoves during air raids, but merely turn off the gas as they would when leaving the house.

Citizens were reminded that all civilian defense rules are not uniform throughout the country and that rules printed in national magazines or supplements distributed nationally do not necessarily apply locally.

Burleith Citizens Pay For Protection

Burleith Citizens Association last night voted a $2 voluntary assessment on rescidents of the area to help pay expenses of maintaining an air-raid protection post.

Clement Murphy, chief air-raid warden, addressed the meeting held in Gordon Junior High School. He urged citizens to cooperate with deputy air raid wardens instead of arguing with them.

Murphy and Vincent Plumpton, deputy air-raid warden, conducted an open forum in which questions on civilian defense were asked.

Robert H. Engle, chairman of the association's defense committee, gave a talk telling of progress of emergency kitchen and first-aid activity.

MacDonald Reveals Recipe for Air Raids

As a recipe for courage during air raids, Malcolm MacDonald, high commissioner to Canada from Great Britain, yesterday quoted from the following letter which he said he received from an old Scottish lady:

"'When the air-raid warning sounds, I take the Bible from the shelf and read the Twenty-third Psalm where it says,

"'Though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil, for Thou are with me.'

"Then I put up a wee bit prayer.

"Then I take a wee drap o' whiskey to steady ma nerves.

"Then I get into bed and pull up the covers, and then I tell Hitler to go to hell."

Howard Park Defense Units Meet Tonight

Members of the Howard Park Civic Association will meet tonight at 8 p. m., at Banneker Junior High School.

The area si bounded by the north side of Florida Avenue, south side of Euclid Street, east side of Thirteenth Street and west side of Second Street Northwest.

All units of the Howard Park civilian defense setup are requested to meet with the association by the direction of the chairman of civilian defense.

Charles Barton, Federal Worker, To Retire Today

Charles C. Barton, assistant chief, Division of Publications, Department of Commerce, will retire today after 39 years of service with the Government in Washington.

Born in Butler, Ky., Barton entered the service of the Government Printing Office as a compositor in 1893. Before entering Government service he was actively identified with the printing and publishing industry and served as editor and manager of the Ludlow News, Ludlow, Ky., for several years.

Barton transferred to the Department of Commerce and Labor as a proofreader in 1910 and remained with the Commerce Department when the Department of Labor was established in 1913. He was promoted to assistant chief of the Division of Publications in June, 1918, and has served in that position since. Barton lives at 1621 T Street Northwest.

Child Becomes Prisoner in Home Through Accident

Debra Schiller, 18-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Schiller, spent a fearful few minutes late yesterday while she was locked up alone in her parents' apartment at 5100 Second Street Northeast.

The little girl was accidentally shoved into the apartment by her 5-year-old niece, Jacquelyn Schiller, the former's mother said last night, and the door locked, automatically from the inside.

Mrs. Schiller had left the two children at the apartment door while she went downstairs to get her infant son, Harvey. On returning, Mrs. Schiller found herself unable to open the door and immediately went to a neighboring apartment and called the rescue squad.

A neighbor managed to pry open the lock on the door just as the squad arrived. Debra was a bit hysterical fro mher experience, but otherwise unharmed, her mother said.

STORE UP IRON for YOUR BLOOD

Get Vitamin B for your Nerves

When the body craves these vital elements, a rich supply will put color in your cheeks, enrich your blood, benefit your glands and other organs WITHOUT ALCOHOL OR HABIT-FORMING DRUGS.

When your system is low in iron and vitamin B, all your organs slow down—you look bad, get tired easily, and feel played out. Iron makes red blood and red blood is vital for healthy muscles, healthy skin, healthy glands and healthy organs. Iron-poor blood may cause low vitality, heart palpitations, shortness of breath, swollen ankles and frequent periods of ill health.

Your nerves need vitamin B and so do your stomach and bowels: if you don't have enough Vitamin B you may get a painful neuritis, stomach upsets, constipation, weak appetite, mental depression, restless sleep and you can suffer in other ways.

In these conditions, you need ENRICH, the thrilling new tonic that tastes like juice of wild cherries and gives you more iron every day than a bushel of spinach or boxes of raisins; more vitamin B daily than 8 ordinary cakes of yeast. Your pep comes back with a bounce when you restore missing iron and Vitamin B, and you eat more, stop worrying, and sleep better. Thousands of men and women feel keen and lead happier lives through the help of ENRICH. Don't wait.

One bottle, $1.79; full course treatment, large size, $3.10. Money refunded unless ENRICH improves your state of well being.

Make no mistake—this is a life or death struggle. Men are dying in your defense. Dying that America may be safe!

Give our fighting men the guns, the planes, the tanks they need! Bonds buy bombs. Every dime, every dollar you put into Defense Bonds and Stamps is a blow at the enemy. Hit them where it hurts—buy bonds! Bonds cost as little as $18.75 up—stamps as little as 10 cents up.

First Day Yields 500 Volumes In 'Books-for-Buddies' Drive

About 500 books had been contributed yesterday in the first day of the "Books for Buddies" campaign to get reading matter for men in the armed services.

Among them was one from President Roosevelt, "Whither Bound," a lecture he delivered at the Milton Academy, near Boston, and one from Mrs. Roosevelt, "This Is My Story," written by herself.

Although they hadn't been asked for, about 85 phonograph recordings also were contributed, among them some warm jazz tunes. Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith, District committee chairman for the campaign, was surprised and pleased with the recordings donation and said she was considering urging the New York office to take up the idea on a national scale.

The District goal for books is 100,000. Books of every subject matter are wanted—"fiction, with emphasis on adventure; well-written, up-to-date novels, mystery stories, humor and historical novels, recent technical books, especially on aviation and radio; current affairs, government; history and biography, poems, plays and essays, and timely reference works."

Books should be brought to the library of George Washington University or any of these public libraries:

Central building, Eighth and K Streets Northwest; Georgetown, Wisconsin Avenue and R Street; Mount Pleasant, Sixteenth and Lamont Streets; Northeastern, Seventh Street and Maryland Avenue; Petworth, Georgia Avenue and Upshur Street; Southeastern, Seventh and D Streets; Southwestern, Seventh and H Streets.

Takoma Park, Fifth and Cedar Streets; Chevy Chase, 3815 Livingston Street; Conduit Road, 4954 Conduit Road Northwest; Tenley, 4539 Wisconsin Avenue; Woodridge, 2206 Rhode Island Avenue Northeast; Eastern High School, Eighteenth and East Capitol Streets.

Whisky Industry Offers Facilities

In order to relieve the potential sugar shortage, the beverage whisky business has volunteered its complete facilities to the Office of Production Management.

The whisky industry yesterday submitted a proposition to the OPM for the use of its facilities not only in production of alcohol, but in the production of raw material for alcohol. If accepted, it was stated, this offer would make unnecessary the conversion of a portion of the sugar crop, recently purchased by the Defense Supply Corporation, into high-test molasses for alcohol as was heretofore contemplated. Instead it would leave all of that sugar crop available as sugar for domestic and lend-lease purposes.

Montgomery Reelects Red Cross Officers

All officers of the Montgomery County Chapter of the American Red Cross have been nominated for reelection.

The election will be held January 26 at the Bethesda Recreation Center. Officers renominated are Judge Charles M. Irelan, chairman; Mrs. Granville Gude, vice chairman; Mrs. Austin Lamar, secretary, and Mrs. C. H. Godbold, treasurer.
